CHURCHILL SEES EMPIRE RUIN IN CIVIL WAR WITH ULSTER

irst Lord of the Admiralty Admits Seriousness of the Situation--Defence Claimed Quite Inadequate

London, May 13.—Serious minded en in both of the great political arties are constantly conscious of he grave menace to the Imperial abric and to the world at large hich lies in the Irish impasse. In he House of Commons the other day Ir. Winston Churchill dwelt for a w moments upon this aspect of the tuation. The thought present in his ind seemed to be that the outbreak civil war might be taken advan- ge of by an enemy or group of nemies to overreach the Empire at ome or abroad. The First Lord of e Admiralty went so far as to in- mate that this domestic feud might sult in the ruin of Great Britain nd in the disruption of the King's ominions. For one thing it is clear at but for the concentration of Par- ament upon the Home Rule tangle rong pressure would have to be rought to bear upon the Govern- ent for greater additions to the avy.

Moderate men, who are non-parti- n in their outlook, regard recent d projected additions to the first ne of Imperial defence as dangerous- inadequate. The contemptible re- al of the Laurier Opposition in the nate to vote the three Canadian readnoughts provided in Mr. Bor- n's programme left a serious shor- ge in the number of battleships. he breach is only partly filled by e acceleration of British vessels an- unced by the Admiralty. But for e Ulster deadlock, the Government ould probably have been forced by blic opinion and consideration of tional safety to lay down three tra ships to make good Canada's sgraceful default. The people here not taunt one with the shabby nduct of the Ottawa Senators, but y Canadian with a spark of man- od about him feels keenly over the ct that his country instead of pull- g its own weight in the Empire, ll allows its share of the burden fall on the British taxpayer. The shot is that in the eyes of the un- sed students of the international ation, Imperial naval construction not keeping pace with the building warships abroad.

CHARGED WITH THEFT FROM POLICWOMAN

Annie Gilkenson is Said to Have Stolen a Chatelaine Purse

Toronto, May 13.—Annie Gilkenson was charged by the Grand Jury in the sessions with the unusual feat of having stolen a chatelaine bag from Miss Minty, the policewoman, also of relieving Mrs. Mary Sullivan of a similar piece of property.

True bills were also returned against A. O. Boomer, charged with the theft of notes from J. McZuber, and against H. I. Green, charged with conducting a lottery during the month of April last.

REDUCED INCOME TAX IN ENGLAND

London, May 13.—In the House of Commons yesterday afternoon the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced rebates in the income taxes on unearned incomes of four pence in the pound on incomes under £1[illegible] and of two pence in the pound on incomes under £500.

These reductions are designed to meet the cases of widows and other dependents who are living upon moneys left by a deceased husband or father, and materially remove the objections put forward by that class of people.

LYNCHED FOR LOOTING GEORGIAN SHOE STORE

Grovetown, Ga., May 13.—Charley Jones, a negro, was taken from two officers near here late last night by a number of white men and lynched. It is said that Jones was suspected of having stolen some shoes from a local merchant. This morning the body, riddled with bullets, was found in the public road.

PROPERTIES AT COR. PARK AND CHARLOTTE ON STREET LINE

Board of Works in Regular Session--The Barries Limited Granted Permission to Construct Goods Elevator in the Sidewalk on George Street--Grading West Ward School Grounds

The City's Board of Works met in regular session last evening. There were in attendance Chairman Ald. Duncan, Mayor Buller, Aldermen Stratton, Anderson, Johnston, Green, McIntyre, Duffus, Saunders and City Engineer Parsons.

The Board of Education asked for use of the grader to level off the West Ward School grounds. This request was granted.

W. H. Moore asked for London street, east of Reid, to be sprinkled. Nothing will be done in this connection this year, as the contracts for street watering have already been let.

Properties on Street Line.

The Charlotte street sidewalk, south side, at the west corner of Park, will be moved back seven feet toward Mr. Brown's property line, to straighten the street as much as possible at this point. This work will cost $160 and is particularly necessary to facilitate street car traffic to the boundary. Those conversant with this locality will know that at the corner of Park and Charlotte streets there is an ugly bend in the road and a survey by Government surveyor F. W. Wilkins reveals the fact that both Mr. Brown's property south of Charlotte street and Mr. Medd's property on the north side are fenced in on the street line. In fact the original road would run through Mr. Medd's verandah and through a flower bed on Mrs. Fitzgerald's property. On motion of the Mayor and Alderman Green, the Chairman and City Engineer will interview the parties whose properties are encroaching on the street line, and report back to the Board. It has been suggested that the removal of the fences in question be insisted on, and the citizens interested pay a nominal rent for that portion of their properties situated on the street line, to protect the city's rights.

Barrie's Sidewalk Elevator.

The question of granting Mr. Thos. Barrie permission to construct a goods elevator in the sidewalk fronting his proposed new factory on George street next the Customs House again came up for discussion. Ald. Stratton while not objecting to Mr. Barrie's personal request, objected to establishing a precedent for such sidewalk elevators. If this request is granted, he urged, any other merchant on George street would be entitled to like privilege. However, he would waive his objection if Council defined a general policy permitting such sidewalk elevators on George street.

It was pointed out that in Mr. Barrie's case there is no other way of getting goods into his new premises. Ald. Stratton, however, suggested that goods could be taken in via a chute in the face of the building as in some cases in Toronto.

Mr. Barrie, who was present, answered that such a scheme would be impracticable owing to the show windows. He has no other means in sight of getting goods into his proposed new premises, but via a sidewalk elevator, having no rear entrance. Could he negotiate for a rear entrance, which he is trying to do, he would not need the elevator asked for.

Ald. Anderson is opposed to sidewalk elevators, as also is the City Engineer.

Ald. Green said he regretted very much that he voted against the engineer's recommendation that no action be taken on the Turnbull Co's request for a similar elevator in the sidewalk on Simcoe street, as he is informed that they could take goods in at the rear of the building.

Ald. Green and Johnston moved that The Barrie's Limited be allowed to construct an elevator in the sidewalk in view of the fact that they will engage in a large manufacturing business. It is to be distinctly understood that this resolution will not establish a precedent in regard to general mercantile houses.—Carried.

It is distinctly understood that Mr. Barrie will make every effort to secure other means for getting his goods in and eliminate the sidewalk proposition.

Mr. Barrie was also given permission to construct a coal chute in the sidewalk.

Ald. Stratton and Duffus moved that the Board recommend that Council allow no more openings in the sidewalk on George street for taking in goods as the City Engineer has reported against it.

On the ground that such a resolution would not bind a future Council the resolution was subsequently withdrawn.

Street Paving.

A largely signed petition for street pavement on Hunter street to Belmont Avenue was left in abeyance temporarily.

Street Grading.

On request of Ald. Saunders some grading will be done on Romaine street.

On request of Ald. McIntyre, Rogers street, between Mark and Douro will be graded.

On request of Ald. Duffus, Bethune street, between Hunter and Simcoe will be given similar treatment.

On suggestion of Ald. Green a load of gravel will be laid in a hole near the north east entrance to the Nicholl's Oval.

Dump Carts.

By request of Mayor Ald. Duncan will arrange for placing about four dump carts on the roads for repair and maintenance purposes.

BOTH MEXICAN FACTIONS OPPOSE MEDIATORS' PLAN

Washington, May 13.—The report of yesterday that the South American envoys tentatively were considering a plan for possible establishment of a form of Government to include two administrators to be named by the Federals, two by the Constitutionalists and a fifth by the mediators, attracted some attention this morning and immediately drew from Carranza's agents the declaration that any such proposal would not be acceptable to their chief. One reported detail contemplated the elimination of Huerta.

Whether such a programme would be submitted to the Huerta and the United States missions when they meet with the South American envoys next Monday at Niagara Falls, Canada, was indefinite to-day. It was understood that the mediators had withdrawn their invitation to the Constitutionalists to send delegates to the conference, yet they were seeking to learn whether Carranza would agree, in case of Huerta's elimination, to some form of temporary government in which the Provisional President's representatives or successors would have a voice. Neither Secretary Bryan or the mediators would comment on that to-day.

However, Carranza's agents were emphatic in their declaration from El Paso that the Constitutionalists would agree to nothing short of the elimination of Huerta and of his entire party. Roberto Pesqueira, Carranza's confidential representative, asserted: "We have beaten Huerta at every turn, and why should we yield our advantage when we have the reforms for which we strive almost within our grasp? This has been a fight of one hundred years for reform, and we will not be content to have those years of fighting wasted."

Other Constitutionalists asserted there was no basis on which Huertaists and Rebels could co-operate in a provisional government.

TRADING STAMPS IN VIOLATION OF LAW

United Cigar Stores, Ltd., Fined Fifty Dollars and Costs

Toronto, May 13.—United Cigar Stores, Limited, was fined $50 and costs by Judge Coatsworth, in the Sessions to-day, for issuing trading stamps in a manner contrary to the code. The case was tried a week ago, when it was shown that the company issued stamps at each of its several stores, to be redeemed at the head office, whereas the code distinctly states that all such stamps must be redeemable at the place where issued.

The company also pleaded guilty of conducting a lottery by giving away numbered tickets, the holder of the "lucky" number receiving a prize. Sentence was suspended in this case.

NATIONAL COWBOY ORDER

Fraternal Society Organized to Preserve Traditions.

Cheyenne, Wyo., May 13.— The National Order of Cowboy Rangers is the title of a new fraternal society launched by A. U. Mayfield of Denver, Herman Knabe of Medicine Bow and others.

Articles of incorporation will be filed in Wyoming.

The promoters of the order declare it is their intention to perpetuate the old spirit of the West.

Mayfield will be the first "supreme boss" and Knabe "supreme recorder of brands. He says Theodore Roosevelt is interested in the plan for organizing the new society.

BAD FLOODS NEAR CHATHAM; FARMERS TAKE TO BOATS

Steady Downpour Have Covered Large Areas With Water --Live Stock in Danger

Chatham, Ont., May 13.—Scores of farms in the low lying sections of Kent County, and particularly those on the Raleigh Plains are inundated as a result of the heavy downpour of the past few days, and great damage has already been done the crops that have been planted.

It is not uncommon to see houses and barns completely surrounded with water and the farmer using a boat.

It was necessary to move the stock to the high lands and had this not been done the loss would have been heavy through drowning.

It is usual for floods to occur in the spring of the year because of ice jams in the river. This was averted by an ice-breaker this spring, but the work accomplished by man then has been undone by nature now.

Every stream and creek in the entire county is filled to overflowing.

Rain fell steadily for over two days but it ceased early this morning.

Bridges have been washed away, and traffic on the Erie Beach division of the Electrical Railway is tied up through the subway at Chatham Cross being filled with water.

Aunt Sally's Advice To Beauty Seekers

Lydia says: "I've tried most everything for my freckles, but can't lose them. What do you suggest?" See answer to "Stella." The treatment suggested I've never known to fail in any case of freckles or other cutaneous blemish.

P.J.K., asks: "Is there anything better than massage to remove wrinkles?" Too much massaging may aggravate a wrinkled condition, tending to soften and loosen the tissue. I advise bathing the face in an astringent lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This is remarkably effective.

Stella writes: "My complexion is horribly muddy. What shall I do for it?" Get an ounce of mercolized wax at your druggist's. Apply this nightly like you'd use cold cream, washing it off mornings. This will cause the offensive cuticle gradually to flake away, by a process of gentle absorption, for the clear, velvety healthy-hued skin underneath. —Woman's Realm.

DOMINION BILL TO ASSIST FARMERS MOST MATERIALLY

Hon. Mr. Meighen Introduces Legislation for Co-operative Societies

Ottawa, May 13.—An exceedingly important progressive measure, particularly to rural Canada, was introduced in the House this morning by Hon. Arthur Meighen. The bill is to permit the establishment of a co-operative credit societies. He explained that it was practically the same bill as was introduced last session and provides uniform machinery throughout the Dominion, enabling the incorporation of co-operative societies and the enrolling of members for mutual advantage. Mr. Meighen added that the bill did not differ essentially from that which was introduced in 1907. He hoped to see it passed this session.

Hon. W. T. White, laid on the table of the House a list of depositors in the Farmers Bank, asked for by Mr. A. K. MacLean.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux asked for a list of depositors in the three Quebec Province banks, the Banque Du Peuple, St. Jean Bank and Ville Marie Bank, which have failed in recent years. Mr. White said he would supply the list if it was possible to do so.

Hon. J. D. Hazen introduced the bill providing for a loan of nine million dollars to the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal, and of two millions to the Quebec Harbour Commissioners for a period of twenty-five years, payable at 3½ per cent.

Toronto, May 13.—Hon. Mr. Hearst acting Attorney-General in the absence of Hon Mr. Foy, stated this afternoon that the report of the Ontario Railway Board in regard to the Ontario and West Shore Railway investigation, had not yet reached the Department. As to the question of criminal proceedings being instituted against Mr. J.W. Moyes, Mr. Hearst and the Deputy Attorney General, Mr. Cartwright, stated that it would devolve upon the Crown Attorneys in the various municipalities interested to make representations to the Department before such action would be taken.

STRIKERS BLAMED FOR WANTON DESTRUCTION

Toronto, May 13.—The strike at the Dominion cloak Company, Wellington and Bathurst streets, is daily assuming a more serious phrase. Following the attacks made upon a private detective employed by the firm to look after the workers, an entry was made into the factory last night and more than four thousand dollars damage done by the intruders, who destroyed a large number of garments. The discovery was made early to-day by the care taker.

Noticing a window open apen on the first floor at the South side of the building he made an investigation and found that while he had been making his round on the other side of the factory, somebody had entered the premises. Strewn over the floor on the tables were hundreds of garments which had been ripped by a sharp instrument. Raincoats with sleeves cut off torn silk dresses and other damaged garments were thrown about in the workrooms.

The police were notified and acting Detective McConnell has been assigned on the case.

"We can suspect no one but the workers or a hired gang as having done this," said the Manager.

The strike has been in progress for more than three months. It was the outcome of several of the old employes being dismissed on account of work becoming slack.

The factory is being watched by a special constable. A dozen pickets from the Union patrol around the factory all day long. Special private detectives have been engaged by the to escort the workers to their homes Taxicabs daily convey the men to and from their work.

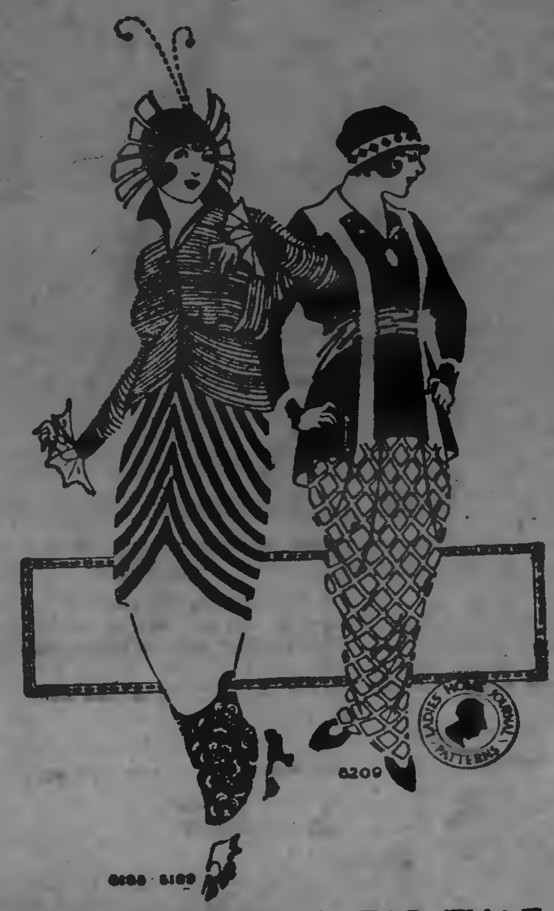
MUNICIPAL FORMS ALWAYS IN STOCK



A MOST ECONOMICAL FAD THAT OF COMBINING CONTRASTING MATERIALS

It is attractive and pleasing to combine a figured material with a plain fabric and vice versa in a gown or suit. Several gowns shown at a recent opening were pleasing examples of the richness and harmony of this innovation. Brocades and figured silks were combined with plain materials in a color that harmonized with or cleverly repeated the predominating color of the figured material.

In No. 8209 ripple silk in lozenge squares is happily combined with a plain charmeuse in the same shade. It brings out to advantage the grace of the shoulder and smartly cut collar. A band of material over each shoulder is the only trimming aside from the material.

Ripple silk is wide and may be purchased from about $1.50 a yard and up.

To copy this frock in size 36 it requires 6⅛ yards of 39 inch material.

No. 8198-8199 is a costume that also displays the effectiveness of contrasting materials. The coat is of faille silk, and the skirt is of faille with a broad striped tunic. The skirt has a slightly raised waist-line, and the kimono coat shows a full length sleeve.

This costume requires for size 36 2⅝ yards of 36 inch material for the coat (8198) and 3⅞ yards of 36 inch material for the skirt (8199).

No. 8209—sizes 34 to 42.
No. 8198—sizes 34 to 42.
No. 8199—sizes 22 to 32.
Each pattern 15 cents.

RAISING GEESE

A Profitable Side-line on the Farm—Pointers on Management

The breeding and raising of geese calls for altogether different treatment from the breeding and raising of ducks, the necessary conditions being very dissimilar. While the ducks will do very well when closely confined in yards and fed such green food as we have, geese will not thrive if kept in this manner. The breeding birds need a large, practically free, green range, and if well watered, either by pools or streams, the breeding results will be much more satisfactory than if the runs are unwatered.

Breeding geese require very little grain food. Through the winter they should be fed largely on vegetable foods. Cabbage, turnips, beets, cut clover, and other vegetable matter may be fed freely, together with a good quality of bran and oats. Corn and meal will prove rather too fattening, and should be fed sparingly even in the coldest of weather.

Very little shelter is required. A rough shed, free from extreme draughts, is all that is absolutely necessary. It should be littered with some dry material, and cleanliness will add much to the health and worth of the birds.

Old geese do not lay as many eggs as young ones, but they hatch good, vigorous birds. To the amateur it would be well to say, if your young geese (females) are but one year old, do not expect too many goslings, as you will do well to raise any from one-year-old females. Many a would-be geese raiser has given up the business because he did not know this.

The birds generally mate in February, and at this time such birds as are to be mated together should be shut apart from the others.

There is some question as to which is the best breed for general purposes. The three breeds which have the strongest following are the Toulouse, African and Embden. Each has its special virtues. The Toulouse is the largest of the three and produces a very strong and quick-growing gosling. The goslings require very little attention, except for the first day or two when they should be kept dry and warm.

A green run is really one of the necessary aids in the proper growth of young goslings. A little grain can be fed, say three times a day. This, with an abundant supply of green food, will cause them to grow and yield a profit to the producer.

Let them have free access to grit and oyster shell. They should be ready to kill when the first flight feathers are grown, and should be full fed at that time with corn, oatmeal and animal food.

Largest Dam in World

New Mexico is to have the greatest dam in the world, when the $8,000,000 government construction at Elephant Butte is done. It will need 15 years' rains to fill and will then hold 800 billion gallons, or twice the capacity of the Assouan dam.

WATERING THE STOCK

Four Rules That It Will Pay to Know and Observe

An unlimited supply of good pure water is essential to the health of all animals used for farm purposes. Pools formed from surface drainage where large quantities of organic matter are carried into them, and wells or pools contiguous to farmyards or manure heaps are especially to be avoided. Water from good tanks or wells, running streams, and properly-constructed pools is usually good, but too much care cannot be taken in reference to this matter. The quantity of water is also of importance. No animal will drink too much if watered sufficiently often, hence there is no necessity for limiting the supply except when the animal has been deprived of water for too long a time. Animals at rest should be given water at least three times a day in summer, and twice a day in winter, if they cannot have free access to it at all times. There is a common error that horses should not be watered when warm. An animal is never too warm to be watered if not more than two gallons be given. A large quantity of water will injure an animal at any time, but especially is this so when he is very warm or much fatigued.

The watering of animals immediately after feeding, so frequently practised, is not in harmony with the physiology of digestion. The stomach of a horse is very small in proportion to his size and the quantity of food he consumes, hence only a small amount of water can remain in the stomach, and if given immediately after feeding undigested food must of necessity be carried with it in its passage through the stomach into the intestines. Another reason why animals should not be watered immediately after feeding is that the digestion begins only when the food has been warmed to a temperature of about 90 degrees; therefore if a large quantity of cold water be mixed with the food the temperature of the contents of the stomach must be lowered and consequently digestion must be retarded.

Drink Buttermilk

Buttermilk is one of the best of drinks. It should not be taken too cold nor too fast.

As much care ought to be observed in buying buttermilk as in buying sweet milk, as there is just as much likelihood of impurity and dirt.

It is a fat producer. It has all the advantages of sweet milk except that it is more easily digested.

Mustard in Sandwiches

In making a large number of ham or other sandwiches requiring mustard for seasoning, cream the butter and mix the mustard with it. The flavor will be more even, and less time will be consumed in seasoning the sandwiches.

TALKING TO BABY

Words Should be Properly Pronounced When Child is Four

Is "baby talk" bad for babies, and are fond parents who indulge in it when dandling their latest born in their arms committing themselves to a harmful as well as foolish habit?

"Baby talk" has existed ever since there were babies and is the result of two distinct things. First, articulation never reaches full development until the age of five or six, and that causes distortion of words, such as "ickle" for "little," and "sing" for "thing." Secondly, the baby mind receives an impression of the character of a thing by what it does, and so describes a train, for example, as a "puff-puff" or "toot-toot."

It naturally follows that a baby when very young more easily comprehends "baby" talk than it would plain English terms.

At a kindergarten babies are taught to speak English properly by encouraging them to imitate the teacher, and parents would certainly help in the education of their little ones if they dropped "baby talk" after a certain period—at about four years of age.

An authority on the education of very young children stoutly defends talking "baby talk" to babies up to a certain period, which she places at four years of age. "After that," she says, "I think it would be distinctly harmful to the baby and foolish in the parent.

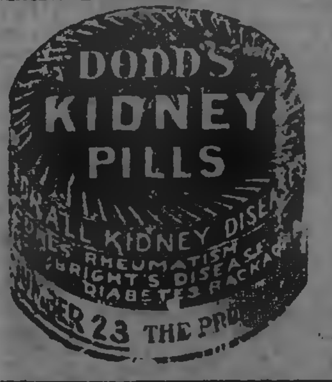
"Banish 'baby talk'!" she exclaimed. "Never! We should have dumb babies if that could be accomplished. It is very, very often the baby's aid to speech when the mother talks 'baby talk' to it, and it is all very charming and sweet."

Advantage of Weak Whiskey

At Kirkcaldy James Anderson, grocer, was fined $40 for having sold a bottle of whiskey adulterated with water. Mr. Thomson, on behalf of the accused, said he got in a quantity of whiskey which he believed to be considerably over proof, and added water without testing. Mr. Thomson thought it was possibly to the advantage of those who got it, as it would do less harm.

6,800 Pounds of Projectiles

The new Australian battle cruiser Australia, firing with one pair of 12-inch guns, recently made eight successive hits in less than three minutes. Each projectile weighed 850 pounds. The guns were laid and fired by gunners loaned from the Home Fleet for temporary service with the Australian naval forces.



KELLY-SPRINGFIELD TIRES

AN UP-TO-DATE NURSERY RHYME.

There was a man in our town,
And he was wondrous wise.
He bought a second-hand old car,
With inferior supplies.
He then acquired some cheap skate tires,
They claimed them good, though cheap;
What happened to that poor old slob
Would make an angel weep.
He started on a tour one day
With the manners of a prince.
His tires blew higher than a kite,
He's ne'er been heard of since.

DODGING WASPS

Those Acquainted With Them do Not Run But Throw Themselves Flat

A man on his first trip into the wilds and marshes of an unknown country with a party of engineers was struck by a unique method they have to escape from the attack of wasps and hornets. The country traversed is generally covered with thick undergrowth, and a path has to be cut through this all along the line. So when a big wasp nest is reached there is very little warning, sometimes the axmen cutting into a big one with their machetes.

The person relating this experience was some sixty feet behind the axmen with the instrument, when all at once the two axmen dropped in their tracks as if they had been struck by a thunderbolt. The man behind and the two chainmen did likewise. While they were lying prone on the grass and wet marsh, they heard what sounded like bullets singing over their heads. One after the other they came with angry zips. When things had quieted down a bit, work was continued, and the new man found that to escape from wasps or hornets the thing to do was to drop instanter. The insects seem to be so mad that they fly in straight lines along a level, and do not have time to hunt around for you.

It is said that hornets are not so prone to follow this rule as wasps; but the wasps never vary. Men have been stung to death by hornets, and horses and mules likewise.

OUR POINT OF VIEW

Thomas A. Edison says he employs no one who smokes cigarettes. Ottawa society ladies should worry.

The summer exodus to Europe has begun. One steamer which left New York last Saturday carried more than 2,000 passengers.

Parliament will pass legislation to prevent Indians from taking part in dances away from their own reserves. At future Indian balls the visitors will all be "wall flowers."

English spiritualists claim they are still receiving messages from the late W. T. Stead. So far Mr. Stead's reputation for turning out "copy", has stood the test of time.

Hon. Frank Oliver says the difference between the Indian and the white man is that the Indian is naturally a gentleman. Since the Indians don't vote, they are to be congratulated extra warmly over this compliment.

No Coercion

There was hard, practical sense and statesmanship in the address by Hon. A. E. Kemp at the Queen's Park demonstration. What he said in substance was that only by mutual agreement between North and South can Home Rule for Ireland be successfully established. If the Nationalists and the leaders of Ulster cannot unite to create a separate Legislature, only resistance, disorder and rebellion can come from any attempt to impose a common legislative body upon either section by outside authority.

The News thinks that the bill now before the Imperial Parliament is the product of simple, deliberate, brutal coercion. Ulster was not consulted over the details of the measure. No adequate discussion of its provisions in Parliament was permitted. Its terms were dictated by the age-long opponents of Ulster. It was forced through Parliament as an enactment hostile to Ulster in the spirit and in object. It represents a secret compact between the Nationalists and Liberal Ministers in which sacrifice of Ulster was the price paid to keep the Government in office.

The protests of Ulster have been treated with unctuous indifference and arrogant contempt. Ulstermen have been described as stage heroes, cheap pretenders, boasters in word, cowards and bullies at heart. When the Bill finally passes it will be hailed as a triumph over Ulster. There will be savage rejoicing among Nationalists. In this way we are told by Canadian Liberal newspapers peace is to come to Ireland. In this way North and South are to unite for a jubilee in honor of Asquith and Redmond. Looking at these facts and circumstances the full significance of Mr. Kemp's argument appears. What he has said should be regarded by British statesmen before Ireland is drenched in blood and the Empire is brought to the verge of disruption.

If we had carried on the negotiations for Confederation in flagrant contempt of the feelings of Quebec, if Sir John Macdonald and Sir A. T. Galt had made a bargain to impose a Constitution upon the French Province to which its whole people were opposed, if Sir George Cartier's representations had been treated with arrogant indifference, could the union of the Canadian Provinces ever have been accomplished? On the other hand, if only Cartier, had been consulted, and Galt, as the leader of the Protestant minority, shut out of the negotiations, could Confederation have been established? Will Ulster ever accept a political system devised in consultation with Mr. John Redmond, and settled behind the backs of Sir Edward Carson and his associates? It is not in that way that British institutions are created and developed. Against such tyranny force is the legitimate weapon of freemen the world over. Against the brutal power of a hostile Parliamentary majority, mangling the Constitution under which Ulstermen have lived for generations, robbing them of their equal citizenship in the Empire, crushing them under the feet of a hostile majority, they will fight and they will be right.

Joint and Muscle Pains Banished by Nerviline

IT CURES RHEUMATISM.

Thousands of people, chuck full of the joy of living—happy, glad, bright people, that Nerviline has cured of their pains, all tell the same wonderful story of its power to drive out the aches and tortures of rheumatism and kindred ills.

"My goodness, but Nerviline is a miracle-worker," writes Mrs. Charlotte Chipman, mother of a well-known family residing at Mount Pleasant. "Last month I was so crippled up with sciatica and muscular rheumatism as to be almost unable to do a bit of housework. My joints were so stiff and the muscles so frightfully sore that I even cried at times with the pain. For years we have used Nerviline in our family and I just got busy with this wonderful good old liniment. Lots of rubbing with Nerviline soon relieved my misery and I was in a real short time about my work as usual."

No matter where the ache is, no matter how distressing the pain you can rub it away with Nerviline. For forty years it has been curing lumbago, sciatica, back-ache, colds, chest trouble and all sorts of winter ills. Keep a large 50c. family size bottle handy and you'll be saved lots of trouble and have smaller doctor bills. Small trial size 25c. at dealers everywhere.

CHAMPION WALKER AND HIS METHODS

English "Ped" With Marvellous Record Tells Some of the Rules He Follows

The wonderful pedestrian powers of Mr. T. E. Hammond, hon. secretary of the Surrey Walking Club and a member of the Stock Exchange Club, are well known in England, but perhaps not generally known in Canada. He it was who, a few years ago, set up fresh figures for a twenty-four hours' walk, reaching 131 miles 580 yards in the allowed time, while he is also the holder of the London to Brighton and back record and the London to Oxford record. While making his 24-hours' walk Mr. Hammond lost nine pounds in weight.

Some people may have the idea that it is necessary to lead a Spartan life in order to become a champion walker. Mr. Hammond confesses, however, that he is neither a teetotaller nor a non-smoker, but he is always most abstemious, and, as regards smoking, he seldom departs from the pipe, which he fills, say, three or four times a day only.

In training for a walking race, Mr. Hammond does not recommend walking long distances at a slow rate, as they make one lose speed. When a novice has acquired a good style of walking—and this is most important as bad faults are more easily acquired than eradicated—he should commence walking in order to obtain speed. A good plan is to begin with a quarter of a mile at top speed. "As soon as he can accomplish this in anything under two minutes," says Mr. Hammond, he may gradually increase the distance from day to day, but must be particularly careful not to continue long distances if the watch indicate that he is at all affected in his speed.

Putting the Feet Down

Referring to style in walking, the champion says that fair walking generally called "toe and heel," as one foot should always be on the ground. The steps are taken as much as possible from heel to heel, which part of the foot must touch the ground first and be firmly dug into it. The ball and toe of the foot should not be on the ground for any perceptible space of time. If they are dwelt on the walker loses a certain amount of time in each stride, besides causing the knee to bend by bringing the weight of the body on the toes, which are unable to bear it.

"At each stride the loin and hips corresponding to the leg which is put forward should be twisted well round, the right loin and hip towards the left, and the left loin and hip towards the right. By this means the walker is enabled to put his feet down in a geometrical straight line, one in front of the other, and thereby gains additional length of stride.

"As regards the upper part of the body, the arms must be kept well up and inclined outwards from the chest, with the elbows slightly bent; since in fast walking the arms perform almost as important functions as the legs.

Watch the Arms

Each arm must be swung across the chest and the shoulders well lifted at the same time, in unison with each alternate stride. The object of this motion is to raise the weight of the body off the heels, and thereby enable the legs to take a quicker stride. Some walkers keep the arms close to the body, move them much less, and more towards the nostrils. This method, however, is only suitable to men very slightly built about the chest and trunk.

"They can walk with a very quick and rapid stride, being enabled to move their legs much faster from having no weight to carry. Above all things, the shoulders must be kept well back, the chest out, the whole body as upright as possible, and the knees quite straight. Nothing tends so much to 'lifting' as stooping forward with the body or bending the knees."

V.C. as a Striker

Included in Blackburn's 400 municipal strikers were over 100 Army reservists. One of the number, James Pitts, was awarded the Victoria Cross for his gallantry in an exposed position at Caesar's Camp during the siege of Ladysmith.

CANADA'S PROGRESS

Lord Strathcona Predicts Era of Tremendous Expansion

"Looking back on Canada as it was seventy-five years ago," said Lord Strathcona recently, "the change is indeed, amazing. Canada was then comparatively a wilderness, with a population of barely a million or so of people, and now she has eight or nine millions. And this is nothing to what it will be in another three quarters of a century, when it will unquestionably have a population equal to or greater than that of the United Kingdom."

"Little more than forty years ago," Lord Strathcona added, "the great territory of Rupert's Land, then possessed by the Hudson Bay Company did not produce enough breadstuff for the use of the 200 or 300 white people who then resided at the company's posts, and out of that vast territory have been carved the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta—which produces annually 200,000,000 bushels of wheat—the city of Winnipeg, then non-existent, with a population of about 200,000, and several other cities with populations ranging from 30,000 to 130,000, the latter being that of the city of Vancouver to-day."

PUBLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

TWO VALID REASONS.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir.—No man who has had experience on public bodies will agree with Mr. Peck and Mr. Gordon for two reasons: In the first place the interests of clients are interfered with by every law that is passed and by every bill that is brought up in committee, and it often happens also that bills are wanted that should not go through. If this is so, (and it is so), how can a man acting for companies and corporations possibly give his impartial services to the public interest? He cannot do it, and that is why there are so many bad laws. I hold moreover that no man with a proper realization of his duty to the whole people will do it. I have often heard members of parliament and officials of parliament say the same thing. In fact it is well known. To receive pay from both sides looks a little queer to me.

WILLIAM SULZER

William Sulzer who was impeached from the Governorship of New York State was born to be a politician and a leader of men. He had an uphill fight all along the way, but by either genius or good luck never has been shelved. His father, Thos. Sulzer, was a politician before him, so much so that he suffered imprisonment for a cause he believed in. The elder Sulzer was a German patriot and a comrade of General Sigel and General Schurz. He was a strong advocate of constitutional liberty, and while a student at Heidelberg University, joined the patriots in a revolution. He was captured and imprisoned, but through clever manœuvring managed to escape to Switzerland. He came to this continent immediately and soon cast his lot with the Democratic forces. This was in 1851. The elder Sulzer married soon after he arrived here and settled in Elizabeth, N.J. His wife was from Dutch and Scotch-Irish stock. They lived in the New Jersey city for several years, and there William Sulzer was born. Soon afterward they removed to New York, and young Sulzer, who was exceedingly bright as a boy, was sent to the Public schools and was graduated, despite the fact that it cost many a hard effort and sacrifice on the part of his father and mother. Afterward he was sent to Columbia University, where he studied law. Both in the Public school and at college he was recognized as a forcible speaker. As early as 1884, when Mr. Sulzer was but twenty-one years old, he attracted attention as a masterly orator.

Gossip and Women's Clubs

Only one thing is fatal to the happy social life of any country community, and that is gossip. If the ladies cannot find in the wide field of housekeeping, chicken-raising, preserving care of children, public schools, music art, reading, public improvements good government, health, sewing, entertaining and all other delightful household tasks, enough material to lift the meetings above petty personalities, then the little club, or what ever it is called, is doomed. Whenever gossip is allowed into any organization people will begin to break up into little cliques or circles or groups, and the whole thing fails.—Farm and Fireside.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By Leona Dalrymple

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

A New Toy.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

ARE women hopeless extremists? Do they rebound in a panic of hysteria from one phase to another? I'm beginning to think so. Mary was not born with a bump of order, nor was she trained to any comprehension of system. Yet she has developed a passion for neatness and detail. Sometimes, however, acquired tastes are as virile as inherent ones.

"I'm through sliding carelessly along, Peter," she explained with glowing cheeks. "I'm beginning to see at last that if you do a thing at all you ought to do it well, and with me, now, my house shall come first and my clubs and things after. That's right, isn't it?"

I glanced at Mary's pretty face, so young and eager and immature, and thought of the adage of the new broom which sweeps well. May my little wife's new interest in her job last. There, by the way, is one of the many things about women that I can't for the life of me understand.

A Wife's Duty.

A woman marries with the express understanding that she will care for a man's home and bear his children, yet almost from the beginning she professes to loathe her job. She hates housework, and speaks feelingly of the terrible care children are. When a man selects the law as his profession he doesn't begin to prate about its dry and dusty detail—he goes to work. That's what a woman ought to do—do her job thoroughly and not grumble. If she wasn't willing to wade through the drudgery incidental to the big job of housekeeping and homekeeping she shouldn't have selected the job of wife and mother and housekeeper for her life's work.

I was mighty glad Mary had begun to see that, after all, first with her should come home and her work, second the incidental business of having a good time, but I was a little worried. Extreme phases have dangerous possibilities. How long would Mary's new fad of thorough housekeeping last?

First on th[illegible] Mary began to buy housekeepi[illegible] I found them piled up e[illegible] e night in business-like [illegible]

Now I [illegible] to approve of learning [illegible] from books. I alway[illegible] should be primarily [illegible] If it wasn't she ought [illegible] from some other wo[illegible] and not fro[illegible] a book, but I must confess I have been greatly astonished at the wealth [illegible] helpful domestic detail Mary has managed to cull from those books of housekeeping.

Beginning a Reform.

After all, I may be a little hide-bound in my notions. Surely the woman who has gone through the mill and learned to solve the problems of a home can write a genuinely helpful book for other women. I'm beginning to discover after years of prejudice that housekeeping may be learned and learned well from books.

"Mary," I said humorously one night, "you'll [illegible]; how to keep hous[illegible] time to work."

"That[illegible] I've been thinking [illegible] frown. "But I'm abo[illegible] now. Did you see the kitch[illegible]"

"It's wonderful, Mary," I exclaimed in delight, "absolutely wonderful. Why, our other kitchen used to be a nightmare."

Mary's eyes were very bright and a little tearful.

"Let's forget all that, Peter," she said. "I was careless and foolish, but I'm older now, and truly I'm going to do better."

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie.

I have received lots [illegible] comfort from reading your [illegible] Now I ask you to help me.

I am a widow for a number of years. Recently I met a widower. He says he loves me better than any woman he has ever met, and wants to marry at once. He has one girl of 12 years. I don't care for him particularly. [illegible] about it?

TROUBLED.

WELL, [illegible] troubled, what are you troubled about? You've been a widow for a number of years, and you seem to have lived through it rather comfortably. Why do you want to alter your condition? What's the bother?

[illegible] the landlord raised the rent, or is it the grocery bill that is bothering you?

[illegible] seem to think you have to marry this man "at once"—just because he wants you to. Is he a hypnotist, or what?

Why must you alter your whole condition in life just to please a man for whom you say you don't care?

What would I do about it?

Why, I'd just tell my friend the widower, "No, thank you," and send him and his family politely about their business. And I [illegible] quite calmly attending to [illegible] that's what I should do.

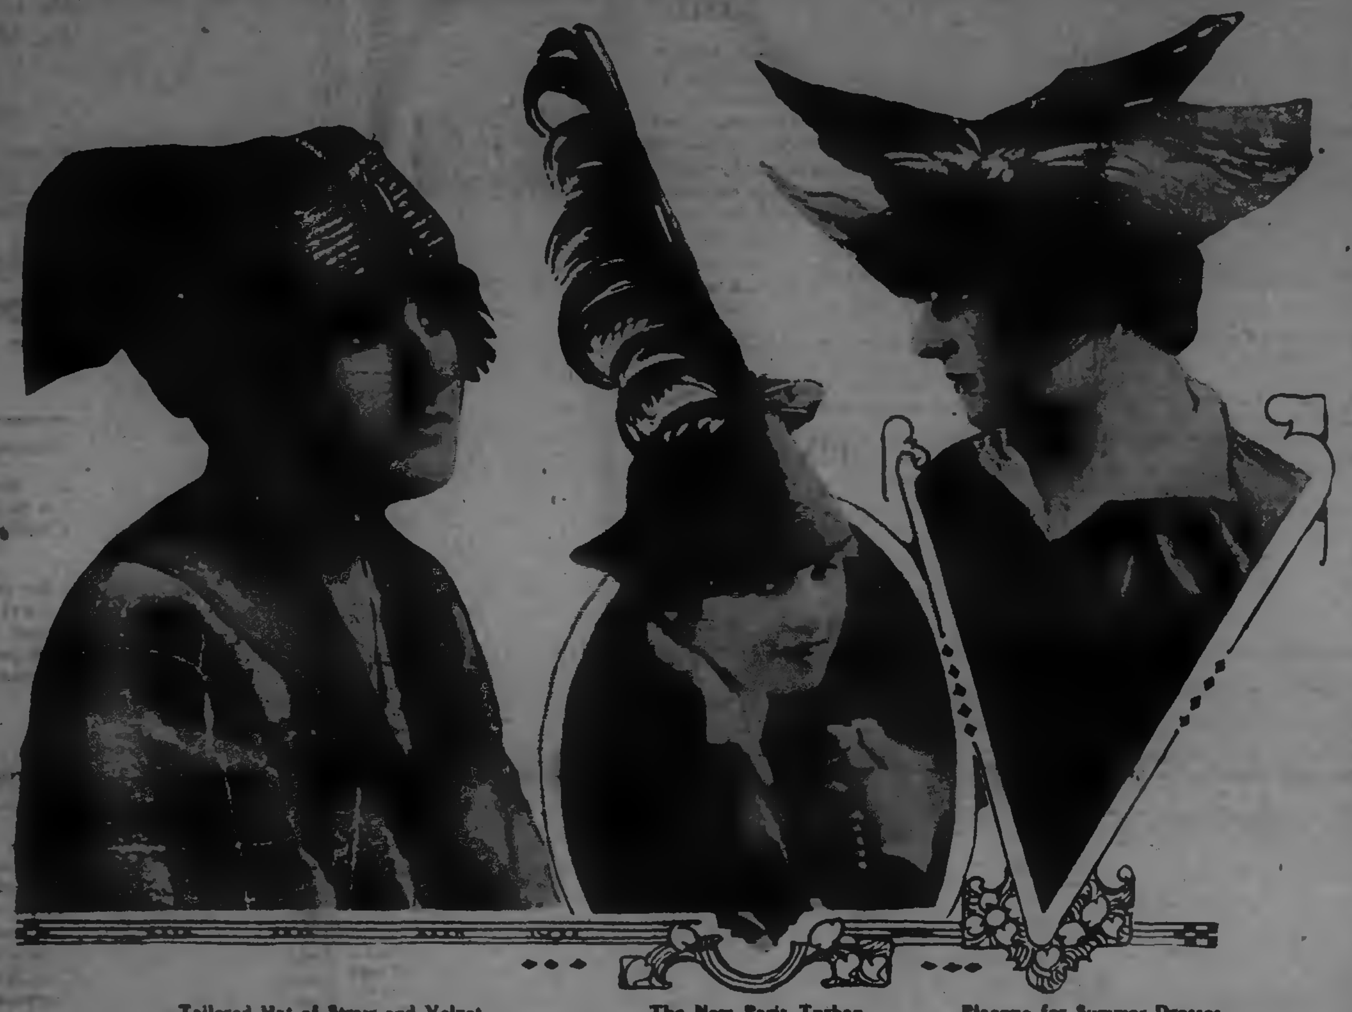
CHIC HAT MODELS FOR THE HOME MILLINER



Tailored Hat of Straw and Velvet. The New Paris Turban. Placque for Summer Dresses.

By MADGE MARVEL

HERE is a hint for the girl who wonders what she can do with the bunches of faded flowers she has carefully ripped off her discarded hats, because they "seemed just too good to throw away," and yet look wofully shabby when she takes them out with the idea of making use of them on a new hat.

She can gild or silver or bronze them. Gilding the lily and painting the rose is an accomplished fact in our best millinery circles. Metallic effects are to be much worn this year.

At Longchamps there was a generous showing of gold-plated feathers. Broadway has seen them before the news of those at the French race meet was flashed to America. Whatever the process, it gives a gorgeous result. Ostrich feathers are treated to a gold bath in such a manner that, while each separate plume looks like solid gold, the effect of stickiness or heaviness is entirely lacking.

Silver leaves used as a wreath about the crown of the hat is a much favored accompaniment to the lacquered ribbon.

Gold flowers are frequently seen. The plan of gilding old flowers is perfectly feasible. Try it with a bottle of gilt paint.

Another smart hat is the bronze straw, which accords so well with the bronze shoes we are wearing, and which will become more popular as the season advances. Last year's hat may be reblocked into a this year's shape and treated to a coat of bronze paint, the very same polish with which our shoes are kept in condition. Then if it is trimmed with lacquered ribbon and a bunch of silver flowers it will be the very latest millinery fancy.

However, there are many conservative women who will never wear bronze hats. These women will be glad to know that ungilded flowers are becoming more and more fashionable each day and that midsummer will see them used in such profusion that we shall look like animated posy beds.

This is the prophecy of one who is said to know more about hats than any other in the world.

"I cannot remember a season," said Ora Cne, in a recent talk, "when flowers were made such splendid use of by the milliners. The ban on aigrettes is partly responsible for this, for we are a most adaptable people, and when one thing is taken from us we are always able to find something else to take its place.

"Another reason for the use of flowers is the picturesqueness of the summer styles. With the plaque and the flat hat, especially the Watteau, there is nothing which is so suitable for trimming as flowers.

"Then the bandeau is best when it is covered with flowers, and what else so perfectly fills in the space at the back of the tilted hats?

"Flowers will grow larger as the summer progresses. One or two large roses will often be used. I do not look for a continuance of the very high trimming all summer. Already there is a tendency to replace the towering feather with a single big bloom.

"There is a fine psychology in choosing flowers for hat trimming that not all women appreciate. The wise woman studies her personality when she chooses posies for her bonnet. If she is a sweet, simple little girl, she should be content to wear smaller and more delicate flowers, like button roses and lilies of the valley and violets.

"I omitted daisies and forget-me-nots, for I feel that they belong to the very little tots, the children. On the average grown woman they are absurd. Big, stunning looking women of the June type have first call on the showy blooms. They can wear splashing blossoms like the hibiscus, the poinsettia, the calla lily, giant roses, orchids.

"There is as much genius displayed in choosing a hat as there is in designing it. A wrong hat can spoil the most perfect costume.

"Veils are becoming thinner and less conspicuous each day. They are the sheerest of net. Hats will not be excessively large during the summer. They will not be very large for several months to come. The small hat has some months of life before it.

"It is a splendid thing for women to try to make their own hats. They will be sure to copy some popular model, and as no two women—or men either—see the same object exactly the same, there is always the chance that some strikingly new style will be evolved from what started out to be a faithful copy."

The "Mystery" in Wanting to Be Useful

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

MISS HELEN CUDAHY, the youngest daughter of Patrick Cudahy, the millionaire meat packer, is going to register in the Massachusetts General Hospital as a student in the school for trained nurses.

"Her family," says the press dispatch which gives the news, "declines to give Miss Cudahy's reason for this action."

Dear me, how mysterious!

There must be a man in an iron mask or a woman in a velvet domino somewhere in the story. It wouldn't be possible for an energetic, ambitious, big-brained, big-hearted, generous souled girl to want to go somewhere and be of some use in the world—would it?

Not when her father pays an income tax of thousands of dollars a year. Why, the idea—why should she want to amount to anything?

Why should she care whether people die in pain or are born in agony or not? What is it to her that friendless women need comforting and that little, helpless babies need care? What earthly reason can she have for wanting to make things a little easier for a dying man or to help some poor wreck of a woman say good-by to a life of misery with some show of decent fortitude?

A Noble Profession.

A trained nurse, a good trained nurse, is the noblest and the most useful creature that walks the earth.

If ever there is any use for a halo in this world of ours—I've seen one hovering around the forehead of a nice, cosey, comfy, little trained nurse who would go without sleep for nights at a time, and without rest for days, just to see that some cantankerous patient "pulled through" in spite of the family.

And she'd think you were joking if you even hinted that she was anything like a saint.

Patience, courage, resourcefulness, self-reliance, tact, a quick wit, a sense of humor, a gentle hand, a light heart, a generous soul—all these are the things that go to make up the character of the trained nurse.

What should the daughter of a rich man want with such a list of the beatitudes?

Nurse a little mother back to health, back to the care of her little children; save the flower of the family to be a useful man and take his place in the world with a sound constitution and good, clean blood; put the head of the house on his feet and make him able to go on with the work he ought to be doing—why, what's such trifling as that to the things that Miss Helen Cudahy could do, if she only had sense enough to want to.

She could be the best tango dancer in her set without a doubt.

Pleasure or Useful Work.

They say she's a regular witch at bridge if she'd only put her mind on it; and as to tennis, and golf—just think of it.

There's a motor boat, too—why doesn't she learn to run one of them if she really wants to be useful in the world, and go chuff, chuffing up and down in season and out of season, just to show that she can?

And automobiles—what's the matter with Miss Cudahy's driving her machine and making a few killings now and then—just to show she's game.

Think of giving up joys like this, just to be somebody real—somebody good—somebody kind—somebody reliable—somebody worth while in the world. Why, the girl must be crazy, or else all the rest of us are.

I wonder which it is. Her act is so mysterious!

Prudence McKinley—oh, yes, I'm going to call your name right out in print—for once—just to see how you like it.

You who wouldn't lie down for three nights because you wanted to change the bandages on a little child's eyes yourself—for fear any one else who came in might nap and forget—just once.

When you meet that little child now, growing into gracious and graceful womanhood and she looks at you with two clear, beautiful eyes—how much money would you take for the song that stirs your heartstrings when you think that if it was not for you that girl would probably be groping in the bitter dark of total blindness today?

Is that what you are looking for, Miss Helen Cudahy, you with your money and your beautiful home—the chance to be a woman of glorious use in the world?

If it is—here's my heart in my hand. Take it, it is yours—to keep.

Words of Wise Men

A SONG — By Margaret Sackville

I WILL bring you roses—roses red and golden—
Plucked at dawn by sleepy streams in fairy lands afar.
I will bring you lilies—lilies for your wearing—
With here and there a jewel and here and there a star,
Breeze-blown breath of clover when the moon is rising,
Glint of gold on shining sands by seas half kissed away,
All the gloom and dream and magic of September,
Singing noons of August, honeyed noons of May.
Did you hear me coming—never a star to guide me?
Through the woods all soft-asleep at hush of night I came,
When I walked at midnight at the time of the wild roses
Every rose bush as I passed woke into flame.
Not a rose upon my track but told your dwelling.
Hidden though you were in the heart of night dew-pearled.
Oh! my dear—with the roses all about you—
You the singing of the Summer and the laughter of the world.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Careful Isolation Limits Spread of Children's Ills

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

"CHARLIE has the whooping cough," says your family doctor. "Keep him away from Jane and William, give him his medicine, and I will drop around again in a few days."

"Thank you, doctor," says the harassed mother as he hurries away. The physician has been brief and methodical, has no doubt written the correct prescription; but, unluckily, he has left the poor mother a warning without explicit directions for its heeding.

The distressed parent is aware of the mistaken notion that "all children will catch measles, mumps and whooping cough"; she is familiar with the exploded nonsense that has by tradition incorporated itself in the minds of women. Indeed, the superstition that her baby must, willy-nilly and in spite of careful precautions, suffer all the ills that the infant flesh encounters, is undeniably absurd.

"Yes, doctor," said a good woman not long ago, "mothers are convinced that their precious darlings need not have measles, chickenpox and the rest of the diseases of childhood, but physicians are always so ready to give general advice—and to assume that we know the particular things to do. The result is a lot of incorrect precautions."

This lady told the truth boldly and baldly. Country doctor and city specialist alike speak in such general terms, and with such ponderous authority that the overawed mother fears to seem ultra-benighted, and nods her thanks in a bewildered doubt. In a word, she and the doctor think it is such a simple matter to guard the well children from the ill one that the one fails to ask, and the other omits to give, the exact minutiae of the necessary duties.

Again, many households are located so remotely that their occupants must depend, in the interim of the doctor's absence, more or less upon their own equipment and information. If these are lacking, faulty or inadequate, the children exposed to contagion will thereby become infected. It becomes necessary to remember precisely what may be done to limit the spread of these serious ailments.

Sources of Contagion.

As plain as the eyes in your head is the fact that the attendants upon the isolated child, whether he be walking around or confined to his room, must, like the ill individual, have a complete outfit of plain, clean and easily washed and ironed garments.

This is as true for the mother, relative or doctor as it is for a nurse. The face and hands should be frequently washed with absolute thoroughness, and the hair and head are to be kept covered and frequently washed with a soap shampoo.

These procedures are not as troublesome as they at first thought would appear. Soon after they are begun—that is to say, when one of the children falls ill—they become as habitual as walking. Perhaps the greatest source of contagion, next to the mother or relative who fails to wear a washable covering as she approaches the child, is the child that has so mild an infection with the microbes of measles, chickenpox or whooping cough, that she is allowed to mingle with her brothers, sisters and other children. She eats at the same table, plays with the same toys, or even wanders about the streets.

A physician once entered a street car, sniffed his nose once or twice and shouted aloud: "There is some one in this car with smallpox." Immediately the car was emptied of everybody but a veiled woman and himself. The fable hath it that he "smelled the smallpox." But the fact is notorious that doctors may shout as much as they will in a crowded street car, school or other public place that "there is a case of"—whooping cough, measles or chickenpox, and not a soul would stir. Yet each of these maladies is much more serious, and oftener fatal, than smallpox.

Entertaining the Child.

Even the lightest cases of childhood's ailments should be kept away from other children for four weeks. When peeling of the skin, running of the eyes, ears, nose or boils are present the quarantine should be maintained until these manifestations have absolutely ceased. Another four weeks might well be allowed to pass before well children may safely play with the child who has been ill.

It is a simple matter to make the sick child contented to play with the attendant, or with his toys. After the first few days the child becomes accustomed to it, and considers it by no means a punishment.

If it is not practical to send other children in the house to a distant relative, the barn, or outside kitchen or a tent should be converted into a temporary home for them and their guardians. When, finally, the convalescent one is preparing to mingle with the others he should, for a week or two previously, be given at least two baths with a disinfectant solution of boracic acid water (two ounces to the quart) or water in which dilute carbolic acid makes a 1 per cent. solution. Special attention should be given to the hair and scalp, and all parts of the skin that have been peeling.

An Attic Hospital.

Perhaps the most vital error that the loving mother makes as she attends the child with measles or any other contagious disease is to continue her duties to the well children.

If she cannot avoid doing this she must make complete changes of clothing at every exit from the sick room. A cap for the hair and a gingham wrapper apron that has sleeves and buttons completely up to and around her neck make a good "uniform."

She must not only gargle or spray her throat and nose frequently, but this wise precaution should be adopted by all the children and adults roundabout. A teaspoonful of boracic acid to a glass of water is a safe solution for this purpose.

The top room of the house, if airy, sunny and simply furnished, is as good as a private hospital room. Dr. John Hemmeter of Baltimore is now advocating a law to require that a hospital room with a bay window be, in the future, built in every house, however humble it may be. Indeed, such a room is as necessary as a bathroom and just as useful. When, happily, not in use for the end intended a hospital room makes an excellent bedchamber.

Protection Against All Forms of Contagion Should Be Rigid and Unceasing.

However, from whichever room is taken for this home hospital all loose hangings, embroidery, upholstery and carpeting must be removed. Free ventilation that is warm, and dampened walls and floors to keep down dust, are also necessary. The ceiling, floors and walls may be wiped with cloths—afterward burned—wet with some mild antiseptic, such as a 1 per cent. carbolic acid. As for keeping vessels with this or any other disinfectant in the room, not only is it useless, but it may cause poisoning by inhalation. Rags moistened in a disinfectant solution should not be left about.

Disinfect Sick Room.

When the tiny patient has recovered the room, its contents and the articles that have been in contact with the ill child are more dangerous than the little convalescent. Playthings that are not burned or disinfected have been known to cause the same disease years afterward.

A poison solution—which must not touch any person, or, if it does, should be washed off quickly with water—known to doctors and druggists under various names, is a good antiseptic for washing toys, woodwork, walls and the like. This drug should not be handled in a solution of more than one part to two thousand parts of water. When taken internally it is a fatal poison, so it must be kept safely out of the reach of all but the one who uses it upon furniture or floors.

The sick room must be made air-tight and disinfected. It will not be safe until it has been plugged and sealed as tight as Pandora's box, and some strong, poisonous gas such as formaldehyde or sulphur candles, burned in it. Pharmacies [illegible] these candles with explicit directions and cautions printed upon them. Suffice it here to say that every nook and cranny in the room must be plugged up; then, no living germ can survive in the burning gases. At times these gases are pumped into the room through a keyhole. Usually this is not feasible in isolated dwellings beyond the reach of a health officer.

To sum up: Keep the well children happy, care-free, clean, and as far away as possible from the neighborhood of the sick child. Let not the devoted mother or other attendant upon the child who is sick approach the healthy. Or, if she must, let her observe the most stringent regulations of redressing, frequent washing, soaped hair, and disinfected throat, nose and hands. With such detailed and specified care only can these malicious microbes of babyhood and adolescence be wiped from the escutcheon of Hygeia.

Answers to Health Questions.

STEADY READER—I've a bunion. Can it be quickly removed by a surgeon?

Bunions should be removed in dispensaries or hospitals under gas or some other anaesthetic.

CONSTANT READER—My baby had swollen glands and I put on a hot salve which burned her. What shall I do to remove the marks?

This often happens. Use almond oil or peroxide cream on it. The scars will take a year or so to fade.

J. H.—What will stop an itchy sensation that does not show on the skin?

This is often due to a little jaundice or bile in the blood and tissues. Drink freely of water, buttermilk and simple things. Eat nothing solid or heavy for two or three weeks.

H. R., Philadelphia, Pa.—Can a broken nose, neglected seven years, be corrected now?

Yes. Many surgeons are noted for the fine cosmetic results obtained after this operation.

Buying For Posterity

The supply of antiques is of necessity limited, and is less every year. Leaving out the matter of a personal association, it is difficult to see why the well-made reproduction of a fine classic design is not as desirable as the antique. And if it seems less so, one consolation is available, the thought that while the antique which was so earnestly desired would quite possibly have been on its last legs the reproduction may gladden several generations after death has parted ourselves from it.

A TITLED SHERIFF

Lt.-Col. the Hon. H. Aylmer, of Sherbrooke of Distinguished Family

Lieut.-Col. the Hon. Henry Aylmer, sheriff of the district of St. Francis, Que., into whose custody Harry Thaw came when that troublesome young man slipped across the border, was well known in Canadian politics nearly 40 years ago. He sat in the Dominion House of Commons as Liberal M.P. for Richmond and Wolfe, from 1874 to 1878, when he lost his seat. He was defeated in 1880 when he contested Richmond for the Quebec legislature, and in 1896 he was an unsuccessful candidate for Sherbrooke in the Dominion House. Earlier in his career he served 12 years in the Royal Marine Artillery. On returning to Canada he was called to the bar and practised his profession for many years at Melbourne, Que. In 1877 he commanded the Canadian Wimbledon rifle team. The year before he had organized the Richmond Field Battery of Artillery, and commanded it until 1887, when he retired from the service with the rank of lieut.-colonel. In 1900 he was appointed sheriff.

The first Lord Aylmer, a distinguished naval officer in the reign of James II., was elevated to the peerage of Ireland as a reward for his professional services. The 5th baron was a general in the army, and commanded a brigade under Wellington in the Peninsular War. In 1828 he was appointed Governor-General of Canada, and held the appointment nearly five years. He died in 1850, and was succeeded by his brother Frederick, 6th baron, who died unmarried in 1858. The title then went to Mr. Adolphus Aylmer, a third cousin of the 6th baron, who resided at Melbourne, Que. Adolphus, who was born in 1814, accompanied his father, Capt. John Aylmer, R.N., to Canada during the governorship of the 5th Lord Aylmer, who was a second cousin of Captain John (the latter being son of Rear-Admiral John, and grandson of Rev. John, who was a son of the second baron). The young man remained in Canada, and when he was 23 years old, served in the Canadian militia during the rebellion of 1837. He retired as lieut.-colonel in August, 1894. He survived until 1901, when he was succeeded by his eldest son, Colonel the Hon. Matthew Aylmer.

The present Lord Aylmer was inspector-general of Canadian militia, and retired in 1907 with the rank of major-general.

THE AGE OF THE WORLD

Record of Mankind Goes Back Only to the Merest Yesterday

The age of our world, this ball on which we are whirled round and round the sun, and onwards with our solar system through infinite space, can only be estimated vaguely. Professor Ulrich, one of the greatest living authorities on this subject, stated at Toronto that the world is from 75,000,000 to 750,000,000 years old, and that his own estimate would be somewhere in the neighborhood of 200,000,000 years.

Our historical records, that is of humanity, cover only a few thousand years. When man first appears on the scene in these records he is far advanced in civilization. He has domesticated the horse and other animals; he has flocks and herds and he tills the soil. He has vehicles and tools to help him in his work. He has bows and arrows, spears and swords for defence. He can communicate his ideas in a speech which submits itself to rules of grammar. He can dig ores out of the earth, and convert them into workable metals.

Before this point was reached there must have been a long history of toil and endeavor. Its joys and its tragedies have never been described, and can only be imagined. Efforts have been made to write a history of civilization, but such histories must always be imperfect, because the toilsome beginnings of civilization can be the subject only of conjecture. The savage tribes of our own and recent times give us examples of civilization carried a certain distance and then arrested. The pioneer, moving from a civilized to a wild country, may realise some of the difficulties and dangers of his ancestor in remote ages. But he has the forces of civilization behind him, and communication by rail and telegraph and steamship has now been so highly developed that the immigrant changes his environment far less than he did fifty years ago.

How People Feel When They Have Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulvaney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ½ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulvaney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4830, or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

Amsterdam Firemen

In Amsterdam firemen have little leisure time. Many of them are skilled workmen. Every station has its own workshop, where all repairs are done, and where motor cars are built. Amsterdam was one of the first cities to put motor apparatus into use in the fire brigade.

ART OF GROWING TALL

You May Easily Increase Your Height by This Process

Not a little envy must have been created in the minds of those who lack stature, and who aspire to greater physical height than that with which nature has endowed them, by the recent announcement that there is a man living who can add several inches to his height in the course of a few minutes. Such extraordinary growing powers are, of course, unique; but, at the same time, it is possible, without artificial aids, but by merely indulging in certain exercises, to add appreciably to one's height, even after what is popularly known as the "stop growing" period has been passed.

It should be mentioned, however, that exercises are scarcely likely to be beneficial after one has passed thirty years of age, for at that time the bones and cartilages have been so thoroughly matured that it is practically impossible to affect them. The following exercise, however, is often indulged in by army men, and if systematically carried on is said to give a man an extra inch in height.

The main exercise consists in standing, back to wall, until you are just as erect as possible. Then take two paces forward away from the wall, letting the arms hang by the sides with palms outward, and slowly raise the arms above the head until the fingers meet, taking care not to bend the arms in the [illegible] and keeping the palms outward; then [illegible] the arms. By doing this [illegible] times in the morning and [illegible] at night every day for a [illegible] or so, one seldom fails to add a [illegible] half an inch to the height, and it [illegible] been known to give a man [illegible] and a half.

There are also certain simple rules which, if carried out, add considerably to one's height. There is the old habit of stooping. [illegible] Nearly everyone stoops a little, and if we would only endeavor, as far as possible, to prevent this habit, we should not only look taller but feel taller.

Endeavor to sit up perfectly straight at all times, and stand up perfectly straight. It is not easy at first, particularly when one follows a sedentary occupation. In fact, one is rather apt to feel uncomfortable, but by quiet persistence it will be found quite as easy in a short time to walk and sit perfectly upright as it is to stoop.

If you wish to relax when sitting, don't get into an easy chair and bend over or sag down into a lazy position. Always rest in a chair by leaning back, no matter how far; but never bend forward to rest or talk or read.

Our Imported Hides

Horse skins come chiefly from Russia; India is the chief contributor of buffalo hides, though small quantities come from the Straits Settlements, and the Dutch East Indies, and occasionally from Siam and Egypt. Kangaroo skins, of course, originate in Australia.

Some people seem to get a lot of enjoyment in keeping others from enjoying themselves.

Teaching a girl to flirt is about as easy as persuading an amateur singer to take an encore.

WHITENED HAIR

Divergent Opinions as to Change of Color Over Night

One reads occasionally in novels and other literature of cases in which a person's hair was turned white within one single night, under some severe mental stress. An alleged historical case of this kind is that of Marie Antoinette. The true cause of the bleaching of the hair is a matter of some dispute, says a scientist who, investigating a case of sudden greying of a man's hair reported that the inner canal of the hair had become filled with small air bubbles, which imparted to it its white appearance. According to another physician on the other hand the phenomenon is due to the destruction of the hair pigment by the phagocyte cells. Others deny altogether the truth of reports of sudden blanching, or assert that where it has occurred this may have been due simply to the fact that the person in question was suddenly placed under circumstances compelling the discontinuance of the practice of hair dyeing.

CLEARS THE HEAD, OPENS THE NOSTRILS STOPS SNEEZING, CURES CATARRH

You Get Instant Relief by Inhaling the Soothing Vapor "Catarrhozone."

Catarrh is bound to come with this weather. Slight colds become more offensive and sickening every day. The inflammation extends further into the head. Soon the ears begin to buzz and ring. The head aches, the eyes pain dreadfully, the nose gets plugged up and this forces the patient to breathe through the mouth. Vile filthy secretions are forced back into the throat, requiring a great deal of coughing to keep the air passages free. Finally, this foul matter finds its way into the stomach, causing Dyspepsia and general ill-health. By this time the patient has SYSTEMATIC CATARRH, which saps strength, depletes the vital energies till consumption is the unhappy result.

There isn't the slightest use in trying to cure this condition with tablets, snuffs or sprays. Such treatments are wholly inadequate. You must employ Catarrhozone the only remedy that possesses power to kill the germs of Catarrh. The healing vapor of Catarrhozone is carried by the air you breathe to the most minute cells of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. Its antiseptic medication goes everywhere that air can go. No case is too chronic, no person too old—everybody that has catarrh of any kind can be cured by this grand treatment which is endorsed by thousands of physicians throughout America, who say: "The only way to permanently get rid of Catarrh is to use Catarrhozone."

TWO MONTHS' TREATMENT GUARANTEED TO CURE. PRICE, $1.00; small size 50c.; trial size 25c. Sold by dealers everywhere.

Last night the Conservatory of Music Hall was fairly well filled. The occasion was a most interesting and instructive lecture on "Capt. Wild Pigeons Redivi.

The older generation of local sportsmen will remember when wild pigeons were as plentiful at Stoney Lake as weeds are in the garden of those men who break their backs over a shovel. Such sportsmen will be pleased to learn that a Galt man has secured a clutch of wild pigeons' eggs and is hatching them under a Mrs.. Tame Pigeon.

Who Will Be Canal Sup't?

Lindsay Post: There has been no successor appointed as yet to the position of Supt. of the Trent Valley Canal, rendered vacant owing to the suspension of Mr. J. H. McClellan. Engineer Killaly, of Cornwall, is still acting Supt. but the Department of Railways and Canals is deluged with applicants. Mr. C. L. Owen, ex-M. P. of Campbellford, is making a strong bid, it is said, for the position.

An Oriental Hotel Incident.

Yesterday morning the Oriental Hotel bus conveyed two passengers to the G.T.R. station. Whilst the driver was looking after his passengers' baggage, the bus team thought of an engagement they had at the stable of this popular caravanserry. The horses ran away, but like migrating birds in Spring time, made for their nest. As they crossed the sidewalk between the Hunter Street pavement and the hotel yard, one of the horses slipped and fell. No damage.

Actor Known Here, Dead.

Perth, May 13.—Alex Marks, a member of the well-known Marks family of theatrical companies, was found dead in his launch on Christy Lake by his brother-in-law, Morley D. White. Mr. Marks was known in almost every town and city in Ontario and many New York State towns, being advance agent for many years, for the Marks Brothers Company. The deceased was a guest at the Munro House on the 27th of January, last.

Slit Skirts Now On.

Local young men are now "sitting up and taking notice." Slit skirts are now on. Yesterday morning a young lady on George Street wore one of these illustrative garments. It was of baby blue color with a slit reaching half way from the ground to the lady's Equator. However, if this particular lady was wise, she would take that frock to a blacksmith's and and have the slit rivetted up. She reminded a Times reporter of Rosa Bonheur's picture of the "Horse Fair." Bonheur was fond of Clydale horses.

Improvements at Oriental Hotel.

Improvements at the Oriental Hotel are progressing rapidly. As before noted in The Times, the former bar-room is being converted into a "tea-room." Yesterday a handsome mahogany sideboard, some 20 feet long was placed in the room. A three foot ornamental glass, suspended, dome surmounts the centre of this magnificent piece of furniture. The new tea-room will undoubtedly be one of the leading attractions of this city when completed.

Silver Threads Amongst The Gray.

Yesterday a local citizen, who for some years has been trying what Ponce de Leon sought for in Florida, the "Fountain of Perpetual youth," by using hair dye. On a George Street car a young lady sitting behind him noticed the gentleman had forgotten for possibly a week to have the dye applied. She softly whistled "Silver threads amongst the Grey" or some such air.

An Ancient Razor.

A local man was shaved in the Snowden House barber shop yesterday. As the operating barber finished his work, the customer remarked, "That's a smooth working razor you have used. I never had a better shave in my life." The barber replied "Well it ought to be a good razor. The Lord knows it had enough experience. It belongs to Mr. Pinimatt of this shop to whose grandfather it was given by the date stamped on the blade of the latter's grandsire. According this tool it is 151 years old.

Local Lady at Wedding Function

At the marriage in St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto, of Miss Marion Blake to Dr. T. S. Kirby, the musical portion of the mass was in charge of Miss Geraldine Rudkins, of this city who presided at the organ. The wedding party entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March. During the mass, solos were splendidly rendered by Miss Genevieve Kelly, who sang an "Ave, Verum," and Miss Irene Moran, who sang an "Ave Maria," and the "Ave Maris Stella" was rendered as a duet by Miss Kelly and Miss Moran.

To Locate Missing Girl.

Police Matron McElheney went to Bethany yesterday afternoon, with the brother of a local girl who, a week ago last Sunday, walked out of town with a local young man, and has not been heard of until seen a week ago last Tuesday. According to all the information that could be gathered about the pair, they have been living as brother and sister, and have been making a tour of the country. Mrs. McElheney has gone to locate the pair to see what can be done in the matter.

Absurd Civic Legislation?

A Chicago despatch says that 12,000 people in Cook County, Ill., are contemplating suicide. "Should the poor man, the working man, be charged one cent a loaf more on account of a fad to raise the price of bread, by compelling bakers to wrap loaves in paper, there will possibly be some suicides here when taxes of Peterborough are put to 26 mills on the dollar, why raise the price of a working man's bread?" This is a question asked The Times yesterday by one of the proletariat.

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE.

No more board walks are to be built in Lindsay.

Chief Chilton's resignation has been accepted by the town council of Lindsay.

Peterborough of late reminds one of a seaport town. Every day big schooners, laden with malt and hops pass over the bar.

Mr. W. B. Sparling, of Lindsay, is mentioned as Reform temperance candidate for South Victoria for the Ontario Legislature.

Ex-Chief of Police Gummerson of Port Hope has entered action against that town for $359.72, which he alleges is due him for years.

Chief of Police Newton of Belleville has made an arrest. It was an escaped canary bird captured near the Standard Bank of that city.

The Bell Telephone Company has a gang of men at work in the township of Smith. They were yesterday working on the 4th line. About a hundred rural party lines will soon be connected with the city.

The township of Ops, Victoria county has warned Lindsay that the former's roadway must not be used as a dumping ground for tomato cans, ashes, etc. In the list however, the Reeve of Ops did not include among forbidden deposits a stray keg of ale.

Lindsay is having placed at its local market a blackboard to display the prices for eggs, butter, etc., charged at the local stores. This is a check on prices charged by farmers but does not guarantee against cold storage eggs.

We learn from an esteemed evening contemporary that Mr. Mulhall has taken over the American Hotel, "this week." Our E.E.C. should read The Times and discover that their "Scoop" was given in The Times two weeks ago.

Gentle reader, you can take your choice on Weather predictions for today. You can go in shirt sleeves, or slit skirt (according to sex) carry an umbrella or convey a fur coat. The Times cannot advise you as the Weather Sharp is ignorant of any conditions.

WALKS IN HIS SLEEP

Portland Farmer in Hospital After Somnambulistic Feat in Lynn.

Buffalo, May 13.—Walking in his sleep early yesterday morning William H. McLaughlin of Portland, Me, fell 35 feet out of a third-story window at 68 Market square, Lynn where he has been visiting since December. He landed on a granolithic sidewalk, and was discovered, unconscious, by two policemen walking their beat.

The officers, Patrolmen Villard and Fitzgerald, took McLaughlin to the Lynn Hospital, where his principal injuries were found to be severe cuts. One on his forehead required five stitches and one on his right foot 14. Despite his long drop and his advanced age—he is 65—the physicians say he will live.

McLaughlin is a retired farmer, and has been a sufferer from somnambulism for some time.

NEGRO MURDERER ELUDES POSSE

St. James, La., May 13.—An enraged posse is scouring the country here for a negro who killed Deputy Sheriff P.C. Simon and wounded Judge A. M. Melancon, near Gramercy, April 29. It is feared the black will be lynched, if caught.

Last night Sheriff Joseph Dornier, with ten deputies, sighted a negro and a white man on the baggage car of a Texas & Pacific train as it pulled into this station. The negro escaped, the white man being taken after he was shot. The black is the one suspected Bloodhounds were put on his trail.

DISCUSS THE NEGRO

Sociological Congress Airs Question of Bar to His Progress.

Memphis, Tenn., May 13.—"Hindrances to Negro Progress" was the general subject before the delegates of the Sociological congress when they gathered for the morning session of to-day's meetings. The lack of proper home life, living conditions in cities and their future as workers was discussed by able speakers.

At the afternoon meeting various phases of "The Church and Social Service" made up the programme.

To-night the Sociological congress will meet in conjunction with the opening session of the National Conference on Charities and Corrections.

Winnfield, La., May 13.—J. Levin Brewton, police juror of Winn parish for the past ten years and a member of one of the most prominent and highly respected families of North Louisiana, was found guilty of embezzling parish funds and sentenced at hard labor.

DIES OF FRIGHT

Pittsfield, May 13.—Miss Grace MacArthur, 15 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. MacArthur of Wahconah street, died suddenly Sunday morning a few minutes before she was to have been baptized in the Pilgrim Memorial Congregational Church.

Miss MacArthur, who was dressed to go to Church, was nervous over the approaching sacrament. She complained of darkness, became unconscious and died before a physician arrived at her father's house. Her death was caused by a hemorrhage of the brain, due to excitement.

WHEN RIPE EGGS FAIL

Youth Goes to Jail and Speaker Continues Attack On Capital and U. S.

Abbeville, La., May 13.—H. T. Bowie, Socialist, recently from Denver, held an open-air meeting on the court-house lawn Saturday evening It was largely attended, but there was no enthusiasm. He denounced John D. and other millionaires.

"The government is quick," he said, "to rush soldiers to Colorado to kill strikers, but it was very slow in protecting its citizens and the honor of its flag in Mexico."

During his general "roast" someone threw an egg. It was smashed on one of the auditors, discoloring his new spring suit. The orator dodged, but another egg came. It struck his soap-box platform.

"That's nothing," he shouted. "I am used to that. I have been in such places before."

He continued his oration to the finish. In the meantime, Police Officer Calise Guidry arrested Eph. Le Blanc a boy, and charged him with disturbing the peace. Le Blanc hurled the egg.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND PAJAMAS ARE READY

One For Every Volunteer in Ulster And Two For Each Seen.

Dublin, May 13.—A plague of pajamas has overtaken Belfast, and the tale of the hundred thousand pairs of these garments which have been prepared for the Ulster Defence League shows that a sense of humor has not deserted the city.

Dorcas societies began making pajamas first by the dozen and then by the hundred. St. Andrew's had the record, and St. Phillip's spurred on to fresh endeavor, wrested it from them. The first circle found they were falling behind in the contest. Willing hands cut the patterns and in the race wealthy enthusiasts went outside the circle and hired poor seamstresses to sew the garments.

Now there is one pair of pajamas for every volunteer. When the next census of pajamas is taken there will probably be two pairs, for they are still coming in to head quarters.

"Ladies and Gentlemen :—The batteries for to-day will be——"

"Play ball !"

With these words the Canadian League Baseball Season, 1914, in Peterboro will be started on its way when the London Cockney's and Curly Blounts Petes face each other in the first home fixture at Riverside Park this afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

What promises to be the largest crowd in the history of professional baseball in Peterborough is expected at the game to-day, and the interest that has been taken in the opening by the fans augers well for the success of the ceremonies that will mark the event. An automobile parade will form at the Market Square at 2 o'clock, and headed by the 57th Regiment band, will proceed via George and Hunter Streets to the ball park. Here the two teams will march across the field and speeches will be delivered by prominent men. Mayor Buller will pitch the first ball.

There has been much discussion of late on the merits of baseball as a means of entertainment. The argument has been advanced that the game is a slow one for the spectators to watch, with its interminable changes of innings; that a contest which is perfect from the standpoint of the expert player cannot possibly be anything but tiresome to the majority of those in the grand stand, since it offers the spectacle of the rival pitchers mowing down batter after batter in monotonous order. This contention—a treasonable one to the staunch supporters of the National pastime—is indignantly refuted by the dyed-in-the-wool fans however. The latter claim that to them there is no more interesting sight than that of an extra inning pitchers' battle with the batting averages of the two teams suffering a severe slump, and the two nines playing errorless ball in the field. There is little question but that a fast baseball game makes an appeal to the initiated which no other sport seems able to do, and without entering into a discussion of the claims of either side in the controversy, it seems as if the huge crowds that patronize games in all cities in all leagues, day after day throughout the season, is the best argument which the ardent followers of baseball can offer in refutation of those who would assail the sport.

Mayor Buller has declared a half holiday, starting at 3 o'clock, and with all places of business closed, and the promise of splendid weather there is no reason why the Park should not be crowded to capacity.

With Class B. rating, and the salary limit raised to $1600, the directors of the Peterborough Club are at much greater expense this season than in former years, and need the whole-hearted support of the citizens at large. Our City has the makings of a championship team, and in Manager Blount the players have an able coach who has the knack of making his men go the limit. But the big asset to any team is support and on the opening day, we make this appeal to all citizens, whether fans or not, turn out and lend your aid. Show by your presence that you are behind the team, and we bespeak success for the Blountmen in large measure.

Yesterday the third game of the St. Thomas-Peterborough series had to be called off on account of rain. The Petes arrived in the city yesterday and enjoyed a good work out at Riverside Park. The boys are in fine fettle for the game this afternoon.

Umpire Bedford, who will officiate at this afternoon's opening fixture, comes here highly recommended, as a first-class official. He umpired at the Hamilton-Brantford series last week.

The Lindsay Town League plays its first game on Friday evening of this week. Four teams comprise the League.

A familiar face to Peterborough fans will be missed from the London team this year, in the person of "Big Chief" Matteson, who has been with the Cockneys the last two seasons, first base in 1912, and catcher in 1913.

Joe Byrne, Peggy Swartz, Frank Fox, Knut Belting, Bob Sterling, Ken Tracey and Stan. Creswell—these are the familiar faces that will be seen at Riverside Park to-morrow. But there are many strangers coming, also. Let's give them all the glad hand.

U.S. TO PROHIBIT PURE FOOD LABEL

Federal Inspectors Charge Widesprerd Deception by Manufacturers—Serial Number Merely Means Guaranty to Dealers

Washington, May 13.—Alleging widespread deception of the public by certain manufacturers through the use of the legend "guaranteed under the food and drug act," federal food inspection board in a decision announced that the guaranty legend and the serial number on the packages of food and drugs will be prohibited after May 1, 1915. After that date, the board holds, guarantee of compliance with the law should be given by manufacturers directly to dealers, and should be incorporated in the invoice bill of sale specifying the goods covered.

The board held the legend "guaranteed under the food and drug act," and guaranteed by (name of dealer) under the food and drug act" born on labels or packages of food and drugs accompanied by serial numbers given by the secretary of agriculture are misleading and deceptive because through their use the public is induced to believe the articles to which they relate have been examined and approved by the government and that the government guarantees that they comply with the law.

CASHIER ENDS LIFE

Believed Personal Reverences Were Cause of Act.

Hattiesburg, Miss., May 13.—John McDonald, cashier of the Bank of Richton, shot himself through the heart while alone in the bank about 5.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. He died instantly. The assistant cashier left the bank at 4 o'clock. At 5.30 neighbors heard a shot and when they reached the bank found McDonald dead.

According to best obtainable information the suicide was caused by recent personal financial reverses. It is claimed affairs of the bank are in good shape and so far nothing has been found to indicate there is a shortage. State Bank Examiner Love is speeding from Vicksburg to Richton to make a complete investigation.

McDonald was formerly connected with the Bank of Bond, and gained a reputation in the panic of 1907, when he liquidated that bank and paid depositors fully. He leaves a widow and one child.

What Nova Scotia Farmer Says of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Just Why John A. Campbell Recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills to Everybody who has Kidney Disease.

Hillsdale, N. S., May 13.—(Special)—"I can recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to everybody suffering from Kidney Disease." These are the words of Mr. John A. Campbell, a well known and highly respected farmer living near here. Mr. Campbell suffered from Kidney Disease for three months. He used two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills with the result that he says emphatically, "Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me of all my troubles."

It is well to note that Mr. Campbell says he was cured of all his troubles. For when you cure the Kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills the result is new health and vigor all over the body. The Kidneys are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. When the Kidneys are wrong they fail to do their work and the impurities remain in the blood, the circulation becomes clogged and the net result is lassitude and weakness all over the body. Dodd's Kidney Pills correct all this and give new life and energy all over the [illegible]

PREMIER SHOWS HOW CLOSELY C.N.R. IS TIED UP BY AGREEMENT

Will be Paving Proposition for People of Canada, Who Will Become Owners of Forty Millions in Stock of Transcontinental Railway

Ottawa, May 14.—The Canadian Northern resolution, the long waited event of the session, was moved in the House yesterday afternoon by Premier Borden before almost a capacity attendance of members and of the general public.

Sharp at 3 o'clock the Premier rose to make the motion. He was received by an outburst of Government cheering. On the table he placed a great map of the Canadian Northern system. In addition he was armed with a great bulk of documents of various natures. He plunged at once into his subject.

Mr. Borden explained the road had its beginning in 1896 in Manitoba. Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann afterwards acquired and built other roads, through purchase and construction. Now the C.N.R had lines in every province, except New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. There was a total of 10,000 miles in operation or under construction. In 1911, the road was officially recognized as a transcontinental railway by Parliament.

There was a guarantee then of bonds, to the extent of $35,000,000, on the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway. The total outstanding securities issued by the C.N.R. and allied companies had been $321,000,000. Of this amount $52,000,000 was guaranteed by the Dominion, and by the Provinces $78,000,000. The most profitable sections of the road to-day are the lines west of Port Arthur.

Large Debt to Contractors.

The Premier said that it became apparent several months ago the enterprise could not be carried to a successful conclusion without further assistance from the Government. The chief difficulty was the financial stringency. The ordinary current indebtedness had increased to $11,000,000. Contractors were owed $14,000,000 and Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann had raised $11,000,000 on other accounts.

The Premier read a statement to show that it would take $100,000,000 to complete the road. There was [illegible]0,000,000 securities available. It might be asked why this was not available for completion of the road. The subsidies however, were not paid out until a certain amount of the line was built. There must be working capital before the company could earn these subsidies.

The proceeds of guaranteed securities were also put on the public treasury and are paid out only as the road is built. The difficulty of the company was that these subsidies and guaranteed securities had not been earned and could not be earned until some money was paid out on construction.

THE CHURCH AGAIN LOSES

It will be of interest to the Orangemen of Peterborough to know that the judges of the Privy Council regard the despotic Tremblay marriage case as one of "Imperial importance," according to a special despatch in the Montreal Star. Peterborough people took a practical interest in this case between two Roman Catholics, and will be glad to hear that the woman wins against the attempt to annul her marriage because the ancestors of her husband and herself were cousins when married in 1781, or one hundred and thirty-three years ago. It is a struggle between the law of the State and the law of the Church.

INTERFERENCE FROM BRITAIN IS DENIED

No Truth in Standard's Story of Policy Considered by Ministers.

London, May 14.—A denial is issued by the British Foreign Office today of the report published in this morning's Standard declaring—that Sir Edward Grey had had under consideration a despatch from Sir Lionel Garden, British Minister at Mexico City, dealing exhaustively with the whole Mexican situation.

The Standard added that the despatch was to be submitted to a Cabinet meeting accompanied by the Foreign Secretary's notes and declared that Sir Edward Grey advised that no useful purpose would be served by South American mediation and that he would indicate a line of policy which would go far to minimize the possibility of further bloodshed.

The official statement to-day declares the statement of the Standard to be wholly unfounded.

PREFERS CANARY TO JEWELS WHEN HOUSE IS BURNED

New York, May 14.—"Never mind the jewels; I want my canary," wept Mrs. Edward Farmer when told her house which is next door to Vincent Astor's, was on fire, and that $60,000 worth of jewels was lost. She saved the bird.

RECORD CROWD ATTEND OPENING LONDON NINE DEFEAT THE PETES

Opening Day was the same old day. It attracts the fans each year about the same time and in the same way. Do you ever have intermittent fever? It's something like that, with its insistent recurrence after a winter of hibernation. Yesterday was Peterborough's third annual opening day. It seemed as though every mother's son—and daughter, too, who had vowed not to brave the crowd and jam of opening day, had relented at the last moment. The two stands were crowded to their capacity and every available inch of standing room was blocked with enthusiastic throng.

The ceremonies were curtailed to a parade of autos, containing the players and officials of both teams and scores of the city's leading fans and headed by the 57th Regimental Band. At the grounds the players marched across the field, and Manager Blount's warriors were given a reception that must have warmed the cockles of their hearts. Mayor Buller pitched the first ball, after a brief address.

The bright colors of the fair fanettes lent a splash of color to the scene around the enclosure. The ubiquitous vendors of peanuts, fresh-roasted—two weeks ago—elbowed their way between the rows of seats as usual, and trampled new "shines" and to mention the corns they purchase concealed. The photographer snapped and clicked away plate after plate to record the images of the corps of new players presented by Carley Blount. There were a few familiar faces in the lot, too.

It was twenty minutes to four when Umpire Bedford called "lay!" "Louie" Schettler, who faced the Yankees at the opening game in Erie, was started at the visitors. Manager Reiding delegated Beebe to perform against the Petes. Both pitchers were hit hard, particularly Schettler, but his support was poor, and he had a lot on his shoulders. To say that the Petes played their best would be exaggerating too much—they played a very poor game. That is—mind you—as a team. On the other hand there were some brilliant plays. Joe Byrne, at 3rd base, played the game of his life, and received hand after hand for his stellar work. He headed the Petes at the bat, securing a corking three-bagger in the fourth innings, Gorman scoring on the hit; and again in the eighth innings Joe hit a beauty over short, scoring Gorman. Peggy Swartz was going at his best also, when a regrettable accident in the second innings forced him to retire from the game, being replaced by Wilcox. Peggy was the happy recipient of a nice signet ring from his old friends, and received a great ovation when the presentation was made. Catcher Ryeberg played a good game, as did Fox in the right garden, and Manager Blount in centre.

BODY TO BE BURNED

New Orleans May 14.—Public burning of the body of Sylvester Washington, whose career of crime, beginning April 19 and ending Friday, resulted in two men killed, one a deputy sheriff, the other an engineer, and two wounded, a judge and an unidentified white man now dying at Charity Hospital, was decided upon Saturday by citizens of Lutcher as a warning to all of Washington's stripe.

The men who headed the attack upon the desperado, barricaded in a shed Friday, will be the conspicuous figures at the "burning at the stake" scheduled to take place publicly in Lutcher Saturday afternoon. They will be given places of distinction in the programme to be carried out.

Washington's end came with a rifle bullet fired by a negro, Frank James the only black member of the mob, Washington had barricaded himself in a building and exchanged shots with citizens who had repeatedly failed to burn him alive by setting fire to his retreat.

Victim Unidentified

Up to 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon the white man brought here for treatment had not been identified. His end is expected momentarily. He was one of three on a train mistaken for the negro, Washington, and fired upon.

The killing of the negro came as a climax to a series of depredations that he had committed and which included the murder of Deputy Sheriff P. C. Simon, of Lutcher, in the afternoon of April 29; the murder of Charles Bohn, railway engineer, Friday afternoon, and the wounding of Judge A. Molonson, who was with the deputy sheriff at the time of his killing.

Only One Application
And the Hairs are Gone

(Aids to Beauty.)

Here is a simple, yet very effective, treatment for superfluous hairs; With water, mix into a stiff paste enough powdered delatone to cover the objectionable hairs. Apply and let remain 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off and with it comes every bit of hair. The skin should then be washed to free it from the remaining delatone. This is a painless, inexpensive method and even a stubborn growth yields to the first application. The success of this treatment of course, depends upon getting real delatone.

TWO WOMEN AND GIRL DROWN IN FLOODED FIELD

Horse Driven by Mrs. Clarence Knight in South Newbury, Vt., Stumbles From Road and Upsets Carriage Into Meadow Into Which the Connecticut River Overflowed

Haverhill, N. H., May 14.— While picking their way over a road submerged by the overflow of the Connecticut river in South Newbury, Vt., this afternoon, the horse driven by Mrs. Clarence Knight stumbled and overturned the carriage into a meadow, drowning Mrs. Knight, her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Leon Knight, of Pike, N.H., and the latter's four-year old daughter, Dorothy.

The bodies were caught in the current and washed out into the river and were found later two miles below the place where the drowning took place. The river has been swollen for several days and the place where the drowning happened is one of the worst along the Connecticut in this section. The two women had been shopping in Haverhill and were returning home. They had crossed the toll bridge between Haverhill and South Newbury and were driving carefully along the road in which there was a foot or more of water.

Beside the road there was a meadow about five feet lower than the level of the roadway. When the horse stumbled he plunged over the side into the meadow, carrying the occupants of the carriage into about six feet of water. Entangled as they were in the carriage they had no chance to escape and the struggles of the horse swept them farther from the road.

All three were caught in a whirl of water and, after being carried around that, were caught in a current and carried out into the river. Word was sent to the next town and watchers saw the bodies and were able to tow them to shore.

WILL DRINK RUM THAT IS 214 YEARS OLD

That's What Wistar Institute Directors Will Do in 1992

Boston, May 14.— Jamaica rum, 214 years old, is promised to the directors of the Wistar Institute of Anatomy of the University of Pennsylvania at the centenary of the institute. But the only directors who will be allowed to drink it will be those who are in office in 1992, when a dinner will be arranged for them for the specific purpose of drinking the rum. The centenary of the institute will be in 1992.

A bottle of Jamaica rum was left unopened in this city by British officers upon their evacuation of Philadelphia in the war of the revolution, and its history since that time is recited upon a card tied to the neck. The card was written by Isaac Wistar, founder of the institute.

Mr. Wistar inherited the bottle from his uncle, Franklin Jones. In 1894, two years after he founded the institute, he presented the bottle to the institute, with the request that it be held for the centenary celebration. The bottle is of green-colored glass, and holds about three pints— Philadelphia Inquirer.

$75,000 PRICE SET FOR HUERTA'S HEAD

San Antonio, Tex., May 14.— "On the day that Victoriano Huerta meets a violent death, the family of the murdered Francisco I. Madero will pay to Gen. Francisco Villa $75,000 in gold," was the declaration here today of a man prominent in the business life of San Antonio. This man, who is Villa's personal friend, would not allow the use of his name.

"This may seem a strong statement," he continued, "but I personally know it is true. Remember, I do not say that Villa has agreed to kill Huerta for $75,000. That is not the bargain. It is simply that on the day that Huerta is killed Villa gets the gold. And more, Villa has a practical hostage. In his camp today is young Raoul Madero. Huerta might be able to compose his differences with the other rebel chiefs, and line up a United Mexican force against America, but in Villa—who personally has a long feud with Huerta—the dictator has one foe who will never rest while he is above ground."

The United Press informant, is, or so says everyone here, as well informed on Mexican affairs as any man in the southwest. With one Sommerfield, a German agent of Madero, he broke up the incipient rebellion of Gen. Reyes against Madero, and he is in the confidence of the leaders of the present Carranza movement.

MILLION IN JEWELS LEFT BY NORDICA

New York, May 14.—The notable collection of jewels, valued at $1,000,000 including the famous Nordica pearl and other gems almost priceless because of their flawlessness and beauty, were disposed of by Mme. Lillian Nordica, the singer, in her will, some detail of which became known to-day.

In addition to the jewels, Mme. Nordica disposed of other property valued at several hundred thousand dollars. Her husband George W. Young, the New York banker, and her three sisters, it is understood are her chief legatees.

Mme. Nordica's body is expected to arrive in New York about June 25.

GROCER SHOT TO DEATH SUICIDE IS DENIED

New Orleans, May 14.—Frank C. Barbara, grocer 2240 Melpomene St. was found dead, shot over the heart, Wednesday afternoon on the second floor of his home. He was alone.

Relatives say he was cleaning the revolver when it accidently exploded. The location of the wound, however, caused the police to doubt whether he was shot accidentally. The suicide theory is being investigated.

Shortly after noon the grocer went upstairs and remained alone for some time. His wife and others were down stairs in the grocery, it is said, when they heard the shot. He was found on the floor, pistol at his side.

The weapon contained three cartridges, two loaded and one exploded. Mrs. Barbara stated he had not complained of anything to her, and she believed he was killed accidently. Business was good, she said. Besides his wife, a 3-year-old son survives.

ARRESTND FOR WORKING A "LOVE CURE" MACHINE

Two Professors Accused of Fleecing Residents

Boston, May 14.—"Profs" R. Natal and A. Marcelle of 283 Hanover St., who the police say have been fleecing residents of the North end with a machine to cure love and ward off sickness, were in court, yesterday, before Judge Creed, charged with illegally practicing medicine. A circular written in Italian which is said to tell how to use the wondrous "L'Oxypather" was shown by Sergt. O'Donnell who will have it translated and produced in court next Tuesday, when the men have a hearing.

Natal and Marcelle were arrested Thursday night by Sergt. O'Donnell and Patrolman McDonald of the Hanover street station, following many complaints of North end Italians. While looking for witnesses, the police say, they found Emelio Botticello of 49 Charter street in bed at his home with one of the "machines." It consisted of an appliance of cotton batting which was fastened to the patient's wrist, a similar attachment tied to his leg, and a silver bulb connected with the two appliances by a wire. The bulb was in a pail of water near the bed and the cotton soaked in the water, according to the instructions which Botticello said he received.

EIGHT FEET TALL AND STILL GROWING

Paris, May 14.—Despite pages devoted to the elections, to Mexico and to Ulster, the French newspapers have given liberal space to the appearance in Madrid at a circus before King Alfonso of the Breton giant, Eugene Arceau, who is already eight feet in height, weighs over 300 pounds at 19 years of age, and is still growing.

A curious feature of Arceau's case is that his growth invariably occurs during his sleep, which is apparently natural but is frequently prolonged to thirty-six hours. On awakening his stature is found to have increased.

Doctors prophesy that he may easily attain nine feet.

CRIPPLED NEGRO SAVES GIRL FROM DROWNING

New Iberia, La., May 14.— Hilda French the eight-year-old daughter of Captain Rodney French, would in all probability have been drowned in the Bayou Teche Thursday had it not been for the heroism of A. Vidal, a middleaged crippled negro.

The girl fell into the water on her way from school, as the bridge was opened to allow a boat to pass. The negro immediately jumped into the water and reached her as she rose for the second time.

Mayor Fontelieu raised a purse for Vidal and will try and secure for him the Carnegie medal.

ENGLAND IS NOW ALL ALERT OVER WAR'S AWFUL MENACE

Debate on Home Rule Scene Like Many the House Has Seen

London, Eng., May 14.—The debate of yesterday and to-day in the House of Commons will never be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to hear it. On both days the Chamber was crowded to the doors, members overflowing into the corridors, approaches and galleries—all eager to hear pronouncements which might inaugurate or avert a disastrous civil war. The atmosphere was tense with the feeling that the destiny of the nation and of an Empire probably hung in the balance. The mind automatically reverted to former scenes in the august mother of Parliaments, which might be said to present a parallel.

Pitt and his party, it will be remembered, protested long, though unavailingly, against the coercion of American colonies, just as the Unionists to-day oppose the dragooning of Ulster. There was the angry resentment of legislators nearly 100 years earlier against the wanton attempts of James II. to re-establish the Papal dominion in England and in Ireland. There was the revolt of Cromwell against a tyrannical Government The Ulster Volunteers are only regiments of modern Ironsides, who display the same religious fervor as did the Protector's soldiers, who sing the same Psalms of David, and who with equal reverence, could paint upon their cannon the motto, "Oh Lord open thou our mouths, and our lips shall show forth thy praises."

"The Ulster Plot."

The subject of debate was primarily the "Ulster Plot," but the speakers on both sides devoted their most serious periods to the larger issues of the constitutional crisis and to the possibility of composing a settlement.

MEXICAN AGENT IS IN TORONTO WITH MESSAGE

Representative of Carranza Explains Aims of His Leader --Try Huerta for Murder

Toronto, May 14.—The Constitutionalist government of Mexico thought this was an opportune time to send a message to the Canadian people to let them know what was the purpose of Carranza and his followers and so I am here.

Jose Vasconcelos, agent for constitutionalists, arrived in Toronto To-day direct from Washington. He was seen this afternoon. Mr Vasconceols admitted frankly that he was seeking publicity as he had been sent by Carranza to place before the people of Canada the plans and hopes of the Constitutionalists.

Constitutionalist Platform.

There are three chief planks in the platform of the Constitutionalists. First, reform of the system of holding land with the object of subdividing large estates; secondly, establishing of representative democratic principals of Government as against the dictatorial principals of Diaz and Huerta; thirdly, disposing from power of the aristocracy of money, the church, and the official army element.

In case of success, Carranza will place Huerta on trial on the charge of Murdering Madero, his chief, and of turning his forces against his chief The army was responsible with Huerta, as they stood behind him when he deposed Madero.

No Intervention by States.

No American intervention will be accepted by the Constitutionalists, If the United States intervenes, Mr Vasconcelos said that Cattanza and his forces would then have to fight both Huerta and the Americans.

I am sure the Americans will not Intervene, Said Mr Vasconcelos, Mr Wilson is our best friend. I have just come from Washington and I feel sure that there will be no intervention.

STRIPES AND PLAIDS ARE GREATLY FAVORED FOR SPRING

Awning stripes they call them, and although somewhat startling, they are very smart and new. Every season dressmakers and tailors go to meet the spring with bright, boldly figured materials, as a relief, no doubt, for gray skies and chilly winds. It seems to be natural reaction. The new coating materials show these stripes and dress cottons and silks are even more decorative. As usual, no doubt these will give place to more sober, duller effects as the season advances. An extremely effective coat is shown in No. 8227. It is a kimono design in raglan effect and is fashioned of striped golfine; this material closely resembles duvetyn. As duvetyn mantles and coats were so popular for beach and sports wear last summer and as there was rarely a golf player who did not have a coat of this material, the custom arose of calling them "golfines;" the name was passed on to this velvet striped cotton which promises to be so much favored for coats, suits, skirts, etc., the coming spring and summer.

This coat (8227) may be copied in size 36 with 3 yards of 42 inch material. Golfine and the Rodier cottons come from 38 to 45 inches in width and may be purchased from 45 cents a yard up.

Small boys' things have taken on very quaint, pretty lines lately; Dickens suits and short waisted Dutch effects vie for favor with the belted Russian blouses and sailor suits.

No. 8185 is made of striped blue and white striped linen with collar and cuffs of plain white linen. The blouse closes on the right side, and the suit is completed with a pair of short, straight trousers.

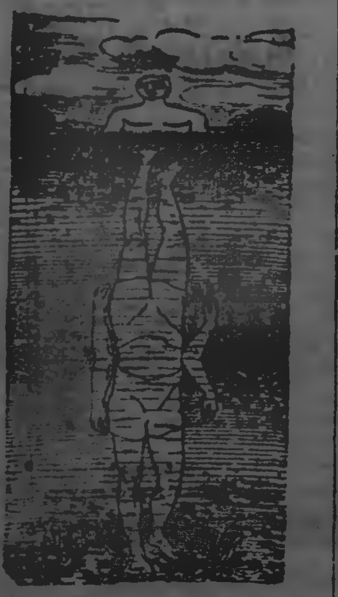
THE OCEAN'S DEPTHS EXPLORED BY FILM

Famous French Scientist, Master of "Oceanography," Takes Parisians on Weird "Trip"

The marvels of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea"—that famous fancy of submarine adventure—are far surpassed in reality, as has just been shown by a scientific "expedition" into the deepest abysses of the Atlantic ocean! M. Louis Joubin, famous French scientist, after years of research, practically "conducted" Parisians on a wonderful voyage from continent to continent in the eternal calm that lies three miles deep under the Atlantic billows. The "trip," however, was really taken at the Oceanographic Institute in Paris—taken by means of moving pictures and lectures on what the floor of the sea looks like.

M. Joubin pretended to lead his hearers down into the ocean from the coast of France. They were shown by films not only fish and plants that have long been familiar to science—but they also made astonishing discoveries as to the way objects appear to a human eye submerged under water. Due to the bending of rays of light when they enter the water and the reflection of rays from the underside of the surface back towards the bottom, it is difficult, Joubin proved to them, to tell the location of the head of a man walking on the bottom, and a double image was produced which was very confusing, as the accompanying sketch shows.



How a man would look if we viewed him under the sea

After crossing the "sidewalk" or comparatively shallow ledge around the coast, the explorers "plunged" suddenly into the abyss. Three solid miles of black salt water rolled over their heads! The freak fish that inhabit those mysterious realms carry their own searchlights—little phosphorescent lamps—about them to illumine the blackness of their native sea. And the floor of the ocean itself is lit up with a pale glow sent out by the thousands of minute animals which cling to it. The ocean floor is covered with gray mud, encrusted with the shells of uncounted millions of tiny animals. The temperature of the ocean depths is so frigid that the bodies of fish that have died in upper layers of the ocean and have fallen to the bottom do not rot, but gradually dissolve, forming a gruesome slime. This many of the sea-beasts eat.

The air that they breathe is also obtained in a curious way. The waters of the ocean near the north Pole are naturally very cold, and cold water is heavy and tends to sink. As it sinks, the warmer water from the tropics flows northward along the surface of the sea and takes its place. But cold water has a tendency to absorb oxygen in great abundance. And so this cold water which sinks to the bottom of the ocean is heavily charged with oxygen. There it forms a current flowing southward to replace the surface water of the tropics which—in the Gulf Stream—is drawn northward as above described.

This deep-sea current, Mr. Joubin's explorers found, is divided in two streams by a great submarine mountain range which extends north and south through the center of the Atlantic. After crossing this range the "explorers" visited Nares Deep between the Bermudas and West Indies where the water is five miles deep; thence they gradually ascended to the shore line of North America.

HIGH PRICES FOR DOGS

English Canine Aristocrats Are Sold to America

When the rage for pugs set in, several enterprising fanciers made expeditions into the East End of London, and picked up for $25 or $40 dogs that they subsequently sold for anything up to $500.

Pekings fetch astonishing prices. There is money, too, in fox terriers. A Bristol gentleman, while strolling through that city a few months ago, saw in a pigeon-shop a small terrier, and, going inside, purchased it for $1.25. It has since won the first prize at a fox terrier show at Bristol, and its value is now, at least $500.

In another case, a fortunate gentleman quickly made $800, plus prizes, out of a fox terrier. Anchor by name, this animal was bought for $35, and knocked down at auction for $500.

Collies sometimes yield still higher prices to their breeders. A well known exhibitor paid $5,000 for Champion Ormskirk Emerald, and more than $5,000 for Champion Southport Perfection.

Even working collies, though generally worth only a fraction as much as the show members of their race, have occasionally realized fancy prices, particularly in Australia, where all the best dogs are of Scottish descent.

A Sutherland gentleman has a breed which has been kept pure for at least 150 years, and he has exported many of the dogs to Australia. For one of these dogs, at the Wangaratta show, a farmer refused a genuine offer of $2,500, the highest bid ever made anywhere for a working collie.

The most remarkable "deal" on record, perhaps, was one which took place at the Dogs' Home, Battersea, London, England. A gentleman who strolled into that institution, without any particular object, took a fancy for a bulldog, which had been picked up in the street, and bought it for a few shillings. And he never regretted it. The animal turned out a wonderful prize-winner, and attained championship honors.

Cement Mushrooms

Among the most uncommon uses to which concrete has been put in Belgium is the making of mushrooms for decorating gardens, and dwarfish figures of gnomes for supporting the garden seats. If the imagination were sufficiently elastic, it might be presumed that the gnomes had pillaged the mushroom garden at night and, to escape detection, had crawled under the seat, where they became concrete images.

Equality of strength in both arms occurs almost twice as frequently with women as with men, more men than women being stronger in the right arm than in the left.

Lumps in Sugar

The simplest way to rid brown sugar of lumps is to put it in a bowl over hot water for a few moments. This softens the sugar so the lumps may be quickly rubbed out.

After washing a lamp chimney, polish with dry salt to make the glass brilliant and prevent it from cracking.

A teaspoonful of vinegar added to the water in which black stockings are rinsed will keep them a good color.

For something new and dainty spread the buttered edge pan with minced dates before turning the candy into it.

City Tree Planting

That the town-planning movement in Canada has come to stay and will have to be reckoned with in the future, is demonstrated by the fact that it has already engaged the attention of several of our prominent legislatures. The year 1912 saw comprehensive town-planning acts passed in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and, last year, Alberta led the way for the Western Provinces. Ontario also has an act applicable to cities with a population of 50,000 and upwards.

At the forthcoming International Conference on City Planning, Toronto, May 25-27, a draft town-planning act, which it is hoped will be a model for all Canadian Provinces, will be submitted to the delegates present by a special committee appointed by the Commission of Conservation. Frank criticism and full discussion of this proposed act will be invited. After being amended in accordance with the resolutions of the Conference, copies will be sent to each Provincial Government, urging them to enact legislation along the lines proposed.

As now drafted, the bill provides for the preparing and carrying-out of town-planning projects by a local Board in each city or two, subject to the approval of a Central Town-Planning Board for the whole province. Projects will apply chiefly to land likely to be used for building purposes, but may in certain circumstances, include land already built upon or land suitable for building. Provision is made for compensation of private owners if injuriously affected and for the local authority recovering half of the unearned increment if property values are increased. The Central Board may act on its own initiative if the local Board fails to do its duty, or if no Local Board exists.

Under such an act, the growth of every town will be regulated so that streets may be of adequate width and in accord with the general plan of the town; housing congestion will not be permitted; sufficient open spaces will be reserved for parks, squares and other municipal purposes; and health, amenity and convenience will be given due consideration in all new building areas and, so far as possible, in old ones.

Painful Swellings Reduced Muscular Strains Ended

Such Troubles Now Quickly Rubbed Away by Powerful Remedy.

If you have any weak muscles that are strained and weak, that are frequently subject to rheumatic pains if you have any painful swellings that refuse to go away—get busy with Nerviline. This is the very sort of trouble that Nerviline is noted for curing quickly. "I have proved Nerviline simply a wonder in reducing a hard, painful swelling. It followed an injury I received in my left leg and caused me great pain and discomfort. The muscles were strained and sore, and no other remedy gave the ease and comfort I got from rubbing on Nerviline. There is a soothing, pain-relieving power about Nerviline that touched the root of my trouble. Nerviline reduced the swelling, it destroyed the pain, it brought my limb back to perfect condition." The experience of Mr. Bowen, whose home is in Middlesex, is not unusual. Thousands are proving every day that muscular pains of every kind, chronic rheumatism, lumbago, neuralgia, and sciatica will yield to Nerviline when nothing else can possibly cure. Nerviline is an old-time family pain remedy, used nearly forty years with great success. The large family size bottle costs 50c., trial size 25c, at all dealers.

ROAD MAINTENANCE

Various Suggestions as to Distributing the Cost of Good Roads

With the appointment of the three highway commissioners by the Ontario Government come various opinions and recommendations regarding the good roads movement throughout the province. In the hope of getting suggestions the secretary of Ontario good roads communicated with the reeves of various townships scattered about the province, and the result was a decided tendency to ask more money from the government. The most common recommendation is that the government pay one-half the cost of good roads construction, instead of one-third, as provided under the Highways Act. A second common demand is that motorists be compelled to pay more towards the roads they help to destroy. Complaints are made that motors wear roads out faster than the townships can afford to keep them repaired, and that it is the motor and not the horse vehicle, which does the bulk of the damage. This seems to be particularly the case in townships lying close to the larger cities. Force motors to pay a high tax, proportionate to weight of the car, is the suggestion. From one county comes the recommendation that the roads leading from large centers of population, bear the full cost, and hold this out as an incentive to the more remote districts. Some districts are not inclined to favor the movement entirely, stating that more progress will have to be made at less cost, or the system will rapidly become unpopular among the people who are now paying the bills. The government, however, might absorb a good share of that cost. The suggestion of a frontage tax comes from another county. It is a recognised thing that improved roads increase the value of adjoining farms and the recommendation is that these farmers help pay for the roads in larger pecentage than those whose farms are benefitted less.

INDIAN HEAD BARN

On the Experimental Farm at Indian Head there is a wonderful barn. Cement work was very largely used in the construction of both the stable—which was completed last autumn—and barn, as both have a 10 foot wall of cement. This material was also used in the floor and stalls of the horse stable and of the basement of the barn, which will be used for the winter feeding of cattle.

The horse stable, which is a huge affair, is splendidly fitted up in every way, while the barn is the last cry in barn-structure. Its dimensions are 8 feet by 116 feet with an elevation of 52 feet. This height gives the building an added appearance of immensity, especially from inside, but there are no posts; the barn is framed with eight large bents, with hip roof.

A goodly space on the ground floor is reserved for work shop, and granaries have also a generous allowance; the windows are hung on weights, and can be easily lowered, indeed, taking it all in all, the barn is so very fine a structure that the fire which destroyed the old buildings may now be regarded as more of a blessing than a curse.

HARVEST OF THE SEA

Great Wealth in the Fisheries of the Pacific Coast

The halibut of British Columbia have an enviable reputation, for they are less over-grown and of finer texture than the Icelandic and North Sea fish; a length of five to six feet and weight of 250 pounds is exceptional for the British Columbia halibut. The waters between Queen Charlotte Islands and the mainland, especially off Rose Spit, and off the west shore of Banks Island, were at one time veritably overcrowded with halibut.

Very large fish were often taken then, some weighing 150 pounds, but the general weight now is only from 20 to 60 pounds. The halibut are scattered all over the strait, but regular migrations have been noticed, and where the waters of Dixon entrance meet the currents, moving from the south through Hecate Strait, and food appears abundant, the fish congregate in large numbers.

The superabundance of herrings on the coast of British Columbia has been recognised from early times, but, as the local demand was insignificant, no herring fishery can be said to have existed, until about thirty years ago. At intervals, and in a desultory way, various parties engaged in the herring industry, and quantities were converted into oil and guano. Within the last ten years, however, the value of this fishery resource has been realised. Herring occur all along the coast as far as Alaska, though in sheltered [illegible], like the waters near Nanaimo, Departure [illegible], Barkley Sound, Virago Sound and Queen Charlotte Islands, the schools appear to form solid phalanxes.

Discovery of Rock Salt

An extensive bed of rock salt has been discovered on the Skeena River, about 65 miles from Prince Rupert. Five holes have been drilled, about a mile apart, and salt has been struck in every case at depths varying from 50 to 250 feet. About eight tons of salt has been raised. The product is absolutely pure and of the best quality.

Clocks Without Faces

Clocks without hands or faces are now common in Switzerland. The timepiece stands in the hall, and when a button is pressed, by means of phonographic arrangements, it calls out "Half-past five," or "Five minutes to nine," as the case may be.

Hanging Out Clothes

If clothes-pins are well heated in the oven before hanging out clothes, the fingers will not become chilled.

Unscrewing a Cover

If the top of a jar or can is difficult to unscrew, try clasping it first with a piece of sandpaper. Then the grip is firmer and more efficacious.

GASOLINE FUMES

The Gas Given off by This Popular Fuel Acts Like an Anesthetic

Gasoline fumes, in addition to being highly inflammable, are also poisonous to the human being. This fact has only recently been developed by medical authorities and it is possible that its discovery might have the effect of explaining some deaths that have been assigned as probably due to other causes. The fumes are poisonous under certain conditions and it is well to have these conditions thoroughly understood, else there may be more deaths from this cause. Combined with enough air there is little or no danger, but when a person is subjected to the influence of the fumes in a confined place the chances are that they will be affected in a way that might have fatal results. So far as their investigations have gone the chemists and medical men who have investigated gasoline poisoning have come to the conclusion that its effects are very much like being overcome with an anesthetic. The victim suddenly collapses and becomes unconscious. During the period when consciousness is lost the people behave very much as do people who have been subjected to ether as an anesthetic. Some of them fight and scream and some of them are perfectly still. As in the case of an anesthetic, the recovery is dependent on the individual. It is not often that there are any bad effects from it, however. In a number of cases that have occurred in Montreal, where the discovery of the poisonous nature of the fumes has been investigated, recovery has been prompt and the victims were able to return to work the next day. In all of these cases, however, restorative measures were commenced immediately on the men being overcome—the victims being men in these cases—so that there is no evidence of what the fumes will do if the person overcome by them is not given immediate attention. That is, there is no positive evidence so far as the Montreal authorities know. There have been cases where deaths occurred which, in light of the discovery that has been made, may safely be assigned to inhaling gasoline fumes. One of these was the case of a man who was painting or cleaning the inside of a gasoline tank and was found dead. Another was the case of a chauffeur who was found dead in a garage where there was no ventilation and where the fumes of gasoline were very strong. It is pointed out that, in view of the universal custom of using gasoline as a cleaning material by women, it would be well to see that the room where it is used, is well ventilated with a steady current of fresh air. There is no danger so long as the fumes are not confined—just as there is little or no danger of explosion when the gas is allowed to mingle freely with the air.

A RECORD STURGEON

One Fish Provided a Meal for 1,000 People

Very seldom indeed is the sturgeon the finny monster which Edward II. made a Royal fish, and which, when caught in the Thames, becomes the property of the Crown, captured in English waters nowadays. For this reason not a little interest was aroused a few days ago when it was announced that a sturgeon 9 feet 9 inches in length, weighing 429 pounds, had been caught in the River Delph at Welney Washes, near Littleport, Norfolk. This fish, which according to the estimate of a salesman at Spitalfields, who ultimately sold it for $30, would provide a meal for nearly 1,000 people, had been noticed in the river, and attempts had been made to shoot it. But the cartridges used were loaded with shot too small to have any effect on the sturgeon's hard skin. A large net, therefore, was drawn across the river, after which a boat was rowed alongside the fish, when one of the men succeeded in forcing in large and powerful hook attached to a strong pole into his throat. This enabled him to keep its head out of water just long enough for the fish to be killed with a gun. Some idea of its size and weight may be gathered from the fact that five men were required to land it. This, however, is by no means the largest sturgeon which has been caught in English waters. The record was a fish weighing 460 pounds, while in the North Sea fish weighing as much as 562 pounds and 735 pounds have been captured by trawlers. It is pointed out that one of the most remarkable facts about the fish netted in the North Sea is that they are similar to the American species, whence it would seem that the specimens caught from time to time in our waters must have made the voyage across the Atlantic, since the fish appears to have died out as a regular inhabitant of British waters. Sturgeons pass the greater part of the year in the sea, but periodically ascend large rivers, and it was due to this characteristic that the specimen was caught recently in the River Delph. Not only do they attain great size and weight, but, according to the estimates of som experts, they sometimes live as long as two hundred years. Apropos of the fact that Edward II. made the sturgeon a Royal fish, it is interesting to note that its flesh, quite apart from the fact that caviare is made from the roe, is always held in great estimation, and in olden days was always reserved for the table of the King.

Ten-year-Old Pickpocket

An extraordinary case of juvenile pocketpicking was dealt with at Clydebank Police Court, a girl of ten years of age being charged with four different thefts of purses with money from women who were making purchases at various shops. The fiscal said the girl was nothing short of being an expert pickpocket. The first purse she stole she placed on the tramway rails in order, when a car passed over it, that all trace of it would be destroyed. [illegible]

DUELLING DAYS

Young Bloods Practised With Long-Barrelled Pistols

By the end of the seventeenth century the pistol had come fairly into vogue as a duellist's weapon in England, and from that time forward pistol duels were frequent—more frequent than those with the sword. Gunmakers devoted their best workmanship to duelling pistols, and at duelling range, say up to twenty paces, these weapons were as near perfection as skill could make them. The latter-day pistol had a ten-inch barrel and carried a ball of 48 to the pound. Only constant practice would make a good shot, and a very high standard of marksmanship was set for those who aspired to be considered an expert with the pistol. When he could hit twelve wafers at fourteen yards, and do it within six minutes, loading his pistol himself between shots, he might consider himself proficient; and it will be borne in mind that the muzzle-loading pistol took several seconds to properly charge.

Proficiency, of course, was not everything. It was quite as daunting to face a pistol at twelve yards as to face the sword at close quarters, and no proficiency at wafers would atone for nervousness on the ground. One ardent practitioner schooled himself with a contrivance of his own invention. He had the life-size figure of a man with a bracketed hand in which a pistol could be held at the "present," and by means of a cord from the trigger of the pistol in the dummy's grasp to his own belt, he discharged the weapon himself as he fired his own pistol, by slightly drawing back.

Great stress was laid on the importance of aiming at a small object. "Mark well one of the gilt buttons on his coat; a person can never fire with accuracy unless he aim at some small object." Which explains why the experienced duellist "went out" dressed entirely in black, that his person might offer no such mark as the gilt button of an older day.

Being in position, the man each held his arm well in to the side and raised his pistol to the proper level, keeping the head straight, the eyes turned as much to the right as possible, and the pistol directed steadily towards the small object—that gilt button, if the adversary were so obliging to wear such. "Move only the forefinger, and that with just sufficient force to discharge the pistol," was a rule supposed to be carefully observed.

An Ancient Bank Note

St. Petersburg's Asiatic Museum claims to have a Chinese bank note issued at Pekin in 2800 B.C. It is similar to those now in use. It is of thick white paper, inscribed in blue ink. Round the border is engraved the counsel: "However much you may possess, strive to be thrifty." If its date is authentic it disposes at one blow of a number of seemingly well-substantiated facts. It throws back the use of written characters at least 1,000, and the invention of printing more than 3,000 years and proves that a highly developed state of civilization and an utterly unsuspected economic system must have existed under the Emperor Fu Hsi, who has hitherto been treated as a purely legendary monarch.

ROYAL YACHTSMEN

Apropos of King George's success as a yachtsman, it is interesting to note that yachting in bygone times owed much to English sovereigns, from Queen Elizabeth, who had a fine pleasure schooner built at Cowes, to William IV., who founded the Royal Yacht Squadron; but the keenest of all Royal yachtsmen was Charles II. In all, the Merry Monarch owned fourteen yachts, ranging from twenty-five to 166 tons, and one of them, the "Jamie," was designed by the King himself and built at Lambeth under his supervision. Charles and his brother James generally steered their yachts themselves, and Evelyn, in his diary for October 1st, 1661, describes a sailing match between the Royal brothers—the first contest of the kind in British waters of which we have any record.

Crownless Hat at Chic Angle Newest Vogue

By Madge Marvel

THE crownless hat is meeting with approval for semi-dress occasions or for evening wear, when some manner of head covering is needed to complete the costume.

It has charm, if it remains worn only by the few; the minute it becomes popular it will become absurd.

Naturally it surrounds a high and elaborate coiffure. But those two adjectives belong to the fashionable mode of hairdressing.

For evening wear tresses are piled high on top of the head in a soft knot or coil which has the pyramidal form. The side hair is waved but not puffed out, and a modern version of the French twist goes up the middle back of the head. The forehead and ears are both allowed to show. Sometimes the "kiss-curl" adorns the cheek, but if one is much up to date, the curl is multiplied and left to cling caressingly to the nape of the neck.

One hopes the foolish fashion of bangs or this portion of the head will not be revived.

Season's Hat Motto.

With the brim of the crownless hat placed at the right angle and the coiffure properly dressed the effect is desirable.

NEW DREAMS ❋ ❋ ❋ By Michelson

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

EVERY season has its dreams. Perhaps this is what makes each new dream seem freshly wonderful.

But the really astonishing and puzzling thing about dreams is that you don't need to go to sleep to enjoy them.

Those that come when you are wide awake are called DAY DREAMS. Jolly dreams these, because you control them, pat and steer and mould them to suit your fancy. The bluest blue, and the greenest green, and the goldenest gold are all blended in these dreams—and the most charming PERSONS inhabit them.

Knights of old, princes and pageant-makers of the bedizened past may have been all very well in their way, but these NEW persons in these new dreams have a way of finishing the picture—especially on the brink of June. Naturally, ALL dreams can't come true. This is what makes them so much of a gamble. And it depends a good deal on how sincere you are, doesn't it?—or on how much you WANT them to come true?

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By Leona Dalrymple

Author of "Diane of the Green Van," Awarded a Prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as Judges.

[illegible] readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

Insistent Sympathy.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

WITHOUT doubt, the most trying sort of ailment in the universe is the sort that grants you complete health outside of a disability to move about. Recently I sat bolstered up for days in a Morris chair by the window, frowning at a lame foot and taking an inordinate interest in the most trivial happenings in the neighborhood. I knew that little Billy Ruggs could thrash anything in the street and I gloried in it. Still, with a certain inconsistent irritability, I greatly desired to see some one come along and take it out of Billy!

It frequently irritates men with their opportunity for bigger interest in bigger things to hear women give an exaggerated importance to neighborhood incidents, incidents that would seem to a man too utterly futile and anaemic in their appeal to mention. But, after a number of days at home, I felt that same sense of values myself. There's something about four walls and quietude broken only by the whistle of a grocer or a baker that develops it.

I admit I was cranky and irritable. But I must say that a well woman who insists upon being over-sympathetic is the most irritating influence in the universe. Mary nearly drove me mad. Something like this happened nearly every hour:

"Can you think of anything you'd like for your dinner?"

"No. I don't feel much like thinking."

"Is your foot any worse?"

"No. I shouldn't say it was any worse."

"Is it any better?"

"No, I shouldn't say it was any better, either."

"Well, how is it, then?"

"Confound it, Mary, it's scarcely five minutes ago that you put me through exactly this sort of invalid catechism. My foot doesn't change every minute."

Silence.

"Peter—"

"For heaven's sake, Mary, don't ask me again—"

"I wasn't going to. I was merely going to ask you if you'd taken your medicine."

"Yes."

"When?"

"Exactly on the hour. Don't see why I have to take it anyway. My health's all right."

"Well, don't forget that you take the other medicine on the half-hour. The doctor thinks this is an excellent time to give you a tonic and fix up your nervous system. And you must need it, Peter, or you wouldn't be so grouchy."

Now, if I had to answer that series of questions once in an hour, I had to answer it from six to eight times. There were times when I thought I'd go mad and fling a cushion at Mary when she began. Usually when I fixed her with a warning stare, however, she'd glide over and adjust something about my foot, fuss a little, look at my medicine and look at the clock and sigh. It always stirred me into quite as much secret irritability as the questions.

What terrible bores women can be! How they fuss and question, largely through a very real and affectionate solicitude—none the less trying, however, for the commendable ground from which it springs.

A woman always has a charitable desire to help; she'd lots rather be ill herself than have any one about her ailing; but—her sympathy, I think, is sentimentally exaggerated and morbid. It isn't the breezy, wholesome sympathy of a man.

Women are too insistent in sympathy—men at times a little too casual, but surely there is a middle course that would be most gratifying to an invalid.

How to Round the Arms

By MAGGIE TEYTE

The Noted Prima Donna

"ARMS and the Woman." In this sleeveless age of fashion, make beauty culturists seek for means for rounding and smoothing and whitening—yes, and dimpling elbows, of making forearms rounded and wrists graceful. Far, far better long, all enveloping sleeves in evening gowns than a display of red, rough and awkward arms.

Many a woman who spends hours coaxing her skin back to the freshness of youth, who is perfectly manicured, whose throat shows the whiteness and roundness of care is absolutely neglectful of her arms.

Yet when the sleeveless mode is ordered by the dressmakers she has not the slightest hesitancy in following it, though her arms be such that the Venus of Milo would be entirely reconciled after one glance to the loss of her own.

Arm culture is well worth while. A lovely arm is a possession any woman may rightfully desire and patiently acquire.

Some those of us who do not wear sleeveless evening frocks will probably wear elbow sleeves before the summer shall have waxed and waned.

The first requisite of beautiful arms is cleanliness.

Don't get indignant. Your arms may look perfectly clean. But let me whisper one little word in your ear. If your elbows and the upper portion of your arms had always been kept scrupulously clean, as clean as your face, there would be no disturbing roughness, no more than there will be blackheads in a clean face.

The first thing to do in [illegible] beautiful arms is to scrub them [illegible] the skin is freed from all dirt and dead skin and glowing with the brilliancy of awakened flesh.

Use a good flesh brush and some pure soap and warm water, and perhaps a softening handful of oatmeal or almond meal.

Then massage with good skin food. Probably the scrubbing will make the arms red, in which case use less energy.

There is no better skin food for the development of the arms and wrist than one made by melting 5 cents' worth each of spermaceti and white wax and powdered camphor together and mixing with enough pure olive oil to make it the right consistency for a massage cream.

When you rub this into the arms do so with a rotary motion, beginning at the wrist and working upward. If there is great roughness at the elbow or the outside of the upper arm I advocate toilet pumice used with gentle friction.

At the elbow the proper procedure is to bend the arm and, placing the thumb of the opposite hand inside the elbow joint, massage with the fingers the point of the elbow round and round and round with considerable pressure and plenty of cream.

While you have the arm in this position exercise the forearm by clasping and unclasping the fist and by stretching the fingers and flexing the entire hand. Another exercise which teaches grace belongs in the Delsarte system. It consists of letting the hands become perfectly limp and then shaking them over the head with energy, letting them roll on the wrists as a pivot. It will make your arms feel "dizzy," that is, they will feel as if they had been asleep and had just waked up. That is exactly what has happened. The blood and skin has been awakened and the "dizziness" is a good sign.

Light dumb-bells will help in arm exercise. The hand needs to be firmly closed with some little resistance to make the exercise telling.

Some great beauty when asked what made her arms and hands so beautifully white, said "Sour [illegible] made with milk." [illegible] whitening agents. [illegible] milk, and let it sour, [illegible]

Lemon juice w[illegible] freckles. Another [illegible] remedy, as good for [illegible] hands and arms, is [illegible] teaspoonful of fresh [illegible] into a cupful of sour milk. Let it stand for six hours before using.

If there is anything more annoying in the way of disfigurement on arms than freckles it is hair. The simplest and safest depilatory of which I have knowledge consists of equal parts of sulphide of barium and cornstarch mixed with water to make a paste. Allow it to dry on the arm and scrape off, and it will bring the hairs with it. If the skin is tender I would mix the same quantity of oxide of zinc with the other ingredients.

There are numerous exercises for the arms which you probably know, for gymnastics form so large a part of school curriculum. The beautiful arm—the kind Venus of Milo probably had—must be just right in rotund development.

New Delicious Sandwiches.

Anchovies, boned and rubbed to a paste with the yolks of hard boiled eggs seasoned with Parmesan cheese, a dash of paprika and enough cream to make moist is a delicious filling for brown bread.

Caviare makes the sandwich de luxe in the opinion of many. To a quarter of a pound of Russian caviare add three tablespoons of lemon juice and the same amount of olive oil and beat till creamy. Spread between thin slices of bread.

Celery sandwiches made with one cup of finely shredded celery to which is added one-fourth cup each of finely chopped nuts and olives and moistened with mayonnaise are delicious.

For a delicious confection to serve with tea Marguerites hold first place and are simply made. The only warning is to keep them in a dry place.

Cream cheese mixed with chopped walnuts or cream cheese mixed with pimento seasoned with paprika and salt and moistened with a bit of cream or butter are always desirable.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

How Nature Punishes You If You Break Her Laws

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

A WHIP for the horse, a bridle for the ass and a rod for the back of fools, sang Solomon. It is heavy and dull, perhaps, to agree with an ancient, but it is equally clever and bright to say that he who spareth the rod hateth his son.

For each particular physical and health crime a strict account will be quickly exacted by nature—indeed, much more so than from any infringement of the codes of man.

Every man will inevitably suffer in himself the measure of his own felonies, be they what they might. Health, like right, lives by nature's law, which is held by power. Disarm the shepherd, and wolves the flock devour.

Once you plan to build, then you map your plot. The model next is drawn, and soon the miniature house. The cost of construction then you estimate.

Find you, then, that the whole outweighs your ability, you begin again a whole plan to resurvey with fewer chambers. Perchance prudence comes forthwith and you desist and do not build at all.

He who in proper season makes hygienic hay while the Apollo of Health shines, who lays his plans for a fabric of textile reserve, will store up for future life a large modicum of tissue strength.

Sin, however, but an infinitesimal billionth of a unit as far as balance and equilibrium are concerned, and your house of cards will be demolished at the first foul breath of microbic air.

A staff is quickly found to beat off a rabid dog, and a spoiled child knows no punishment. Mending morals, no less than making fewer maladies, must be the outgrowth of punishment.

If you, by fortuitous conjunctions of family ties, racial coddling and other accidental pampering devices, reach the notorious position of a widely heralded expert, carrying everything before you with high-handed and unpunished impudence, then when you are finally hauled into the court of even-handed justice, your self-awakening fall will be all the greater.

The expert, no less than other weak-minded mortals, that has never been flogged either literally or metaphorically by fate is storing up a whirlwind at some not too distant day.

The genius, wit, health and spirit of any individual is usually in direct proportion to the breadth, length, quantity and variety of the pummellings, bastinados, corrections and punishments received.

Punishment, like correct medicine, brings a beneficent reward; much the same as bread cast upon the water. It is fished up later as a school of delicious fish.

There is much brightness in the sky for those who broadly think or bravely die. He is not always best paid who is most easily satisfied.

Blessings always wait on well planned deeds, though often late a certain reward succeeds.

"On, friend and foe, breathe soft and calm.
As ship with ship in battle meets,
And while the sea gods watch the fleets
Let him who merits bear the palm."

❋ Advice to Girls ❋

By ANNIE LAURIE

Dear Annie Laurie:

I have a great problem which I wish you would solve for me.

I have been keeping company with a young man about 25 years of age. I myself am only 15. I love him dearly, and he has asked me to marry him.

I have been keeping house for my father and two brothers, and don't know what to do. I love them, of course, and yet I love my young man.

ANXIETY.

WHY you foolish little girl, you—what in the world is your father thinking about to let you even dream of marrying when you're only 15 years old?

Why, you are nothing but a dear little girl yet; you ought to have your dresses up to your shoe tops and your hair down in a braid—and, whisper, don't you like to play with dolls once in a while even yet?

What sort of a man can this be who wants to trap you into marriage at your age? And besides, will the law allow you to marry under 18? It won't in my part of the country.

What do you want to do, tie a weight to your ankle, draw wrinkles in your face, throw away at least six years of a perfectly good girlhood?

Some one ought to take that father of yours and give him a good talking to for allowing any one to put such an idea into your head.

Stay young as long as you can, little girl; you'll have care enough and trouble enough soon enough, don't you worry about that. Tell your 25-year-old sweetheart to go and hunt for some one nearer his own age, or to wait like a man till you grow to be a woman.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care this office.

How Common Things Originated

The use of glass antedates written history. The Egyptians attributed the discovery to their gods. Pliny says the discovery of glass was made in Syria. Glass windows have been found in Pompeii and Herculaneum.

The design of the American flag was probably borrowed from the family arms of Gen. Washington, which consisted of three stars in the upper portion and three bars across the escutcheon.

The first silk dress worn in Europe was sported by a lady of the French court in 1455. The first pair of silk stockings worn in Europe adorned the ankles of Henry II. of France in 1559.

Marine insurance was practised in Rome B. C. 45. It was very general in Europe before the discovery of America, and it is altogether probable that the ships of Columbus were insured for their full value.

The first regular standing army was in Egypt, about 1600 B. C. The first modern standing force was in France, in 1445. The first permanent military force in England was the King's guard of yeomen, established in 1486.

Stockings are first mentioned in literature as being already worn in Italy about the year 1100. They are alluded to as a great invention and far superior to the former practice of wrapping the feet in cloth bandages.

Our Bird Friends

THE NUTHATCH

THIS bird might readily be mistaken by the careless observer for a common woodpecker, but its note, an oft repeated "yank," is very unwoodpecker-like. Unlike woodpeckers, also, it climbs downward as easily as it does upward, seemingly setting the laws of gravity at defiance.

The name, white-breasted nuthatch, was suggested by its habit of wedging nuts, especially beechnuts, in the crevices of bark so as to break them open with blows from its sharp, strong bill.

On a Hunt for His Breakfast.

The nuthatch gets its living from the trunks and branches of trees over which it creeps from daylight to dark. Insects and spiders constitute a little more than [illegible] per cent. of its food. The largest items of these are beetles, moths and caterpillars, with ants and wasps. Lady bird beetles are its favorite delicacies.

The nuthatch does no injury, so far as known, and much good.

Its coloring is rather subdued, gray with white spots, but the contrast between the blue top of the head and the white of the throat is vivid.

A NERVY ACTRESS

Allowed Herself to be Dragged by Hair Before "Movie" Film

Alice Rhodes is "the movie girl with the wonderful hair." Her golden red hair falls to her knees when it is loose. But—take note, it is not always all joy to be blessed with "a crown of glory." That is, if you happen to be a "movie" star.

A short while ago Miss Rhodes was playing in a spectacular picture which Edwin August was putting on out west. "We are going to tie you by the hair," said realistic August, "to this tree limb. And you are going to be dragged over the ground."

"By the hair?" whispered Miss Rhodes in an almost inaudible voice

"By the hair," answered Edwin A.

There is nothing to do but do in the "movies" if you want to make good, so Miss Rhodes gritted her teeth and loosened her hair.

ALICE RHODES

To make it possible to carry out the realistic picture and still not injure Miss Rhodes, strands of rope, the same color as her hair were bound around her head and woven into the locks. This was so that the force of the dragging should come, not on the roots of the hair, but upon the rope around her head.

The plan, adroitly worked out, proved successful. So did the picture

CLEARLY MARKED PATH

Lime Will Give Sense of Security in Lonely Communities

Did you ever tread a path across a field, or through a wood, at night, stumble over vegetation, tin cans, rocks or rotten branches?

If so, you will appreciate every man's "great white way," which is made possible by scattering lime along the pathway. The lime makes the path as definite and certain as the most brilliantly lighted thoroughfare and costs next to nothing.

How People Feel
When They Have
Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ½ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4830, or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

French Aviator Brought Model of New Machine to Canada

Romin Garros, brother of Paul Garros, the famous French airman, exhibited an interesting object to some Montreal newspapermen. It was the model of his brother's new aeroplane, said to be able to defy air pockets, one of the most fatal dangers to airmen. Garros explained the technical points of the machine.

"I am on my way to visit at the Bleriot farm in the west," said he, "and I take with me this little model. It does not look much, but it may prove the means of saving thousands of airmen's lives. It does what we call increasing the inherent stability of the plane, and this little apparatus which you see on the sides acts as a defence against sudden air currents, that is, they enable the airman to regain his balance after being tipped over. We are experimenting with this new plane in France, and are working it to a high stage of perfection. We are not saying much about it until we perfect it, but since you saw the model under my arm I have told you something about it."

Poultry Industry

The value of the poultry industry to New Zealand was stated at a conference of poultrymen to be two millions sterling per annum, this sum changing hands for products, produce and materials in order to keep the industry going. The average price of eggs and table poultry was fully 50 per cent. higher than it was ten years ago. Five years ago they could count on one hand the number of persons engaged in poultry farming for a living. Now they could be numbered by the score. Farmers too, were giving poultry their attention, since they were realizing that the high prices received for eggs and table birds made the keeping of poultry a valuable adjunct to farm pursuits.

DR. OSLER ON DRUGS

Eminent Canadian Doctor Not a Great Medicine Giver

Dr. (Sir) William Osler is probably the greatest living authority on the use of drugs in the treatment of disease. At one time a professor in John Hopkins University, Dr. Osler was appointed Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford University, England, and he is regarded by the doctors of every English-speaking country as a great authority.

Dr. Osler says of diphtheria:

"We are still without drugs which can directly counteract the tox-albumens of the disease, and we must rely upon general measures of feeding and stimulants to support the strength. Medicines given internally are of little avail in diphtheria."

Concerning pneumonia, Dr. Osler says:

"Pneumonia is a self-limited disease which can neither be cut short nor aborted by any known means at our command. Even under the most unfavorable circumstances it may terminate abruptly and naturally without a dose of medicine having been administered. There is no specific treatment of pneumonia. The young practitioner may bear in mind that patients are more often damaged than helped by the too promiscuous system of drugging, which is still only too prevalent."

Of scarlet fever, Dr. Osler says:

"Ordinary cases do not require any medicine. Medical antipyretics are not of much service in comparison with cold water."

Of measles, Dr. Osler says:

"Confinement in bed in a well ventilated room and light diet are the only measures necessary in uncomplicated cases."

Of whooping-cough, Dr. Osler says:

"The medical treatment is most unsatisfactory."

Of yellow fever:

"Careful nursing and a systematic plan of diet probably give the best results."

Of dysentery:

"The treatment of dysentery by topical applications is by far the more rational plan."

Natural Timepiece

There is no need for clocks on the Ægean Sea any day when the sun is shining. There nature has arranged her only timepiece, one that does not vary through the centuries. This natural time-marker is the largest sundial in the world. Projecting into the blue waters of the sea is a large promontory, which lifts its head three thousand feet above the waves. As the sun swings round, the pointed shadow of the mountain just touches one after the other, a number of small islands, which are at exact distances apart, and act as hour marks on the great dial.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

Written by

DR. DAVID H. REEDER,

Chicago, Ill.

ELIMINATION: Most of us find the problem of alimentation more or less difficult, and I presume that much more thought is devoted to the matter of getting something to eat than to the matter of getting rid of the surplus waste matter that we have eaten, and yet the two processes are of vital importance and I might say of equal importance. I recently told you about constipation simply from the standpoint of evacuation of the bowels. There are other methods of elimination, however, of even greater importance. The entire surface of the body is covered with little openings which are constantly at work eliminating waste matter. If these openings were all closed and prevented from performing their duties for even a few hours, death would surely follow. If the entire body was covered with a solid coat of varnish, the work of these organs of elimination would cease, what now passes off in both visible and invisible perspiration would be retained and as the lungs and kidneys could not throw it off fast enough the poison thus retained would soon cause a fatal ending.

The liver, kidneys, lungs and skin are all active in the work of elimination and if any one of these is not doing its duty, trouble follows. Keep the skin active by all means. If you do not perspire freely under heat or active exercise, you should at once investigate and learn the reason and apply the proper means for putting the skin into normal health as quickly as possible.

On page 263 of the Home Health Club book, Volume 2, I have given full and careful directions for the preparation of a simple home made solution, out of materials now in your own kitchen that will at once put the skin in perfect health. If you have not the book I will cheerfully tell you about it in a letter.

There are a vast number of people whose systems are literally filled with waste and poisonous matter. They are not sick enough to go to bed or call a doctor, but they suffer and are not at any time wholly efficient, not at their best, don't enjoy their food don't really enjoy life. The complexion is muddy or the face is covered with pimples or blackheads Poor elimination is at the bottom of 90 per cent of these cases. This is especially unfortunate in the case of women and girls. One of the first duties of a woman is to look well as if she has a clean, clear complexion and a bright animated expression she will look well no matter what the features may be. She cannot have a perfect complexion without perfect elimination and neither can she have the bright cheerful and happy look of health.

I wish you could read just a few of the scores and scores of letters that I receive from men as well as women, telling of the vast improvement in their feelings as well as looks after following the Home Health Club methods of clean living which means cleanliness inside as well as outside. Don't you want to look well and to be well?

Dear Doctor: What treatment do you advise for a severe case of the "blues" or melancholia? I know of a young man about 30 years of age, unmarried, that drank some, and smoked quite heavily up to the first of the year. He began worrying a good deal over business and private matters about the first of the year and for the past month he has been in a very bad state. He has no energy, mental or physical and nothing seems to interest him. His appetite is fair, bowels move regularly and he sleeps pretty good, but wakes up with a dread of something and sleep does not seem to refresh him and he seems unable to get his mind on anything but his condition. Since getting this feeling he has quit drinking and smokes very seldom and has been taking good care of himself but seems unable to get back to his old self and is becoming alarmed over his condition.

E. W.F.

Melancholia is a diseased condition of the mind. It is held to be a form of insanity, though of course, those who are subject to what is known as the Blues, cannot be considered insane. Still it is a medical disorder, which should be treated as such and only by persistant efforts such cases can be entirely cured. Best would be for your friend to go away from home and business and stay a few months at a Nature Cure Sanitarium where he would receive splendid care and encouragement, which I believe would more than anything else prove what he needs. Much depends upon the surroundings, the right kind of diet, proper exercise and hygenic measures in general. There is no medicine so be depended upon to cure ailments of that kind, though many injurious drugs are often prescribed. The more poisons are given, the worse the condition will become. In same cases a few months at a country club where there is plenty of chance for outdoor sport will benefit a great deal. A friend of mine was habitually subject to spells of the Blues. I went with him once myself on a 2 week trip up in the Northwest hunting and the Blues soon disappeared. All kinds of outdoor sports is to be recommended hunting, fishing, golfing, anything that will interest him and make him forget about himself and imaginary troubles.

Possibly the fact that he suddenly quit drinking and smoking may have something to do with it. Melancholia is the most frequently curable form of insanity. As long as the patients do not evince suicidal tendencies, they may be kept with friends or relatives. It is of but little use to try to argue them out of their melancholy thought it is always best never to scold or laugh at their expressions, but try to turn their thoughts upon other subjects. Remember that the greatest kindness must be shown all such sufferers. Frequent bathing, nourishing and easily digested food, fresh air in abundance, daily evacuations of the bowels are other important factors in overcoming Melancholia.

SIOCLAIR AND FLOUR WOMEN FINED $3; TWO WOMEN PAY UP

New York, May 14.- Upton Sinclair and the four women who were arrested with him yesterday in front of the Standard Oil building when they paraded as "mourners" protesting against John D. Rockefeller, Jr's policy in the Colorado mine war were today found guilty of disorderly conduct and each was sentenced to pay a fine of $3 with the alternate of three days in jail.

Sinclair, Mrs. Donie Lietner and Mrs. Elizabeth Freeman refused to pay the fine. Mrs. Belle Zilverman and Mrs. Margaret Remington Charter said they would pay.

Sinclair made a speech in court, saying he was on the verge of a physical treatment, but that he would go to jail and begin a hunger strike. He promptly was locked up.

Mrs. Sinclair joined the "mourners" in the rain this afternoon. She said she had heard that her husband had been sentenced to jail, but she considered it more important to march in front of the Standard Oil building than to visit him.

SINGLE TAX THEORY ON TRIL FOR LIFE

Mobile, Ala., May 14.—The single tax theory of Henry George is on trial for its life in the courts of Alabama, with the opening of a suit for dissolution against the Fairhope Colony in Baldwin County, the principal experiment of the single tax theory in the United States.

Alexander J. Melville, a member and lessee of the corporation, to-day [illegible] in chancery seeking its dissolution. The bill alleges that the corporation has failed entirely because the single tax theory can never be tried out in any jurisdiction whose laws deny the essentials of that theory.

It is charged that the moneys of the company are being expended for the benefit of only a portion of the tenants and members. The bill especially attacks the effort made to apply the single tax theory.

Mr. Wainwright Ill for a Month; Death Occurred at Atlantic City, N.J.

Montreal, May 15.—Word has been received here of the death at Atlantic City of Mr. William Wainwright, senior Vice-President of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways. Mr. Wainwright, who was 74 years of age, had been critically ill for a month from neuralgia and complications. He had gone to the New Jersey resort to recuperate. Although not much improvement was seen in his condition arrangements had been made to bring Mr. Wainwright home to-morrow. Several of his relatives were with him to the end.

The late Mr. Wainwright was one of the best known railroad men on the American continent, in fact it was said of him that he was as well known in the capitals of North America as the late King Edward was in the capitals of Europe.

Gentlemen,—On behalf of the Publicity and Entertainment Committee of the Board of Trade of St. Catharines, I desire to express our appreciation of the manner in which you decorated the city for the visit of their Royal Highnesses, the Duke of Connaught and Princess Patricia, on May 11th.

Expressions of appreciation of the decorations were heard on every hand and their Royal Highnesses passed very complimentary remarks.

Your staff of decorators, under your Mr. Campbell, were very courteous and did everything asked of them by the committee.

Yours very truly,

KNOX CHURCH TOMORROW CENTRE OF ATTRACTION

Knox Presbyterian church will be the centre of interest to-morrow on account of the visit of Rev. Dr. Hanson, of Erskine Church, Montreal, at the opening of the new pipe organ. Dr. Hanson came two years ago to Erskine Church, Montreal from distinguished pastorates in Belfast and London. He is regarded as one of the strongest preachers of the Presbyterian church in Canada. He will officiate at the opening of a very handsome fine toned pipe organ in Knox church, built by the Cassavant Brothers of St. Hyacinthe, Quebec. The organ is finished in solid oak with pipes in gold bronze and green. There are two manuals, a radiating petal board, pneumatic piston and tablet combination pedals. It will complete Knox church and add greatly to its appearance. Mr. Geo. Kenyon, organist and choir leader will preside to-morrow while the choir will render appropriate music. On Tuesday evening Dr. Norman Anderson of New St. Andrew's church, Toronto will give an organ recital, assisted by the choir and other well known musicians.

MAY STAND FOR DOMINION HOUSE

Mr. A. H. Stratton SaiT to be a Possible Liberal Candidate

For some considerable time the Liberals of East and West Peterborough have been quietly looking around for a candidate to contest the ridings in the interests of their party for both Local and Dominion Legislatures. In West Peterborough, Messrs. G. N. Gordon, R. R. Hall, J. H. Garbutt and others have been mentioned in connection with the Ontario House. It is admitted that the outlook for victory is not too bright, and it has been hinted that instead of running a straight party candidate that an Independent Conservative be chosen to oppose the straight Conservative nominee. Needless to say this is not satisfactory to the rank and file of the party, and The Times is of the opinion that someone will be found to lead the "forlorn hope."

The outlook for the Dominion House is not much better, the general feeling amongst the Liberals as well as Conservatives being that our present member is a credit to the riding and has done more for this city and county during his term than all the other members put together have done in the past. It is results that count, and Mr. Burnham certainly has produced results. It would therefore appear that it will be equally as difficult for the Liberals to produce a candidate who will have any chance of carrying the party colors to victory. No doubt there are those who think differently, and The Times has learned from what it believes to be good authority that the name of Mr. A. H. Stratton will be presented at the Liberal Convention when it meets in this connection. Mr. Stratton, while without preliminary experience is regarded by many as the best possible selection from the party's standpoint. He is well known as a fairly good speaker, and is no doubt well schooled in the political game as played by experienced politicians. Mr. Stratton may feel that while the defeat is inevitable just now, the clouds which over-hang the political horizon may not always be dark and unbroken.

HON. F.D. MONK'S DEATH SADDENS THE HOUSE

Mr. Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Others Pay Tribute.

Ottawa, May 15.—The news of the death of Hon. F. D. Monk, although not unexpected, was received with deep regret at Ottawa.

Premier Borden announced his death in the Commons this morning and tributes were paid to him by the Prime Minister, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. L. P. Pelletier, Hon. C. J. Doherty and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux.

"It is my painful duty," said Mr. Borden, "to announce the death of Hon. F. D. Monk, for many years a member of this House and until a year ago a member of the present Government. It has been my privilege to enjoy his personal friendship. Sometimes there had been marked differerences of opinions between us and such a difference resulted in his retirement from the Government more than a year ago. However, these differences never interferred with our personal friendship.

"He was a man of distinguished qualities, a great parliamentarian and of exceeding industry. He was a commanding figure in parliament and in House affairs. His character and temperament were in some ways not suited for public life. He was a man of singularly sensitive disposition. He was a man with the highest sense of public duty and his death leaves a great blank in the public life of Canada."

TWO AVIATORS KILLED

North Allerton, Eng., May 15.—Two more British army aviators were killed to-day near here during a combined flight by a squadron of military aeroplanes from Scotland to Salisbury Plain.

The victims were Lieut. J. Empson, of the Royal Fusiliers and Sergt. Dudmore, who was acting as a mechanic.

The accident occurred while the aviators were trying to land in a dense fog. The machine struck the ground sharply and overturned, the two occupants being killed by the motor falling on them.

of Montreal, formerly of Belfast, Ireland, who will officiate at the services of Knox Church to-morrow.

Detroit, May 15.—It was known this afternoon that eleven men were be buried in the wreckage, another killed, two more bodies were said to man was dying and three more were thought to be fatally injured, as the result of a terrible explosion which wrecked the plant of the Mexican Crude Rubber Company, in the western part of the city, this forenoon. The direct cause of the explosion may never be known.

At first it was reported that gasoline was responsible for the accident. Later it was said that sulphuric acid was probably the cause

The plant, a one-story concrete building, was almost obliterated. Flying chunks of substance riddled adjoining buildings, and concrete blocks, weighing several pounds, were found more than two blocks away from the scene of the explosion.

The building was considered fire-proof, and the firemen soon prevented the possibility of a conflagration

SCOTTISH HOME RULE CAME IN HOUSE OF COMMONS YESTERDAY

London, Eng., May 15.—The House of Commons to-day discussed the Home Rule for Scotland Bill, a private members measure, proposing to establish a single chamber in a Scotch Parliament, consisting of 140 members which is intended to represent the instalment of a devolution policy initiated by the Home Rule Bill.

J. A. Macherson of Ross and Cromarty, moving the second reading, declared there existed a strong demand in Scotland for control of local affairs.

THE NORTHERN NAVIGATION COMPANY

The Steamer Naronic the Last Word in Modern Steamship

When the S. S. "Noronic" twings out from Sarnia on June 3rd for its initial trip over the Lake Superior route for the Northern Navigation Company, all Canada can point to it and say a "Canadian Creation" from its mammoth keel to its towering mast heads.

Not only is the "Noronic" the masterpiece of Canadian hands and minds but it is "Canadian Owned." The Dominion has just cause to be mighty proud of this "Giant of The Inland Seas" for it marks a big advance in the science of modern steamship navigation. The "Noronic" has been called the final word in art of naval architecture.

When the greatest craftsmen of Canada, at the Pt. Arthur ship yards, had expended their energies on the "Noronic" it was sent down to Sarnia for its final grooming by educated Dominion hands.

In this Ontario city the "Noronic" took on its final tasty interior touches while the great commercial cities of Canada supplied the mammoth liner with its utensils. From Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa came the Empire's finest furnishings. The exquisite white linen which adorns the "Noronic" dining tables, the silverware, all the rich furnishings of the parlor cabins, the staterooms and in fact everything on this great liner benefited Canadian bank accounts.

And of what value is this great ship to Canada and its people you ask? It will bring two flourishing sections of the great Canadian Empire into the safest and swiftest communication with each other and will bind closer that tie which exists between United States and the Dominion.

The Great resources of the Canadian Northwest and rich trade centers of eastern Canada are brought closer together with the coming of the 'Noronic", Also Mother earth's dividends of the American northwest are opened up to all Canada.

Commerce is the backbone of the nations of the world. The "Noronic" will build with the greatest possible safety this muscle and fiber of national industrial health. It will also pour into the vast Northwest settlers and moneyed interest of the east. Its work is that of pioneer in one long battle with forces of the sea to promote civilization.

"The Noronic" has been designed for the purpose of carrying people and freight from "The Gateway to Eastern Canada," Sarnia, to the "Gateways to the Great Northwest." Pt. Arthur and Fort William without regard to anything. Canadian hands and Canadian brains have made possible this Canadian Construction.

A NOTABLE GATHERING

A programme of a recent gathering held in Montreal has reached The Times, and is of more than passing interest. The occasion was the "First Reunion of Feller Institute Students in Montreal." About one hundred graduates sat down to dinner at the Edinburgh Cafe, after which among others the following distinguished French Protestants delivered addresses: Eugene Lafleur K.C.; W. S. Bullock, M. L. A., G. N. Masse, L. L. D., A. E. Masse, B.A., W. H. Dalpe, M. D., J. A. Tremblay, M. A., Gustave Dutand, M. A.,

The programme and menu show artistic taste and the mechanical work is of the highest order. If the work of the college at Grande Ligne is fairly represented by the programme in our hands and by the names upon it the Baptist people have no reason to be ashamed of the work in which they are engaged in the Province of Quebec.—The Catholic Register to the contrary.

He then a toast to the King, which drunk with usual honors. He read a letter from Mr. Burn- M.P., regretting the latter's in- to be present.

Asa Huycke gave a vocal solo in good voice, entitled "Sally in Our Alley."

The Chairman then proposed a toast to Mr. Harry Beall, which was ably responded to.

Mr. Chambers, Park Commissioner of Toronto, next said, in part, that Peterborough is to be congratulated on its enterprise. Toronto is now handicapped for lack of early planning for beautifying that city. Peterborough has splendid natural advantages leading towards beautifying the city. He thought Peterborough had made a great mistake in giving its waterfront to the railways. The plans of Peterborough's beautification system had been shown to him. He thought the city should go ahead with these developments. You cannot get beauty out of street where the sidewalk is laid next the curb. A 74-foot pavement, under ordinary conditions is sufficient. R street never will look well with trees planted too closely together. The idea leading towards ultimate success is educating the individual owner or occupant of different premises. Steps should be taken to interest the children in such a movement. Children, in such matters, can do more than the Board of Trade. He advocated having a beautification commission

Mr. Morton, of the Forestry Dept. Ottawa, said, in part, the streets had trees planted here without regard to the particular kind of trees and without regard to uniformity of planting or trimming.. There are too many trees on the streets here. The soft maple is not suited to a city like Peterborough. Get rid of the soft maple and also cut out the Manitoba maple. He would also eliminate the poplar tree. "You can't beat the elm tree." Next to this he would advocated the hard maple. For Peterborough, the red oak would do well. He would plant chesnut trees at all. The basswood tree is useful near a railway or factory.

Mr. B. Hall proposed a toast to Picturesque Peterborough, seconded by Mr. Cowan.

Mr. Cowan spoke of a trip he took recently through Texas. Toronto spends $1.75 per head and Peterborough 4½ cents towards beautifying itself. He had the limelight thrown on a map of the city, supplied by City Engineer Parsons showing proposed improvements. He would like the local factories to beautify their respective places. Mr. Crossman, Mr. Crane and others had agreed to fix up their respective places.

The balance of this report will appear in Monday's issue.

No Need Being Old or Wrinkled Before 75.

Lillian Russell says any woman who has wrinkles before she's 75 is herself responsible for them. Sunshine and fresh air she considers more valuable as complexion preservers than nostrums and cosmetics.

The chief objection to cosmetics is that at best they only temporarily cover up defects. There are certain true aids to Nature, which may be applied with directly opposite effect. Ordinary mercolized wax, for instance, actually removes a bad or oldish complexion, by gradually, almost imperceptibly peeling off the worn-out scarf skin. Just one ounce, procurable almost [illegible] drugstore, will soon unveil an utterly new and natural complexion, with an exquisite girlish color. Of course cutaneous blemishes like pimples, freckles, fine lines, moth patches, liver spots, disappear with the discarded skin.

To prevent or remove wrinkles, a face bath, which also produces natural results, is made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This is immediately effective and gives no untoward after effect.

PETES PLAY CLASSY BASEBALL DEFEAT LONDON IN CLOSE GAME

What looked like an entirely new team representing the Petes, took the measure of the Opening Day heroes yesterday when Manager Blount's nine pulled out one run to the good in a magnificent game at Riverside Park. That the Petes can play ball was amply demonstrated at the second fixture on the home grounds. The way they tossed that old pill around and wielded the willow when at the plate, pleased the 700 odd spectators immensely, and struck terror in the ranks of the cockneys. Those who swallowed their disappointment at the poor showing of the Blountmen on opening day, and turned out yesterday to see them attempt to redeem themselves, went away well satisfied. The Petes sure made a hit. Every man was on edge and with the old reliable "Tracey" in the box, took the measure of "Doc. Reisling's stalwarts in fine shape. Tracey was there all the time, and pitched a splendid game. And he had the best of support behind him, too. Kelly, who did the receiving is a live wire. His play in the sixth innings was a feature of the game On the throw home to Kelly, Reidy turned and hit back for third. Mr. Kel took after him, and catching him about ten feet off the third bag, touched him out. Mullin, on second, was standing about 6 feet off the base with his mouth open, enjoying Kelly's little Marathon immensely, when the Pete hero drilled that old pill down to King, who caught Mullin before he could reach the sack, completing one of the most spectacular "no hit" double plays seen at Riverside Park in some time. The crowd went wild and there was consternation in the ranks of the enemy. The infield looked like a "Conny Mack" quartette yesterday, and the outfield was equally as good.

Score by Innings.

AN EXAMPLE OF CO-OPERATION

At Tara, Ont., a fire which started at 2.30 on the morning of Saturday, May 2nd, destroyed the block in which the Bell Telephone office was located, together with the switchboard and all equipment, as well as the cable and pole in front of the building.

Long Distance connection was re-established with Owen Sound at once and men and equipment rushed from there. Toronto was notified to hurry forward additional equipment, and a switchboard was obtained from another office in the district. By 6 P.M. of the same day, complete local service was being given from an office across the street. By 11 A.M., next day (Sunday) all rural and long distance lines were also in working order.

Taking in account the extensive and intricate repairs necessary, this is surely quick work. Such a result is only possible to an organization with great resources, and it is perhaps just in such emergencies that the great Bell system is most appreciated.

DOUBLE DROWNING

Two Young Men of Huntsville May Have Been Lost in River.

Huntsville, May 15.—The finding of an empty canoe, a hat, and cushions close to the town's wharf suggests the drowning of Fred Gunn and "Doc" Harbor, who entered a canoe to paddle to their homes. They have not since been seen. The hat belonged to Gunn. The current is strong and the bodies may have been carried a long distance down the stream. Mr. Harbor was the sons of Mr. and Mrs. John Harbor of Huntsville, and Mr. Gunn lived with his widowed mother. Both were about 25 years of age, and had resided here for many years.

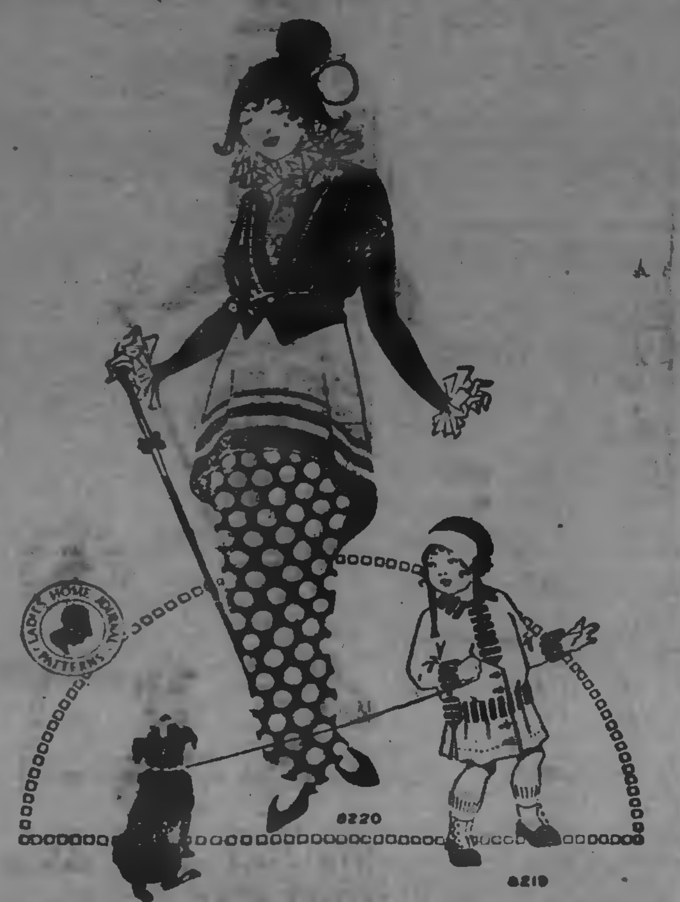
MUNICIPAL FORMS ALWAYS IN STOCK



SOME EFFECTIVE STENCILLED DESIGNS IN NEW DRESS FABRICS

Exaggeration is more or less necessary at the beginning of a season; it brightens us up and gives us new interest in clothes.

Awning stripes, large dots, lozenge squares, small shepherd's checks and soft, rich Scotch plaids are among the unusual designs that mark the new materials. There are crepes showing the Chinese influence and taffetas, which seem to take the lead, showing Roman stripes and plaids. Ripple cloth and Ratine are two of the newest and most novel of the materials.

The costume shown in No. 8220 effectively displays the mode of combining contrasting materials which has taken such a hold upon the fancy. Taffetas is used; a plain bordered design forms the tunic, and the skirt itself shows a stenciled dot in light blue on a darker ground; the blouse is in a solid blue.

To copy this costume in size 36, it requires 6¼ yards of 36 inch material. Taffetas averages $1.50 a yard and comes from 36 to 45 inches in width.

No. 8219 shows a one-piece Peasant dress for a small girl. It is developed in plain blue serge with a striped silk forming the trimming bands, collar and cuffs.

For a child of 8 this dress requires 2¾ yards of 36 inch material.

No. 8220—sizes 34 to 44.

No. 8219—sizes 6 to 12.

Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

DRIP PAN HAS ALARM

Automatically Gives Word When It is About to Overflow

Unless the refrigerator drip pan is emptied periodically, and in sufficiently short periods, it is going to to overflow. Sometimes it does overflow, to the exasperation of the housewife but not of the maid. Maids do not get exasperated over their mistresses' misfortunes. A Western man has patented a drip pan that gives warning just before it is full and if the warning is heeded it cannot overflow. In the front of the pan is an alarm bell, operated by an electric battery. An arm that projects inside the pan has a float fixed to it and this float rests on the water in the pan. When the water gets too high the float rises and establishes a connection in the circuit that causes the alarm to ring. It will continue to ring until the pan is emptied.

Nugget in Hog's Tooth

In cutting up the head of a 300-pound hog preparatory to making souse, or headcheese, Mrs. Kate Warren, of Dillon, Colorado, found one of the hog's teeth contained a gold nugget in its cavity. It is estimated to be worth about $5. The hog came from the Thompson ranch, near the Gold Hill placer mine, in Blue River Valley, about six miles north of Breckenridge.

FEET HEAVIER WHEN ASLEEP

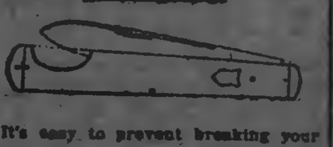
Head is Lighter and Feet Much Heavier on Awakening

You often hear a person complain of his head feeling "heavy" after a long sleep. As a matter of fact, his head is considerably lighter and his legs and feet just that much heavier when he gets up than when he went to bed.

Experiments have shown that if a man goes to sleep on a bed suspended exactly at middle point of his weight his head begins to tip slowly up and his feet go down. This is due to the fact that when we sleep the blood in the brain goes off to the other parts of the body. The moment the brain wakes to life again it draws the blood back.

Another of the curious facts brought to light by the scientists who are fond of trying to solve the mystery of sleep is that when one is fast asleep some part of his brain or several parts of it may at the same time be awake. A man may walk, talk, sing or solve mathematical problems, and yet at the same time be safely in the land of Nod.

It seems hard or impossible to decide what part of the brain really does sleep. Our sense of time, for instance, is stronger when we sleep than when we are awake. Experiments conducted some years ago on a number of men and women between the ages of twenty and thirty showed that 60 per cent. of them were able to wake up in the morning at any time they had decided upon the night before. As some one has aptly expressed it, the resolve seems to wind up something in the subconscious brain, and when the hour has arrived this something gives in some mysterious way the alarm and the eyelids open. Another curious fact about sleep is that the further the part of the body is away from the brain the less soundly it sleeps. A touch of the toe will awaken one much more readily than a touch on the shoulder.



It's easy to prevent breaking your finger nails opening a pocket knife if you apply this bit of ingenuity. File a notch in the handle of your knife like that shown in the sketch. You want to be careful not to file it too near the end so that the point of the blade will be uncovered, else you might tear holes in your pocket.

MARRIAGE IN AFRICA

Native Women Are Allowed Some Choice in the Matter

Although woman in Africa is regarded as 'property', she has certain rights which are seldom infringed upon, and of these the most important is her right to marry whom she pleases, or, rather, to refuse the one who does not please her.

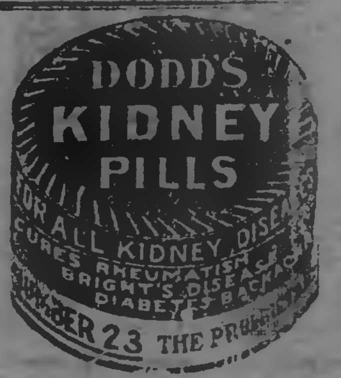
There are two reasons for this, explains a writer in The Southern Workman. First, women married against their wills have been known to commit suicide. Second, women married against their wills have murdered their unloved husband, usually strangling them when asleep. And to these reasons may be added the fear of marital unfaithfulness. So, in forcing oneself upon one of these women there is liability to a great loss—the loss of valuable property or of no less highly prized life.

The young girls are well cared for, partly that they may be comely and draw many suitors. Every girl will tell you frankly that she wishes to marry and have a good husband and children. Every father is anxious to have his daughters marry well.

To secure a wife, one must pay a dowry in cattle to the father, or, should the father be dead, to the nearest male relative. If a girl is much sought after, her father naturally asks a larger dowry. When the man has paid part of the dowry the father may give consent to a provisional marriage, and permit the couple to live together. Should the husband be too slow in paying the remainder of the dowry his wife is taken from him.

Signals at Grade Crossings

Danger signals at grade crossings being installed by one of the eastern railroads are expected to prove to be very effective. As soon as a train comes within a mile of the crossing the signal shows a red light and a gong that can be heard 500 yards away begins to ring. Both warnings continue to act until the train has passed, when the gong ceases and the red light changes to white. Should the wires become deranged, or should anything happen to the mechanism, the signal [illegible] disk flashes to danger and remains there until repairs are made.



NATURAL GASOLINE

A White Well Was Struck in Alberta Province

A "white oil" was struck in an oil well at Black Diamond near Okotoks Alberta. It consisted largely of gasoline of such purity that it has been successfully used in its raw state for driving an automobile. At a higher horizon in this well, a flow of 2,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day was obtained. There are two hundred plants in the United States making gasoline from natural gas. The yield is determined largely by the quantity of liquid paraffin vapors in the permanent gases, and is further affected by the temperature conditions in the well, the gasoline content of the oil and the intimateness of contact between the oil and gas. Such rapid expansion of gas from a casing head has been known to occur as to cause a heavy condensation of vapors at the point of egress.

To prevent mould from forming on top of the liquid in which pickles are kept, put in a few pieces of horseradish root.

To remove fruit stains from the hands rub them with the juice of a tomato.

Would make an angel weep.
He started on a tour one day
With the manners of a prince.
His tires blew higher than a kite,
He's ne'er been heard of since.

NORDICA

Nordica is no more. The greatest dramatic soprano this country has ever produced, and its most popular singer, died Sunday night in far away Java. It is a great loss to the country. Her career is one of which all America has been proud. For this great artist has taken her place among the Wagner and all of the other composers whose operas are produced at the Metropolitan. In some roles she was unexcelled. The patrons of the Metropolitan in New York always associated the name of Nordica with some of the most successful and notable performances ever given at that famous temple of music. But one of the most encouraging aspects of her wonderful career, is the stimulation it offers to other Americans gifted with fine voices. For she was an American, of Puritan extraction, who fought her way up to the highest honors by sheer labor and devotion to the ideals of her work. Well known critics frequently said that she lacked temperament, she was cold, had no inspiration and all that sort of thing. There is no need to say just how much these criticisms are true, for there has been some difference of opinion. But granting that they are true, it is all the more a tribute to her wonderful success for it shows that she could not have become one of the world's greatest singers except by tremendous labor, great self-sacrifice and the finest intelligence. But those in Erie who heard her in concert will not readily grant the criticism. In her case, then once more the definition that genius is only the infinite capacity of taking pains finds apt illustration. Perhaps some are not acquainted with the fine, generous character of Nordica. It ought to be mentioned. Nothing gave her greater delight than to welcome and encourage young singers of promise. Many a successful artist looks back gratefully to the encouragement given by this famous prima donna as the real beginning of her career. Many a poor student has received free lessons from her. In the conservatory which was one of the things unfulfilled of her life, but the opening of which she always cherished as the hope of the future, the gifted but poor were to receive the most cordial welcome. Nordica was a great woman and a great singer. When she left the Metropolitan it was a long time before her place was adequately filled. Her memory will live.

WITH THE SOCKEYES

An Irristible Lure to the People on the Coast

A rare and beautiful spectacle, seen once a year in coast towns like Vancouver, is that of the myriad of fishing boats which dot the fresh and salt waters. It is at night when the beacon lights of these cities of boats beckon from across the waves that the interested observer gets anything like an adequate conception of the number of those who hearken annually to the call of the sockeye which has since time immemorial proved an irresistible lure to the dwellers of the Pacific. These temporary boat cities claim an interesting variety of citizens for their floating population, from the man who is out for the mere sport of it to the cannery representative on business intent. It is an occasion when all nationalities are at one in a common interest, and the white man, the Japanese and the Indian sink their tribal differences at Neptune's altar. Along the [illegible] of civilised and populated districts the salmon-nets are the chief ammunition of warfare and the sibilant, syphon-like sounds emanating from the wooden buttons which buoy them up from the boats possess a weird fascinating music unlike any other sound existent, and which invariably associates them with salmon hunting in the Pacific. In the wilds up the Fraser the Indian may be seen fishing in a more primitive manner with his home-made dip-net. But he is none the less skilful for that, and one might think that he is in league with the sockeye, so thoroughly is he versed in the secret of their ways and so successfully does he capture them. He is the most picturesque of all the fishermen and the unconscious harmony of his rhythmic movement as he raises and lowers his awkward dip-net from some precarious niche of the canyon walls fits him with the picture as perfectly as the jackpine under whose shadow he works.

THE FARM WOODLOT

Free Expert Advice Obtainable on the Subject of Proper Care

With the increasing inaccessibility of the forests and the consequent high price of wood, the small wooded areas common on the farms of Canada are also increasing in economic value. They frequently occupy soils unfitted for agriculture and with a little care can be made to furnish the farmer with a continuous revenue in fuel, fence-posts, rails, poles and structural timber.

Unfortunately these woodlots are frequently allowed to deteriorate through carelessness or lack of knowledge on the part of the farmer. He takes great care to farm his agricultural lands to the best advantage, but often fails to realize that by farming his woodlot with the same care, he could get the same increase in productiveness. Cattle and weeds are not permitted in a wheat-field, yet in the woodlot the cattle range at will, and instead of removing the weed-trees the farmer allows these to increase in number, removing only the trees best suited to his purpose.

To save the farmer from himself the Dominion Government appointed a technical forester with head-quarters at the Forestry Branch, Ottawa, whose principal duty is to answer all inquiries, and give free advice on these matters. If necessary, arrangements can be made for a personal inspection of woodland properties by this expert. No conditions are imposed on the owner of the woodland, it being assumed that he who is anxious for advice will accept it when given. The expert looks over the stand, determines what species of trees are best suited to the soil and to the local market, shows how to improve the character of the crop and its rate of growth by proper thinnings, and, if desired, gives advice regarding tree-planting, hardwood-coppicing, felling-methods, and the most profitable sizes [illegible]

THE SPAN OF LIFE SHOWN BY FIGURES

For Those Under Thirty the Expectation of Longevity Has Increased—Married People Fortunate

How long do you expect to live? Perhaps you have never given the matter a thought. The majority of people simply want to live as long as they can—and let it go at that. Therefore maybe it would be better to ask: How long can you expect to live?

Suppose you are between 40 and 45 years of age. If that is the case you may expect to live 23.4 years more if you happen to live in a city. The matter of where you live changes the figure slightly but not much.

It occurred to the health department of one city to prepare a table of the expectation of life among the inhabitants of its city, in the hope that the people would help fight disease and so prolong their calculated allotted span.

The preparation of a table of this sort is a very complicated proceeding that requires an expert. But the results obtained are highly valuable. The figures are practically the same for all sections of the country. These show that there has been an increase in the expectation of life, as it is called, from the age of 1 year to the age of 30 and a decrease from 30 years on. For instance, a child 5 years old might expect to live 52 years more. That is an increase of 11 years over the expectation of life calculated a third of a century ago. An adult between 25 and 30 years of age has 32.6 years more to live, according to this table, while a person 35 years old may reasonably expect to live only 3 years and 3 months longer.

The expectation of life for men and women is different, for people in different trades it is different. These differences bring to light some curious facts. For instance comparison of the sexes instead of ages shows that women in general have about 6 years longer to live than men. The figures also show that married men live longer than single men and that married women live longer than single women. The Jew lives longer than the Gentile by a round dozen years. The negro appears to have less chance of life than the white man.

But throughout it is found that the span of life for people up to the age of 30 has increased during the last 30 years while that for people beyond the age of 30 has decreased.

OLD RACING TERMS

Fine Distinction Between Stake and Purse Often Overlooked

The old and well defined term "stake" receives some rough handling on the trotting turf when races are reported by art critics, golf experts, baseball writers or any person who happens to be available when the trotters come to town. Some of the trade papers of the trotting turf and even track officials themselves seem at times unable to recognize the plain distinction between a purse and a stake.

From the earliest period of racing the term stake, or sweepstakes, has always been used to designate a race for which the prize is the total amount of money contributed by the nominators, all of which belongs to the winners. This is the definition incorporated in the rules of the National Trotting Association, and the same meaning is given to the term sweepstakes in the New York Jockey Club's rules of racing. A race is still a stake when money or other prizes are added to the entrance fees or subscriptions, but is never a stake if the prize is less than the total amount paid by the nominators. In a "stake" the association promoting the race merely holds the entrance money in trust for the nominators.

A purse is a fixed sum offered by the promotor of the race, to which the nominators do not contribute. All entrance fees in such a race belong to the association, and if they amount to more than the purse, as often happens on the trotting turf, the association profits to that extent, and the purse remains the same as if there were only two or three entries.

Ever since instalment [illegible] came into vogue on the trotting turf, there has been a tendency to call all early closing races stakes. As a matter of fact there are few—very few—stake races on the trotting turf, most of the promoters preferring to offer purses so that they need not pay out all the entrance money in case this exceeds the face of the purse. Even the futurities in harness racing are nearly all purses instead of stakes, and for the reason just mentioned.

USES FOR SAWDUST

A Former Waste Product is Now Extensively Employed

Not so very long ago about the only real use anyone had for sawdust was for packing ice. That was when small local saw mills were more common, and the amount of this form of waste wood was, or at any rate appeared, comparatively small. Now, when the tendency is to consolidate these into large mills with a capacity of several hundred thousand feet of lumber per day, the daily waste in sawdust is seen to be enormous and much experimenting is being done to discover new methods of utilising it. Perhaps the most promising venture in sawdust utilization in Canada is the manufacture of ethyl (or grain) alcohol. The sawdust is treated with sulphuric acid under suitable conditions, resulting in the formation of sugar, which is then fermented to produce alcohol. Several plants have been erected to produce alcohol from wood in this manner, and, though there are some difficulties still to be overcome, the ultimate success of the process on a commercial scale is assured. Sawdust has been successfully manufactured into briquets for fuel for a considerable time in Europe by a very simple process. The shavings and sawdust are first steam-dried, the water contained in the wood being thus evaporated and the resin almost liquified. The sawdust is then compressed under heat into briquets of the desired size, the contained resin acting as a binder. A firm in Vancouver is engaged in a similar line of manufacture, the sawdust being compressed into a cylindrical tube where it is cut into short lengths by a revolving knife, emerging in the form of small round briquets. These briquets are clean to handle, easy to kindle, and leave very little ash. In England sugar is manufactured on a commercial scale by treating sawdust in closed retorts with weak sulphurous acid under high pressure. In Austin, Texas, also a plant is being built to manufacture stock food from sawdust, by a somewhat similar process. The tar, pitch and turpentine are removed from the sawdust leaving only sugar and fibre to which is added forty per cent. of cottonseed meal. The mixture is sold for fattening cattle. Two and one-half parts of clean sawdust mixed with two parts sand and one part cement make a warm long-wearing and sound-proof floor, to which carpets can be tacked with less injury than to a board floor, and which has the advantage over a cement floor in being more elastic. These qualities should win an extensive use for this form of flooring, which has the additional advantage that it can be stained to harmonize with interior finishings by the addition of color to the mixture while in a semi-liquid state. The sawdust of certain kinds of woods is used in considerable quantities by manufacturers for metal polish, for packing, for meat curing, for making safety explosives, and composition novelties, and for fibre and pulp manufacture. Patent cleaning powders for use on carpets and rugs consist principally of sawdust, lightly moistened by some cheap mineral oil.

Heaviness of Platinum

Platinum is the heaviest commercial metal known. Its specific gravity is 21.5, as compared with 19.26 for pure gold and 10.53 for silver. Briefly, platinum is 21½ times as heavy as water, more than twice the weight of silver and heavier, bulk for bulk, than pure gold. It is softer than iron, but somewhat harder than copper.

A free telephone office for the use of pilots and ships' officers has been opened on Platte Fougère, the unattended lighthouse guarding the rocky approach to St. Peter Port, Guernsey. The instrument, which calls up Guernsey, is gained by climbing a forty-two-rung ladder.

Sheepskins in Gas Meters

It will undoubtedly surprise many to learn that sheepskin plays an important part in the construction and operation of the gas meter. This leather is used to form the "diaphragms" or two bellows from which gas is drawn when a jet is lighted. They are thoroughly saturated with oil and fastened between two circular pieces of metal, acting precisely as the diaphragm in the human body. When gas is drawn from one, the other is refilled, so the consumer is given an even and constant supply.

WHY PAINT BRUSHES CURL

Perhaps the most frequent trouble with brushes, for which the manufacturer is often blamed, is the bristles curling. In many instances this is no doubt the maker's fault, the bristles not having been cured properly. In good brushes the most common cause for curling is the manner in which the brush is wiped and the way it is put away for the night. If the brush is wiped across the points of the hair the outside hairs are bound to straggle. A brush should be wiped just to the ends of the bristles and not so that the edge of the bucket will catch the outside bristles constantly bending them outward until they assume a contrary position from that intended. If ends of brushes curl up while painting blinds, grille or fretwork, dip the ends in hot water. This will straighten them.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By Leona Dalrymple

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

Serving Beets!

LEONA DALRYMPLE

"THERE is a vegetable called a beet," I suggested mildly one night when Mary was decrying the paucity of edible food.

"Beets!" said Mary, sniffing. "Dear me, Peter, I'd forgotten they grew."

"I thought maybe you had," I admitted, "for to my knowledge we haven't had [illegible] once since we've been married [illegible] I'm rather fond of them myself."

[illegible] wry face [illegible]" she exclaimed, shrugging [illegible] conviction from her to [illegible] predilection for beets was vulgar, but I let it go at that. Indeed, with the married man's facility for ferreting forth the ulterior motive where his wife is concerned I began to understand why beets had been barred from the family table. We never have the things Mary dislikes or considers vulgar. On the other hand, we frequently repeat certain dishes I detest. The reason, however, is perhaps not quite so selfish as it sounds. Mary, with a habit of carelessness, forgets what I like and what I don't. She is not so likely to forget her own dislikes.

Beets Finally Served.

"Very well, Peter," said Mary, with her most patient I-am-a-model-wife-and-will-do-whatever-you-like-if-it-kills-me air, "if you like beets I'll buy them. I'll buy them tomorrow, though I've never had one in the house, and I've never eaten one in my life."

Mary's tomorrow is a most elastic term. Tomorrow peculiarly enough is not always, with her, the day after today. It may be somewhere in the following week, and it may even be in the following month. It is, however, usually some time in the year. Mary has not yet learned the invaluable art of husbanding her time. It slips out of her [illegible] water drops off a [illegible] another woman [illegible] procrastination [illegible] month later, and [illegible] twist of Fate [illegible] in their [illegible] somewhat [illegible] cooking, though [illegible] of knowledge [illegible] with it considerably. My wife [illegible] a new and inexperienced housekeeper, and to amuse me [illegible] for Mary's first pose in bridal days was a very definite and aristocratic pride in her total ignorance of everything domestic. She speaks casually now of an inherent aptitude for the [illegible] the home which she really did [illegible]

And I was conscious that they were not in color just what they ought to be. I saw Carl make a similar attack and sink back appalled. He was eying those beets with fascinated intentness, as I was myself. Mrs. Harner presently tasted a beet and looked so baffled that I decided to take the bull by the horns and speak to Mary.

"Mary," I began cautiously, "I know there isn't such a thing as a leather beet or a stone one, and I don't suppose they are [illegible]—but just what variety of beets are these anyway?"

"Regular beets," said Mary primly.

"How," I ventured humbly, "how long did you cook them?"

Mary's lovely eyes widened.

"Cook them!" she exclaimed. "Why, Pe[illegible] you had to [illegible] vinegar—raw!"

DANCING TO IMPROVE THE DISPOSITION

Three Interesting Poses of Charming Mlle. Dazie.

Mlle. Dazie Gives Some Interesting Rules for "Keeping in Tune"

By ELEANOR AMES

TEMPER fits do not keep step to dance music. The present dance madness will result in future salubrious balance and better dispositions. It will teach control. Control means increase of power. The time for this mad whirligig of tango and maxixe and hesitation and one-step has a perfectly sane and logical reason back of it. It was needed to relieve the strain of too much seriousness and too long continued nervous tension. It let down the bars of over-rest, and when the first madness has passed and the after-sanity comes the world will be much better for it.

At least, that is the opinion of Mlle. Dazie, who ranks as one of the most famous dancers of the age.

It is an opinion worthy attention, for many of the classical dancers have only sneers and words of condemnation for the modern dances, which, they declare, are neither artistic nor interesting nor provocative of good.

"Anything which gives men and women the opportunity of gaining control of themselves is to be encouraged," said Mlle. Dazie, whose poise and grace is the perfection of harmony between mind and body.

"I have chosen not to regard the modern dances from an artistic standpoint, but from the effect on the dancers. No one can dance at all unless he or she has control of the body. The dancer must understand the law of balance and bodily control. Otherwise the feet will not obey the mind. The majority of the world has long been in fetters of self-consciousness. The dance is breaking those fetters.

"You know Epictetus says 'No man is free who is not master of himself.' That is a good motto for the dancer or for any one else to put back in the mental storehouse. Freedom is as necessary for success as opportunity. The minute a man or a woman reaches the place where the body works in sub-conscious harmony with the mind there is freedom of action.

"A well balanced head seldom crowns an ill-balanced body.

"Over-suppression has resulted in lack of harmony. We have been afraid for fear of being awkward. The dance has removed that fear. The result will be an improvement in health, beauty and conduct. We are learning to forget ourselves by dancing. It will soon become a habit, and the balance will become part of the nature.

"Every woman who seeks beauty should begin by learning to dance. When she can pose herself on one foot with the other extended and her whole body in muscular control, she is laying a permanent foundation for the poise which will make her graceful and efficient.

"I know comparatively few dancers who suffer from what is best known under the specification of 'nerves,' but which means nothing in the world but lack of control. They don't fly into fits over this and that, for if they did they would lose the balance which is the foundation of their dancing life.

"A dancer who is successful has to have the muscles of her body in complete subservience. Her mind and body have to work in perfect harmony. If there is discord between the two, then she loses power and grace. In other words, she falls down in her dance.

"It seems to me that the two words we hear most often repeated in these modern days are 'poise' and 'efficiency,' and they are almost inseparable.

"Lack of one means loss of the other.

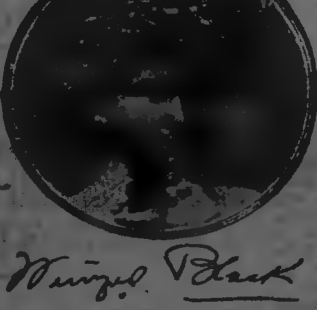
"The debutante slouch? Don't you think it is passing? Just as all foolish things pass when the time comes for them to give way to something better. It is a pleasing sign that women are taking up the question of the proper posture, for that really means an effort to establish harmony. And the more harmony we can get into this wonderful world the better place it will be, and the more will be accomplished.

"It seems so foolish for a girl to take so much pains to powder her nose and so little in keeping herself in tune. For when mind and body are working in harmony and the heart is happy one is bound to be beautiful. 'On with the dance' is the wise attitude to take. When the first craze has worn off there will come a healthy reaction with an increase of efficiency. Wait and see. Meantime dance and be happy."

Who Are the World's Greatest Women?

By WINIFRED BLACK

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.



Winifred Black

OUT in San Francisco where the weather's fair they're trying to pick out the world's six most distinguished women.

No, they aren't going to send them laurel wreaths, or ask them to talk into a phonograph and tell us all just how they came to be so distinguished. They're going to invite them to the Panama exposition—as world honor guests.

The California papers are asking the people of California to help decide who the world's six greatest women are. So far they're a good deal in the dark.

There's a list of names starting with Mme. Curie, the great French scientist, and ending with the Begum of something or other—one of India's greatest women. Jane Addams seems to be a favorite, and so does Helen Gould Shepard. Mrs. Pankhurst and Annie Besant are running neck and neck. Annie Smith Peck, who climbs mountains, has for her close competitor Mme. Montessori, who is telling us all how to teach our children to button, button into perfectly good button-holes.

Liliuokalani, late of Hawaii, and Carmen Sylvia of Roumania are the only royal ladies who seem to be in the running at all.

It's interesting, isn't it? I wish I could invite the six greatest I know to be my guests at the great fair in San Francisco in 1915.

One Who Is Truly Great.

I'd have to invite them right now and give them at least a year to get ready to come—for most of them are poor—and haven't any particularly fine clothes—and all of them are very, very busy.

One of my six greatest women has clothes enough and to spare. Gorgeous clothes—silk and satin and lace—embroidered and woven and plaited. Clothes from Paris, where they make them specially for America of a sort that no French woman would wear even to the wedding of her dearest enemy. Clothes from that new smart shop in Vienna, where you must get your coats—unless you want to be entirely out of it—swishy things from India, all shimmer and sparkle—embroidered things from China, all gold and silver—oh, all kinds of clothes—this one of my six has—for she's an actress and she needs clothes in her business.

No, I shouldn't call her a great actress, not one of the world's greatest, but she is a very good actress indeed; and everybody in this country knows her and loves her—and I can never even see her picture, whether it is on the dead walls or hanging in the lobby of the theatre, without smiling up at her and saying, "I love you—bless your heart, and I'm proud that you're an American woman."

And ever since my friend the actress has been a little, little girl she has been doing things—for other people. Big things and little things, but always kind, always generous, always loving.

She supports a whole raft of relatives. She pays brother Tommy's tailor bill and helps brother Jim's wife take the new baby and go into the country for the summer, and when old Aunt Sally broke down after her husband died, who thought of her but my friend the actress?

She didn't say, "Poor Old Aunt Sally, how she will miss dear old Uncle Joe," and let it go at that. She telegraphed to Aunt Sally to join her at the nearest city and she took her with her on a wonderful trip from coast to coast, and what Aunt Sally didn't see and hear and know on that trip wasn't worth seeing or hearing or knowing.

No supper parties without Aunt Sally; no little spins in the automobile with a gay party of friends unless Aunt Sally went, too.

Choice Hard to Make.

At the theatre every night—the belle of the box—feted, courted, made much of, dear old Aunt Sally, and sent home at the end of the season with enough to think about to keep her from being lonely the rest of her life.

All because once when my friend the actress was lonely and homesick Aunt Sally took her in her lap and told her stories and gave her some cookies and called her "sweet child."

Is she happy herself? She ought to be, ought she not?

Anyway, she's good, as good as gold, and as beautiful as a lily, fair and white, in the green garden, and clever and brilliant and successful—but it is because she is good that I would ask her to be my guest at the great fair as one of the world's six greatest women.

The other five of my six—why, I haven't left room to tell about them, have I? One is a scrub woman, a creeper, they call her, because she creeps over the floors of the great office buildings after every one has gone home and scrubs them and makes them clean for the next day. And the fires go down at night and it sometimes is very cold in the great office building; and my friend the creeper gets very tired. Her hands are red and swollen, and her back aches, and her knees are lame—but always she sings while she creeps over the cold floors. Singing Mary, they call her in the scrub squad, and it's always a gay song on her lips and a laugh in her eyes and a cheery word to any of the others who are in trouble. And at home there's an invalid husband and there's an old mother and there are four little children, and you ought to see that home.

I'd like to invite her and every woman like her in this great country of ours to the fair as an honor guest.

That's why it's hard to choose, isn't it, the six greatest women in the world, while we all know them by the dozen—noble women, good women, self-sacrificing women, the Real Great of the earth. What a world it would be to live in—without them.

Can't Be Helped.

Gobang—I wonder why so many men marry the wrong women.

Ukerdek—Guess it must be from habit.

A Proxy Ornament.

"[illegible] that sword over the mantel carried by an ancestor?"

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Why You Get "Stiff Neck" Without Apparent Cause

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

YOU go to bed like a lark. You felt "as fine as a fiddle" all day. All is well.

Yet you wake up the next morning with a kink in your neck. Your collar muscles are as stiff as the proverbial poker.

Moreover, the rigidity is only second to the spasms of pain you feel when you try to turn your head. Your conscience, like the wight's in the Merchant of Venice, hangs about your neck.

"Budge not," it says. "Budge," says the fiend. "Budge not," says your conscience. And if you love not pain, you are indeed a yokel if you try to shake your head or budge that stiff-neck.

"What is the rule to prevent these rigid, stiff, strangulating muscle spasms?" is the usual cry when acute "torticollis" develops. To which the stiff-neck, if it could speak, would answer, as in the Winter's Tale,

"If I shall be condemned
Upon surmises; all proofs sleeping else,
But what the jealousies awake, I tell you,
'Tis rigor and not a law."

In short, there is no law that will save everybody from suffering the pangs and inconveniences of this affection.

If the adamantine and concrete clinging of one tissue to another indicates endearment and style, a man with a stiff neck is a most fashionable and much-loved fellow, for the petrified and inelastic neck muscles cling as obdurately to his vertebrae as a swarm of bees to the queen.

"Wry-neck," acute "torticollis," or "stiff-neck," is a pretty high price to pay for something you did not buy. Actually, it is often most difficult for even the most searching investigation and cross-questioning to bring to light the source of the horny, cartilaginous neck-resistance.

Most commonly the domestic doctor dismisses the stiff-neck with a wave of her hand as one of the "colds," whatever that may be. Somehow, any affliction once ascribed to a "cold," no matter how painful it may be, has no longer anything exciting about it. These words, "colds" and "a cold" have the same soothing and magic influence upon the victim as the Lorelei.

Yet a stiff neck, with its drum-like tautness of the upper spinal muscles, may be a much more serious trouble than herb doctors, mental optimists and home medical and chirurgical faculties may think.

There is a woodpecker called the "Wryneck," from its habit of writhing the head and neck around in a wise, but odd, manner.

But it is not the bird of that name which neurologists mean when they say "wry neck." In the latter instance the patient is afflicted with jerks and twitches of the neck muscles of one side. Three in every four of such unfortunates are only cured by the surgeon's lancet.

In the mild malady the stiff neck clings to you like Damon did to Pythias, but, happily, only for a day or two.

Usually this type is due to the poisons of some sore throat, nasal, ear, skin or stomach infections. The microbes may be inhospitably ousted from their unwelcome visit to a tonsil, and eight or nine of them, with their poisons, may escape to the nerves and muscles of your neck.

There they abide in an emaciated and consumptive state until the pugnacious tissues thereabout complete the destruction which had already been partially completed.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie:

I have enjoyed your answers to other girls. I would like to know if I could write short stories. Would any newspaper take them? Would I have to write on certain kind of paper and would I get pay for them? I have often thought I could write short stories for children.

W. L. T. N.

THAT depends entirely upon you and your stories, little girl. If they are good stories, somebody will buy them and pay for them—if you send them to the right sort of people.

What sort of papers and magazines do you read?

Why don't you notice the sort of short stories that are published in the paper in your own particular town, and if you have any of that sort, send them to that particular editor, and see what will happen?

Pick your editor—and pick him carefully. Don't try to sell a hat to the shoe store man and expect him to be glad to put it in the window for sale.

If you have written a love story, send it to the love story man; if you've written a child's story, send it to the place where a child's story seems to belong. First write your story, put it away to cool, then take it out and write it over again; copy it on the typewriter if you can; if you can't, be sure that your writing is good and plain; most editors would throw away a story by Rudyard Kipling and put one by Little Miss Nobody in its place, if Miss Nobody's story was easier to read than the other one—unless the Kipling name was on the first page of the manuscript. Write on one side of the paper and send out your story.

Children's stories have an excellent market, if you send them to the right place. Don't imitate any one else.

Good luck, little sister, and lots of it.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care this office.

Useful Hints for the Housewife

By Ann Marie Lloyd

"CHERRIES ripe" hold a delectable place among the early fruits. Hanging yellow, red or black from their own stems, they have inspired the pen of poets as well as the brush of famous artists, and few other fruits have the distinction of being the standard for the beauteous coloring of lovely maidens' lips.

Unhappily, the cherry season is short, although California varieties have made the fruit more familiar in the eastern markets than the smaller, but quite as piquant flavored native varieties ever did, and those who find gastronomic delight in cherries should take full advantage of every opportunity to enjoy them.

There is no preserved fruit which gives more promise of success in the hands of the amateur housewife than cherries. Here is the simple rule of a woman who has made more than a competence for many years by "putting up" fruit for special orders:

To each four pounds of cherries allow between one and two pounds of sugar. There is danger of getting the fruit too sweet, and that means insipidity, for the fruit itself has so delicate a flavor that it does not require much sugar.

Whether the cherries are to be pitted or not is largely a matter of choice. Some prefer them simply plucked from the stems, with one or two left on the stems added to each jar. Also some cooks add to each jar one or two cracked pits or the kernels therefrom to give the true flavor. Whichever way you choose the procedure is the same.

Put the cherries and the sugar in the preserving kettle and let it stand two hours, then cook over a slow fire till the fruit is tender. Fill the jars and seal. If the sugar does not make the required syrup after standing on the fruit, then a little water may be added.

A New England recipe follows the old "pound for pound" rule, and requires that the cherries be pitted. For each pound of fruit add an equal amount of sugar. Let the sugar stand on the fruit for two hours and then bring slowly to the boiling point. Fill the jars first with the fruit and then add the syrup and seal.

Many a woman has gone down in the annals of culinary fame as the maker of cherry duff. This is how one of these very women makes it:

CHERRY DUFF.

Two quarts of pitted cherries.
Two cups of sugar.
One teaspoonful vinegar.
One tablespoonful butter.
Two cups of flour.
Four teaspoonfuls baking powder.
One teaspoonful salt.
Three-fourths cup milk.

Mix the flour in which the baking powder and salt have been sifted with the butter until it is mealy, and then add the milk. Put the sugar, cherries and vinegar in the bottom of a well buttered baking dish, cover with the crust and steam three-quarters of an hour. Serve in the same dish [illegible] and with a foam sauce made of half a cup of butter creamed with a cup of powdered sugar, the yolk of an egg and two tablespoonfuls of wine. Cook this over hot water till it is well heated and remove from the fire and beat into it the whites of two eggs previously beaten to a froth.

CHERRY JELLY WITH COLD MEATS.

To make it, mash the cherries and squeeze them through a jelly bag. To each pint of juice allow one pound of sugar, and add it after the juice is boiled 20 minutes, first heating the sugar in the oven. Stir the sugar into the juice and boil five minutes, or until it will jelly, skimming the surface frequently. Have the jelly glasses [illegible] in hot water, pour the jelly in [illegible] and when they are set cover with paraffin.

USING A CASSEROLE

These Dishes Are a Boon to Many Housewives

Casseroles come in many styles and prices but like patent leather shoes and taffetas, none are guaranteed. If the brown ware with its creamy lining is not thought sufficiently attractive, silver filigree casseroles are obtainable, to say nothing of those in solid silver and nickel plate.

A casserole of any make or description must be heated before using. Let hot water stand in it a few minutes before filling with the meat or vegetables to be cooked, cover closely and place in a moderately hot oven. The long slow cooking necessary for good results spells freedom for an afternoon at least to the woman who would rest, do her shopping, or attend a bridge party or matinee.

From an economic standpoint there is also an advantage: This method of slow cooking not only makes meats more tender, but makes it possible to use many of the cheaper cuts by bringing out their juices and flavor. Finally, the casserole permits of the cooking of fish, onions, and other odoriferous foods in the oven—a boon to sensitive nostrils.

While chicken and vegetables, with all necessary water, should be put immediately into the casserole, it is best, as a preliminary step, to sear meat on both sides in a frying pan, in order that all juices may be conserved. All dishes may come on the table "piping hot," and, furthermore, will remain so throughout the meal.

Sterilizing Milk

Dr. E. W. Hope, Medical Health Officer, Liverpool, England, states that careful researches carried on at the University of Liverpool by Professor Beattie and others, have in view, if possible, the lessening the cost of sterilizing milk. As a result, it has been demonstrated that all extraneous organisms in milk can be effectually destroyed by electricity without changing the flavor or chemical composition in any way. The process is said to be very much cheaper than the ordinary pasteurization by heat. Dr. Hope is also authority for the statement that the corporation of Liverpool has authorized the installation of the electrical method at one of their depots for the supply of milk for infants.

How People Feel
When They Have
Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ¼ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4830, or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

The breeding of gold fish for sale is said to be a new and money-making industry for those who have only small time and space to devote to a "side-line." The fish reared are not the ordinary gold fish seen in aquariums, but the choicer specimens such as the dragon-eyed Chinese Veiltails, with bodies like rubber balls, and two, three or four sweeping tails; or the calico fish, blotched and striped with brilliant colors. A fully developed pair of lion-hearted Fringetail-fish, with hood and long mane like a lion, cost $1,000. But to grow such rare fish, requires, of course, expert knowledge.

LOBSTER FISHERIES

The Money [illegible] Increases But the Catch Declines

The wonderful productiveness of the Canadian sea shores is such that the lobster industry is still carried on on a vast scale, and the total money value of the lobster fishery is greater than ever, but the annual returns are really misleading, because, while the supply of lobsters is declining, the price has so materially advanced that the total value is greater to-day than at any previous period. Thus, in 1880, lobsters brought $5 a case, whereas last year the price realised was nearly four times that amount. In the case of the oyster, though the number of barrels annually produced or the Canadian beds is only half what it was ten years ago, the price per barrel has increased in about the same ratio as the price of lobsters, and is now four or five times what it was in 1880.

It is a widespread opinion that, by returning small lobsters to the water and marketing only the large lobsters, the value of the catch has been increased. But, in general, fishermen do not favor a size limit and some canneries would, for a time, be closed were the eight or nine inch limit enforced [illegible]. All, however, are convinced that the berried lobsters—those [illegible] carrying eggs—must be [illegible]d.

Electricity and Chickens

Chickens [illegible] their timidity and become bold and p[illegible] under the influence of electrical stimulus were described by Mr. Th[illegible] Baker in a paper read before the Royal Society of Arts. Mr. Baker said chickens could be grown under electric stimulus at about double the normal rate, thus doubling the output of a chicken farm, and halving the food bill per chicken. The vitality of the treated chicken was remarkable. During the treatment they were so highly charged with electricity that quite a distinct shock was felt in the fingers on touching them, although the birds were supremely unconscious of anything. The sparks which flew from their beaks on their pecking one's finger did not appear to be felt in the least by them.

A Cyclist's Record

Some years ago a cyclist undertook to ride 100 miles daily every week day for a year, and accomplished the feat. A still more remarkable record is that of Mr. F. J. Lucas, of Coventry, who for twenty years rode an average of fifty miles a day. He covered an aggregate of over 305,000 miles in ten years, when he started to cycle to Wolverhampton and Northampton on alternate days.

The Corean judge dispenses justice in the open, and by etiquette only the judge can sit; everyone else must stand, excepting the prisoner and his friends, who are forced to remain in a humble kneeling position with bowed heads. Until quite recently these trials were always very one-sided and shockingly unjust. When a man was brought to a judge, it was taken for granted he was guilty, and if he did not confess he was tortured and made to do so. Witnesses, too, were openly bribed. In fact, giving evidence for or against an accused person meant a living to a portion of the community, and these witnesses naturally favored those who paid best. Punishment varied. If the prisons were too full, and the condemned could not pay a fine, they were often given a chance to escape, or disappeared by some means. Though these are things of the past, Corean judges, like those of China, possess a poor idea of the sense of justice.

A Non-Dour Scotchman.

There may be a few people who consider that a Scotchman is a dour specimen of humanity with no sense of wit. To successfully contradict this libellous insinuation go to the Royal Theatre and see the Scotchman who puts on one of the cleverest song and dance acts seen here in many a month. He is possibly the first here to present a Scotch song "My bonnie lassie" set to rag time. His dancing is worth the price of admission alone.

Col. Sam As A Miner.

In speaking at a dinner in Montreal of the Canadian Mining Institute, Hon. Col. Sam Hughes, whilst speaking said jocularly "I have had some slight connection with the industry. For one thing, I on several occasions, borrowed money from confiding friends to invest in giltedged propositions. I know there is money in mining, for the money I put in is still there, but so long as my friends are willing to lend I am willing to risk more of their money.

Boys Broke In And Stole.

Boy Has Narrow Escape

Lindsay Warder: Little Lloyd Flack the young son of Mr. and Mrs. "Sandy" Flack, Sturgeon Point, had a very narrow escape yesterday morning from death as the result of swallowing a considerable quantity of green paint.

It appears that Mr. Flack has been painting up his summer home at the Point, and left the can of paint standing on the ground. Early Wednesday morning as he was working at the cottage he noticed that Lloyd's face, especially his mouth, was covered with green paint, and although at the time the youngster did not seem to be suffering, it was at once surmised that Lloyd had swallowed green paint. The young fellow was rushed to Fenelon Falls, where he was given medical attention.

CHICKEN AND A GIRL

The night before last a local livery man took a girl for a drive out the Gravel Road. Alas! and Alack! that poor misguided livery man did not know that the girl was loved by a resident of Monaghan who was, some months chief actor in a chicken stealing case. As he drove the girl back to the city, having picked all the wild flowers in sight, the couple met the chicken fancier. The latter hit the young man over one eye, which immediately went into mourning. The man of chickens pulled the girl out of the rig. However an amicable understanding was attained, and the livery man brought the girl home

SIZES OF SILOS

Depend Upon Amount of Silage Required—How to Determine

The amount of silage required and the size of silo needed to hold it can be quite closely calculated provided the number and kind of animals to be fed from it are known before building.

An average cow or beef animal may be fed about thirty-five pounds of silage per day and the usual period during which silage is used in this latitude will be about 210 days. Large animals, or those that are being fattened, may consume considerably more than thirty-five pounds per day, but this has been found a fair average.

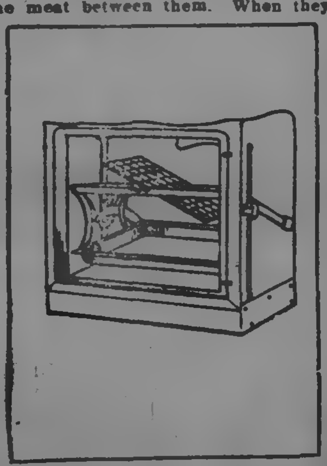
In a silo of ordinary depth, the average weight of the silage is about forty pounds per cubic foot. Near the top of the silo, however, where the pressure is not great, it will weigh only twenty-five pounds per cubic foot, while at the bottom of a thirty-five foot silo it may weigh sixty pounds. Taking these averages, if a cow eats thirty-five pounds of ensilage in a day, she will eat thirty-five fortieths, or seven-eighths, of a cubic foot per day; and with this as a basis it is easy to determine the number of cubic feet of ensilage required to feed a cow or any number of cows throughout the season. The diameter of the silo must be such that the stock on hand can use one or two inches of silage off the top each day during the winter and at least three inches per day when summer feeding of silage is to be practised. This is necessary to keep the silage from spoiling.

A silo ten feet in diameter is adapted to feeding ten mature cattle. One twelve feet in diameter will feed fifteen head, and one fourteen feet in diameter will meet the needs of twenty head; but if there are thirty or more cows to feed a sixteen-foot silo should be erected. These silos should be thirty or forty feet, or even more in height.—A. D. Wilson.

IMPROVED BROILER

Revolves on Pivot and Meat Can be Done on Either Side

An improved type of broiler for gas ovens has been invented. It can be moved up and down in the oven and turned about so that the meat is done equally on both sides. The broiler proper is pivoted to a framework that moves up and down in grooves on the inside end walls of the oven. By a lever outside this framework is operated. Like most broilers it is in two hinged sections that receive the meat between them. When they are locked the device can be revolved at will. A removable drip pan sets in the lower portion of the framework to catch the drippings from the steak, or chops, or whatever the meat may be. The advantage of being able to move the broiler up and down is that you can get it close to the flame or some distance off, according to whether you want it done quickly or slowly.



CAN BE MOVED UP AND DOWN

The Shape of the Head

Scientists declare that during the last quarter of a century the shape of the human head has altered owing to the development of mental power, caused by the ever-increasing educational facilities.

Size is of no consequence. It is the shape that tells. Twenty-two to twenty-three and a half inches is a standard for the literary type of head of the first order, but powerful intellects are indicated by heads measuring up to twenty-four and three-quarter inches.

Heads indicative of skill in mechanism, detail, and manufacturing work are usually large, rather wide about the ears, and with a broad, although not necessarily high, forehead. The broad, protruding Beethoven forehead indicates musical skill.

HENS AS BAROMETERS

A poultry fancier near Durham, England, produced curious results by altering and alternating the food given to his fowls.

It is known to many who have reared canaries for the market that Cayenne pepper, put into their food results in a notable difference in the character and shade of their plumage, giving the feathers a smoothness and reddish tinge which adds very much to the sum for which the birds may ordinarily be sold.

If the same ingredient be added to the diet, especially of white hens which have been hatched from carefully-selected eggs, their feathers become pale rose, and they flush to a brilliant red when the weather is damp and a storm is approaching. These hens thus become veritable barometers, and the progression of color from pale to brilliant is so exact that a scarlet hen stalking about the barnyard is regarded as certain prophecy of a storm which may be as much as twelve hours distant.—Tit-Bits.

GREAT BRITAIN IS LIKELY TO RECOGNIZE CARRANZISTAS

ritish Admiral Accompanied by Staff in Uniform, Pays a Formal Call on Constitutionalist Commander

ashington, May 16.—Admiral Mayo orted to-day that the British ad al at Tampico, accompanied by staff in full uniform, had called on Gen. Gonzales, the constitution st commander at Tampico. The l was accompanied by all the for lities occasioned by a tender of re ts to a recognized government. d the administration has construed s action to mean that Great Bri n proposes to recognize the Car nistas. Here is the text of Ad ral Badger's report:

"Admiral Mayo reports that the itish admiral, with his entire staff d two captains all with side arms, led on Gen. Gonzales yesterday. miral Mayo has arranged to call day with the understanding that is to be informal."

U.S. Administration Pleased.

ecause Great Britain was the first wer to recognize Huerta against wishes of this country, the action the British admiral in recognizing constitutionalists has gratified administration.

he formal call is interpreted in iralty circles to mean that Great ain will assist this government after in reducing Huerta's dwind power and in establishing a new ernment through the instrumental of the constitutionalists. The manders of the foreign vessels at pico are expected to follow the mple set by the Britons.

THE NEW PUBLIC BUILDING

Plans for the new building are going ahead rapidly. They are elaborate and fill a huge book as such plans usually do. It is expected that tenders will be called for in a month or so. The building is 132 feet long, 70 feet wide, and 58 feet high. The front view shows a classic design, as does also the rest of the building. The ground floor front is finely finished cut stone stepped. From this ten lofty pillars of stone rise to the cut-stone coping. Elevators and stairways rise from the corners. A great well provides ample light. The post office will occupy the ground floor front with two fine public entrances and a side entrance for mail-matter. The building will be undoubtedly a great ornament to Peterborough.

BRITISH SUBJECTS IN MEXICO CONCENTRATING FOR DEFENCE

Washington, May 16.— Word has reached here foreshadowing the approach of a critical moment in the capital. British subjects from the interior it is stated have been gathered in the concentration districts in the foreign residential quarters of Mexico City, where it was determined long ago they would protect themselves against whatever arose. More British nationals are reported arriving by every train, while others are hastening toward the coast.

The British subjects are amply supplied with arms and ammunition despite earlier rumors that weapons had been taken from the legation and from residents by order of General Huerta.

The German and Austrian defence organization is also ready to stand a siege and those nationals, according to report, are being gathered.

Apparently the feeling is general among all foreigners that the next few days will see a tumult of revolt in the capital.

LOCAL AUTO OWNERS

Meeting in Bank of Montreal Chambers Will Be Held To-morrow Night.

There are now about two hundred and thirty auto owners in Peterborough and vicinity. The majority of the owners last year became members of the local Association which is in affiliation with the Ontario Motor League. Some of the recent owners have not yet become interested and in order to awaken an interest this article is written with a view of enlightening them as to the work of the Ontario Motor League and also of the local Association.

The local Association aims at improving road conditions both in the city and the surrounding country and last year entertained the County Council and the Road Commissioners at South Beach. This bore fruits in the betterment of certain roads

The entertainment committee are making arrangements for another outing for the County Council to Hastings, for a league outing at South Beach, for a basket picnic at Bewdley, for drives around the city for the inmates of the various institutions in the city, in short, for a summer of enjoyment for league members.

Come to the meeting to-morrow night in the Bank of Montreal Chambers and hear Dr. Doolittle explain fully the work of the Ontario Motor League and Mr. Peck, M.P.P., the recent legislation in connection with the Good Roads Commision.

Every one in any way interested, whether the owner of an automobile or motorcycle or not, is cordially invited to be present.

BRYAN LAUGHS AT ROOSEVELT FINDS

Lincoln, Neb., May 16.—William J. Bryan is not greatly impressed with Theodore Roosevelt's South American discoveries.

"Colonel Roosevelt," says Mr. Bryan in the current issue of The Commoner, "is back within reach of the telegraph and announces that he discovered a new race of men in the boyoed. The colonel's test of a new race is whether the members thereof ever heard of him before."

Mr. Bryan also gives this dig:

"The prophecy that Roosevelt will be the presidential nominee of the Progressives and the Republicans in 1916 is still being repeated, and apparently is finding a few believers. If that should happen it would be painful to witness the efforts of a number of esteemed Republican spellbinders to revise the campaign speeches they made in 1912."

DESERTERS ASK TO SERRVE OUT TERMS IN MEXICO SERVICE

U. S. Military Prisoners Catch War Fever and May be Allowed to See Active Service

New York, May 16.—With reserve ammunition for the entire army division, the Hawaiian-American liner Panaman, chartered by the government, left at noon to-day to join the transports mobilizing in Galveston to carry 60,000 troops to Mexico if necessary.

The Panaman is the fourt and last ship equipped for transport service this week. At day-break this morning she steamed out of the shipyards and proceeded down the lower bay. There the government lighter Gen. Joseph E. Johnston drew alongside and the dangerous task of transferring 7,900 fifteen pound shrapnel shells was accomplished without accident. Because of the explosive character of the cargo, the municipal authorities demanded the work of transferring the shells be done at a point well off Gravesend.

The 300 military prisoners in Castle William on Governor's Island, it was learned to-day, have caught the war fever. Persistent appeals to Col. William G. Haan, chief of staff, from the better behaved prisoners, for a chance to go to Mexico and serve out their terms in active service, have been considered.

BRAVELY SMILES AS SHE FLIES UPWARD TO SKY ON LAST BEAM

Mrs. Thos. Wills, Wife of Construction Foreman, is Carried 250 Feet Above the Street Standing on Last Load of Steel

Toronto, May 16.—Perched on the top of the last load of steel to be hauled to the top of the new Royal Bank Building, Mrs. Thomas Wells, wife of the foreman of construction, Saturday afternoon, was the first woman to make the perilous journey to the top of Toronto's latest skyscraper.

Mrs. Wells did not show the slightest hesitancy to make the trip, and standing between two steel workers on the beam, holding on to the huge chains, she stood smiling while the foreman gave the signal that started her on the journey that ended 250 feet above the traffic policeman's head.

After her journey Mrs. Wells said that she wasn't scared a bit, in fact she liked the trip through the air so well that she preferred to take the downward trip in a box on the same hook rather than climb down the thousand odd steps. She went with her husband on the second trip.

"I didn't think anything about falling, and I talked all the way up. I just looked down once and saw all the little people on the street gazing up at me. I can imagine them saying such things as 'I wouldn't do that for a thousand dollars,' but I don't mind, and I would take the same journey again to-day if I had the chance."

TO END WAR WILL BE VERY DIFFICULT

George Brandeis Compares U. S. Position With That Of Germany

New York, May 16.—George Brandeis, the famous Danish Shakesperian scholar, noted essayist and distinguished political publicist, in an interview says: "I fear the United States will have the greatest difficulty to end the war with Mexico. President Wilson's position, that to fight Huerta is not fighting the Mexican people, is similar to the stand of Germany in the Franco-German war, that opposition to Napoleon was not antagonism to the French people. After all peace between the nations is not brought about by individuals." Prof. Brandeis goes to Chicago to lecture before the Danish Society on Napoleon and Shakespeare.

CAR OVERTURNED

Henry Cartier, Lighthouse Keeper on Thames River, Nearly Killed.

Chatham, Ont., May 16.— Henry Cartier, lighthouse keeper at the mouth of the Thames river had a narrow escape from death in an auto accident this morning about eight o'clock. His injuries may prove fatal. He and Spencer Hamilton, of Jeanette's Creek were driving to Tilbury when a cow got in front of them. The auto was overturned in the ditch, both occupants of the car underneath it. Pat Strong, who happened to be near, got Hamilton out, but it was some time before Cartier was taken from under the car.

FINE NEW ORGAN AT SACRED HEART CHURCH WAS DEDICATED

Yesterday evening was an important event in the history of the Church of the Sacred Heart. The handsome new pipe organ, donated by the late Mr. McManus, was for the first time used and flooded the sacred edifice with its sweet and voluminous notes. The religious nature of the occasion was signified by Pontificial Vespers which His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., sang, assisted by a deacon and sub-deacon. His Lordship also preached. Priests of the diocese who found it possible to come were present.

Lay visitors likewise were in attendance and to afford them accommodation no children were admitted. Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament is to be given for them at a later date.

Mr. John Armstrong, organist of the church of the Sacred Heart presided at the new organ, and his excellent work of the past, together with his experience with pipe organs, was an assurance that the new instrument was heard at its best. The choir has been practising for some weeks and the singing was of a high order.

The new organ, which is situated in the gallery, is the work of Casavant Freres, St. Hyacinthe, Que., and reflects great credit upon that firm. The new instrument presents a splendid appearance, is artistically finished, and adds greatly to the interior of the church.

NEW ORGAN AT KNOX CHURCH MOST SUCCESSFULLY INTRODUCED

Yesterday morning the fine new organ of Knox Church was officially heard for the first time with Mr. George Kenyon playing. Special music, both vocal and instrumental, was rendered.

The new organ is a great addition to this popular sacred edifice and will add greatly to the pleasure of its large congregation. The special preacher for the occasion was the Rev. George Hanson, D.D. of Montreal, formerly of Belfast Ireland. The reverend gentleman gave a forceful and masterly address. Rev. H. J. Keith, the pastor of Knox Church, is to be congratulated both on the success of yesterday's services and on the continued and increasing popularity of his undivided parish.

THE REBELS ARE NOW CLOSE TO THE CAPITAL CITY OF MEXICO

The War Going Strongly Against President Huerta and His Party.

Juarez, Mex., May 16.—Actual fighting for the possession of Saltillo has been begun by General Villa's advance guard, and after an hour's engagement the Federal outposts withdrew.

Villa's main Torreon division of more than 15,000 men today began leaving Paredon, forty miles from Saltillo. They are marching overland for the attack on the Federal stronghold.

Close to Mexico City.

Vera Cruz, May 16.—General Emilio Zapata, the Rebel bandit, is within ten miles of Mexico City with 5,000 men, and loyal troops in the city have been sent forth to meet him. It was said fighting against the advancing rebels began late yesterday. Mexicans are fleeing from the capital in great numbers. Reports of Zapata's plans for looting and sacking the city have spread, and the fear of his unorganised band increases hourly.

If Zapata contemplates an immediate attack on Mexico City, it would appear that he has broken the bargain which he made with General Villa to hold back until the latter takes Saltillo. Whether Zapata can restrain his wild bands from rushing upon the city until Villa comes up with his troops of the North is a question. If Zapata should attack the city, it is understood he will not oppose the rebels from the North, but will prepare the way for Villa's triumphant entry.

To Protect Property.

Washington, May 17.—Reports from Rear Admiral Mayo stated that General Gonzales, the Carranza commander at Tampico, had assured United States Consul Miller that complete protection would be given to American and other foreign property about the seaport, including the immense oil interests there.

With the taking of Tampico by the Constitutionalists, oil men in New York, who have Mexican interests, believe that the operation of the oil fields will be speedily resumed.

Tea and Coffee
Find Their Place

The Literary Digest, of March 28, 1914, says.

"Cocain and its allied intoxicants appear to be about the cheapest things in the market. They are seemingly cheaper than whiskey, cheaper than beer, cheaper in proportion to effects than tea or coffee."

The best teaching of to-day is distinctly against the use of tea, coffee and other drugs, and drug-bearing beverages—especially among the young. It is well established that headache, nervousness, indigestion, sleeplessness, and other aches and pains are commonly caused by tea and coffee drinking.

People are becoming alive to this fact and thousands have quit both tea and coffee and now use

EXTRAVAGANT MATERIALS FAVORED FOR EVENING WRAPS

Wonderfully patterned and colored brocades and silks that we have heretofore admired at a distance with a vague notion that they were intended for some use, but never for a moment connecting them with the idea of dress, have come into favor for evening wear. Often the entire wrap is fashioned of a material which reminds one strongly of a Chinese mandarin's coat, and then, again, a wrap of a rich velvet or silk in a plain color is trimmed with a gorgeously colored brocade in a Persian or Indian design. It offers the woman who really loves these vivid, glowing colors to indulge in them without appearing in poor taste.

A charming dancing frock with a double tunic of chiffon in a delicate shade of yellow over charmeuse of a darker shade is illustrated in No. 8100. Over the shoulders and edging each tunic is a band of Persian embroidery in which there are glints of gold and interminglings of shades that harmonize exquisitely with the material of the gown.

The bodice is a very simple surplice design; the transparent sleeves and decolletage are edged with tiny pearls.

This gown may be copied in size 36 with 2¼ yards of plain material for the skirt, 6¼ yards of 42 inch material, silk or chiffon, for the overdress. A simple charming design for an evening wrap is shown in 8076. It is perfectly plain, closes on the left shoulder and is well suited to the rich brocade in which it is here developed.

This wrap may be made in any size with 3½ yards of 42 inch or 54 inch material without up and down.

No. 8100—sizes 34 to 42.
No. 8076—sizes 32 to 46.

Household Hints For Busy Women

Sometimes boot polish becomes quite dry with keeping. Moisten it with a little turpentine. It softens the polish, making it usable at once, and also gives a good gloss to the leather.

If at any time you should have a gathered finger or poisoned hand, take a cabbage leaf, roll it out with a bottle until the juice comes, and tie it on the affected part. This will draw and cleanse it far better than a poultice.

When using oil stoves to prevent them from smoking, dissolve one tablespoonful of common salt in every pint of paraffin oil that you use. This also gives a much clearer light, and it prevents the oil vessel from rusting.

Never have linen starched if you are going to put it away for a long time. It is apt to crack and even to rot. Rinse the articles quite free from starch, dry, and fold up in blue paper, as this keeps them from turning yellow.

A capital cleanser for varnished and stained wood work is tea water. This may be made by pouring boiling water on spent tea leaves, straining the liquid afterwards through a cloth or muslin. The tea water loosens the dirt quickly.

To free the hands from disagreeable odors such as that of onions, cod liver oil, etc., mix a little ground dry mustard with warm water and wash the hands well with it. The saucers of scales or vessels used in cooking can be freed from odors by the same method.

If you possess a hot water bottle that is cracked, fill it with sand instead of water. You will find it is quite as useful for warming a bed as when it was new. The sand retains the heat longer than water does.

CHILDREN AT THE TABLE

Things They Should Learn About Their Actions at Meal Time

The proper position at table is to sit erect with the waist or chest just a few inches from the table. Never lounge or slip down in the chair. The hips should touch the back of the chair near the seat and the body should bend from the hips. Never support the elbows on the table. It may be comfortable, but it is very ungraceful.

Teach the young sons to remain standing until the mother and sisters are seated. This custom should be strictly regarded.

The proper place for the knife and fork when not being used is to place them on the plate, together with the tips in the center and handles on the edge.

The proper way to dip soup from the plate is away from them instead of towards them and it should be taken from the side of the spoon, not from the end. Never tip the soup plate or cup to get the last drop. Never crumb crackers into the soup.

Eat slowly always. 'Tis best for your digestion. Eat slowly for appearances' sake. Never allow children to spread a slice of bread and bite and cut it. Bread should be eaten by breaking off small pieces. Butter them just before placing them in the mouth. Teach them to peel and quarter apples or peaches and cut into mouthfuls.

When finished do not push a plate away nor toy with the crumbs. Allow children to enter into the conversation but also teach them to be attentive listeners. Teach them to appear at meal time—on time—with neat appearance and a smile. The dining-room should be sunny and bright, and children should be the same.

Move chairs carefully and noiselessly and let each one assume his share of responsibility of properly passing the food nearest him. Never allow them to sit down, eat the food hurriedly and leave the table before others are finished. If once they leave the table do not allow them to return at that meal.

Teach your children to try all kinds of foods. One may learn to like most any of them, and a sad thing is a child whose table manners have been neglected, as these are the test of culture.

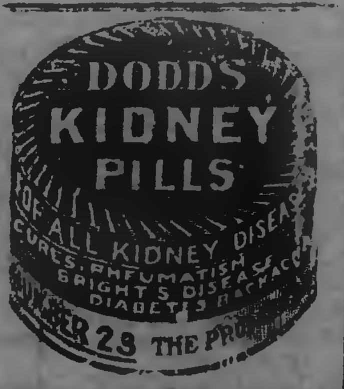
PAY DAY ON A RAILWAY

An idea of the extent of the operations of a big railway may be gathered by a glance at pay day on the C.P.R., where is paid out over $6,000,000 in cheques, distributed over the system. By actual count this number with the growth of the system and the consequent need of more men, ever grows. A decade ago the total number of employes was something like 65,000. To-day it is over 120,000 in all grades of activity. It might be said that over 500,000 persons are directly interested in, and look forward to, the monthly pay day.

SAVING THE FRUIT TREES

Economy and Common Sense Will Keep up the Orchard

All old fruit trees when they cease to bear good crops of fruit should be grubbed and burned. To keep up the stock of fertile fruit trees there should always be young ones in course of preparation to take the place of those that are worn out, then when an orchard tree fails to bear, the young one can at once take it's place. It should be understood, however, that when the old tree has been grubbed up, the soil in which it has been growing should be renewed, and if need be some rough material in the way of broken bricks, etc., put into the bottom to assist drainage if the subsoil is at all heavy and inclined to hold water. Those who like to do home grafting need never to be without young healthy trees. It may be pointed out that old trees must not be condemned until one is quite sure that they are past renewing, as many suffer from pure neglect in the way of food. Orchards in which cattle and sheep are allowed to graze are not so likely to fail, but when the grass is converted into hay and nothing in the shape of food is brought back, then the trees must suffer and fail to crop. Orchard trees that are past recovery should be allowed further trial and rich top dressings given. In many of our farmyards drainings from the cowshed and stable are often allowed to run to waste, whereas these, if saved and diluted applied to such old trees, will work wonders. Sewage from the house and the soapsuds from the laundry may be profitably utilized in the same way.



FRENCH WOMEN INDUSTRIOUS

Conservation of Time is One of Their Specialties

A visitor to France enthusiastically described some of the surprising but admirable things regarding the ceaseless industry of workers that she witnessed in Paris.

The young woman who called for the washing had her knitting, and carried the basket on her back, so that as she walked home she might ply the needles. Market women invariably were knitting and crocheting as they tended their stalls. "Our little maid of all work," said the observer, "kept her crocheting in the kitchen, and while the meals were cooking on the funny little gas stove she crocheted as though her life depended upon it, and, so far as I could see, neither the cooking nor the lace work suffered because of her undivided attention. When the door-bell rang she walked down the little hall, still crocheting."

It is this form of industry and concentration which begets efficiency and, in larger relations, success as it is defined by the world. There is an impulse for concentration in almost every field. But the chief waste of the world always has been the waste of time.

KELLY-SPRINGFIELD TIRES

AN UP-TO-DATE NURSERY RHYME.

There was a man in our town,
And he was wondrous wise.
He bought a second-hand old car,
With inferior supplies.
He then acquired some cheap skate tires,
They claimed them good, though cheap;
What happened to that poor old slob
Would make an angel weep.
He started on a tour one day
With the manners of a prince.
His tires blew higher than a kite,
He's ne'er been heard of since.

A New Life Sentence

Australia is such a land of experiments, political, legal and social, that there need be no surprise at finding the latest judicial novelty springing up in Melbourne. Judge Eagleson, who presides in the County Court there, is given to total abstinence from alcoholic liquor the form of a penalty, while hoping, no doubt, that this will act as a remedy. When criminal drunkards are brought before him and convicted he sentences them to teetotalism for life. Possibly he got the idea from America, a somewhat similar experiment having been made by the late Judge Pollard in ordinary cases of drunkenness. But just there is the difference. They are graver cases which are being dealt with by this method in Australia. Though the method worked well with the drunkards to whom Judge Pollard applied it, he himself affirming that in 95 per cent. of the cases the sentence brought about a cure, there seems to be considerable rashness in the assumption that the same system will readily affect the reform of criminals.

The basic fact on which it rests firm stands firm that is, that a vast proportion of crime springs from intoxication. And the man who commits a crime in a gust of passion arising from intoxication may, on coming to himself, be so remorseful as to welcome and serve a life sentence of sobriety. But the hard-drinking criminal presents a different problem. It may be rather dangerous to set him at liberty under sentence to abstain from the stuff which has got into his blood and the very deprivation of which might make him savage. If he is unwilling to obey, there can hardly be any supervision so close as to compel his obedience. And in these circumstances the knowledge that if he is caught drinking he will be taken back to prison is unlikely to prove an effectual detergent. After all, however, the experiment will be watched with friendly interest, because in the ordinary treatment of criminals there is too much that is penal and too little that is remedial.

Sciatica Vanishes Instantly If Nerviline is Used

CAN YOU BEAT THIS CASE ?

No ordinary liniment will even relieve Sciatica. Nothing but the most powerful kind of a remedy can penetrate through the tissues and finally reach the Sciatic Nerve. You can always depend on the old-time "Nerviline." Nothing made to-day is as good for Sciatica as Nerviline was when first introduced, about forty years ago. All this time the same old "Nerviline" has been curing Sciatica Lumbago, Rheumatism, and is considered to be without an equal in relieving pain or soreness anywhere. "Nerviline couldn't be made stronger or better" writes James G. Edwards. "The way it cures Sciatica is to me simply a miracle. For years I suffered frightfully. I ruined my stomach with internal dosing. I rubbed in gallons of oils and liniments — none were strong enough. One good rubbing with Nerviline relieved. I kept on rubbing and shortly was cured. My father cured rheumatism in his right arm and shoulder with Nerviline, and my mother cured herself of chronic lumbago with Nerviline. Our family simply swears by Nerviline and we are never without a 50c. family size bottle in our home. We find that for external pain, for coughs, colds, earache, such minor ills it is a veritable family physician."

AN ARMY OF PEACE

Well Equipped Buildings Needed For Technical Education

Dr. F. W. Merchant in discussing Technical Education, said there was a great deal of talk about conservation these days, but the loss to the nation in the matter of material things was nothing compared to the unrealised gift of its citizens, which had no chance to find an outlet for its genius. The present system of evening classes was not one conducive to the best results. Pupils came jaded to the classes after their day's work, and the speaker contended that the day school must be depended upon more for the support of vocational education. The ages best suited for the making of industrial efficiency were between fourteen and sixteen, and it was here that the nation lost a large number of young members who might be drafted into the ranks of the technical schools. He was afraid that they would eventually have to take the action of Germany in this regard and make technical education compulsory. A great movement was going on with regard to militarism; halls were being erected all over the country, and Dr. Merchant declared that they wanted similar buildings equally well equipped for the training of what Lord Haldane calls "an army of peace to maintain industrial supremacy."

PUBLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

TO BOOM PETERBOROUGH.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir.—I saw in your paper, recently an article advocating that Peterboro might well be made the scene of a scenario for a moving picture film, having the Lift Lock used in the picture. Ten cents worth of energy backed by a copper's worth of argument would get a film Co. to send their actors here. A play could easily be written to embody this feature. The film company would be glad to feature the "largest lift lock in the world" and Peterborough would get the largest and most widespread advertising through such medium.

STAGE STRUCK IN FIRST GAME

Even the Great Muggsy Knows What Nerves Mean to a Young Player

Muggsy McGraw made his initial appearance in professional baseball under conditions that were far from encouraging. He was given the first tryout by the Olean club of the old New York state league, and was assigned to the third bag. McGraw was then a youngster in his teens. He made his debut April 1, 1890, an ominous date for John, as on that auspicious occasion he proved to be the biggest kind of an April fool package.

McGraw was so small it was impossible to find a suit to come anywhere near his measure. It seemed to McGraw, as he has told it, as if all the world was in attendance on the day he appeared at Olean. To his eyes it seemed as if he had never before seen so many people. This, of course was due to the fact that the little third baseman was nervous and that his mind multiplied the actual number of spectators. The noises made by the crowd also worried him. It sounded like the prolonged roaring of a mighty sea.

When the first ball was knocked down to him he says the noise of the crowd ceased as if by magic, and the ball, which happened to be a slo grounder, appeared to McGraw as if it would never reach him. Finally, after what seemed to be an age, he found himself with the ball in his grasp, and he turned to throw it over to first base, where there was a player who was the tallest in the league.

The distance to first now appeared to McGraw to be fully a mile away, and his heart sank within him as he suddenly thought to himself that he would never throw the ball that far. Yet he nerved himself, and not only did he get the ball over, but he put it several feet over the first baseman's head. Every succeeding time the ball was knocked down to McGraw during the rest of the game he managed to throw higher and higher over the head of the man on first.

After the game the manager came up to McGraw and patting him on the head, told him that he was a nice boy, and so on, but as a ball player he was a joke. McGraw left Olean that night and went over to Wellsville, where he finished the season. He did so well that at the end of that year he was the recipient of eighteen different offers from managers who were willing to pay well for his services.

BOXER'S BIG SALARY

The Thrifty Frenchman Finds the Ring Stepping Stone to Fortune

Georges Carpentier, the French pugilistic champion, is very fond of stage life which his success enabled him to take up; also he is proud of his ability to make a huge income by the ring and theatrical engagements.

"It is very strange to be making so much money in such a pleasant way," said Carpentier. "When my manager discovered me I was 15½ years old, and I was earning only a franc a day in a coal mine. When he wished me to go in for training my parents were unwilling to lose even that amount of money, but he said he himself would pay the franc a day.

"In my first year I made $100 the next $750, in the third $5,000, in the fourth $35,000, and now I am making about $50,000 a year. My parents, to whom I gave my first $5,000, rejoice very much in my success, and, indeed, I think there are few who at my age make as much money as I have been able to."

CREDIT FOR FARMERS

What a Western Man Learned by Trip to Europe

The Canadian farmer suffers the greatest handicap in the world in the matter of facilities for borrowing money, said Mr. J. H. Haslam, of Regina, Sask., who went to Europe as chairman of a commission to investigate agricultural credits. While the Canadian farmer (presumably, the Western farmer) pays anywhere from eight per cent. up to 50 per cent. for advances, the European farmer with less land and a smaller investment can secure "almost any amount he may ask for" at from two to six per cent.

In France money is at the ready disposal of the farmer at a rate of interest ranging from two and a half to three per cent. In Germany he pays from three and a half to five per cent., in Italy from four to six per cent., in Belgium and Holland from three to four per cent., in Austria-Hungary four and a half per cent., and in Russia from four and a half to six per cent. In nearly every country the farmer obtains money as cheaply as or more cheaply than the banks.

BATH FOR EYEGLASSES

Good Results Follow a Good Soap and Water Wash

Do you ever give your eyeglasses a bath? If not, give them a surprise and see how you like the result.

Dampness and dust form a gummy combination on the eyelashes, and the wearer of glasses or spectacles will find his vision, apparently, much improved by giving them a thorough washing daily with soap and warm water, followed by drying and polishing with tissue paper. The gummy substance which collects on the lenses cannot be removed by a mere rubbing with chamois or tissue paper.

An oculist, who knows the importance of well-washed lenses, carries in his pocket a vial of alcohol. It takes but a moment to moisten the corner of a handkerchief and remove the combination of dust and moisture from his glasses. Another has the case of his glasses interlined with a folded bit of soft tissue, such as is used for copying letters in offices. This is so soft that it is easily folded into the small space of the receptacle case. No dust collects on this as it does on the velvet lining, and the tissue interlining is renewed every day or two.

Put Wooden Leg on Cow

Dr. James M. I. Galloway, a young veterinary surgeon of Kirkintilloch, Scotland, performed a most remarkable operation recently. A Holstein cow belonging to a friend broke its leg while climbing a hill. Dr. Galloway gave the cow an anaesthetic, and then amputated the injured member. A wooden leg was then designed and fitted to the cow and she now is perfectly well and contented.

Details are discussed freely around the evening lamp, and thus from earliest childhood the members of the household become identified with parental plans in a manner impossible in any other calling. To this may be attributed in large measure that sober sense of responsibility which, more than mere physical fitness, gives the country boy pre-eminence in the larger sphere he may subsequently enter. It further explains, in some measure, the gratifying response to reputable advertisements in the farm press, for these are read and discussed, together with the problems with which the paper deals, and receive a sympathetic audience possible in few other publications.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By Leona Dalrymple

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

Bachelor Quarters.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

I'VE been keeping bachelor quarters now for over a week. Mary's having a splendid time at Marner's Lake. Now, although I've frequently reflected that marriage to me has been an immense disillusionment, and that outside of a certain pride and tranquil affection I do not love Mary as a man should love the one woman in the world, it's odd how I miss her. To be sure I've gotten my own breakfast ever since I was married, so it makes very little difference to get it now, but I don't like eating at a little restaurant in town at night and then tramping home to a lonely house and a [illegible] smoke.

Dad and mother [illegible] off on their usual [illegible]? Otherwise I should have packed up my duds and gone home for the weeks Mary is enjoying herself at the lake.

Now Mary complained a great deal of the heat when she was skilfully manoeuvring for her summer at the lake, but I doubt if there's a cooler place anywhere than our little piazza when the night's grown quiet. Still it's lonely. The crickets and night insects keep up a pretty, plaintive chorus.

A Dreary Place.

And how I do hate to make my bed. For a while I made my bed every morning, then I made it every night. Now I sleep in each bed in turn and make 'em up at the end in a bunch. This way I'm three beds ahead and don't have to worry so much.

I'm beginning to think I'm a national fool full of moods. I've grown cynical about marriage, yet here I'm wishing Mary was home and thinking what a dreary sort of place home is without her.

I was thinking all this sort of lonesome stuff one night over a melancholy pipe and picturing my Mary out on a moonlit lake with a jolly crowd having a wonderful time while I was listening to an inspired orchestra of mosquitoes tuning up for the night's work when the telephone rang. I sighed and went in to answer.

It was mother's voice.

"Hello, son," she exclaimed heartily. "How are you?"

"Hello, mother!" said I, warmed into cheerfulness by the pleasant sound of her voice, "when did you get home anyway?"

"Tonight," she said. "Dad and I got tired of rambling about. We began to think how comfortable home is and how much we like to sit on the porch nights together and we simply had to come home. I guess we're getting old, Peter. Home seems the pleasantest summer place after all. How's Mary?"

Home to Mother.

"Oh, Mary's pretty well," I said uncomfortably. "She's away."

"Away!" said mother. "Why, I thought you didn't get your vacation until the end of August, and you were going somewhere together——"

"Well," I explained lamely, "the summer's been pretty warm, and Mary was growing tired and nervous, and everybody she knows is away. That made her pretty lonesome in the daytime, and I thought she'd better go. In fact," I added [illegible], "I made her go."

Mother didn't say anything for some little time. I knew she was thinking of the times Dad had tried to make her go away and rest and she wouldn't go. But mother is a real sport. She doesn't say things like that even when she thinks them.

"Dear, dear," came her kindly voice after a while, "you must be pretty lonely, son. Pack up a suitcase of clothes and come home tonight. Your old room's always ready, and Dad and I will be waiting on the porch for you."

Who could resist that picture? As I hung up, I saw in my mind's eye Dad in his big chair with his slippered feet on the porch pillar by the rose bush smoking and staring at the moon. And mother would be rocking——

It was much too peaceful and cozy a picture for a lonely man to resist. I dashed to my room and packed a suitcase. I am lonely and I do miss Mary, but I suppose she's having a wonderful time.

Tabbies That Really Work

A SUGGESTION made that the rat nuisance should be fought by means of armies of cats has been tried.

Hongkong, for instance, during the epidemic of rat-borne bubonic plague, [illegible] many hundreds of [illegible] and set to work to [illegible] the rodents. They proved [illegible] in this poor rat catching.

In France, the cats are used by the government authorities to protect military stores from the depredations of rats, and in order to train them, and to ascertain their fitness for their work, they are sent for a sea voyage. If they are found equal to killing the rats always found in the lower holds of vessels, they are given a similar job on shore.

Paris also has its government cats. They are kept in the great subterranean [illegible] under [illegible], and [illegible] they are taken [illegible] they [illegible] around to the city.

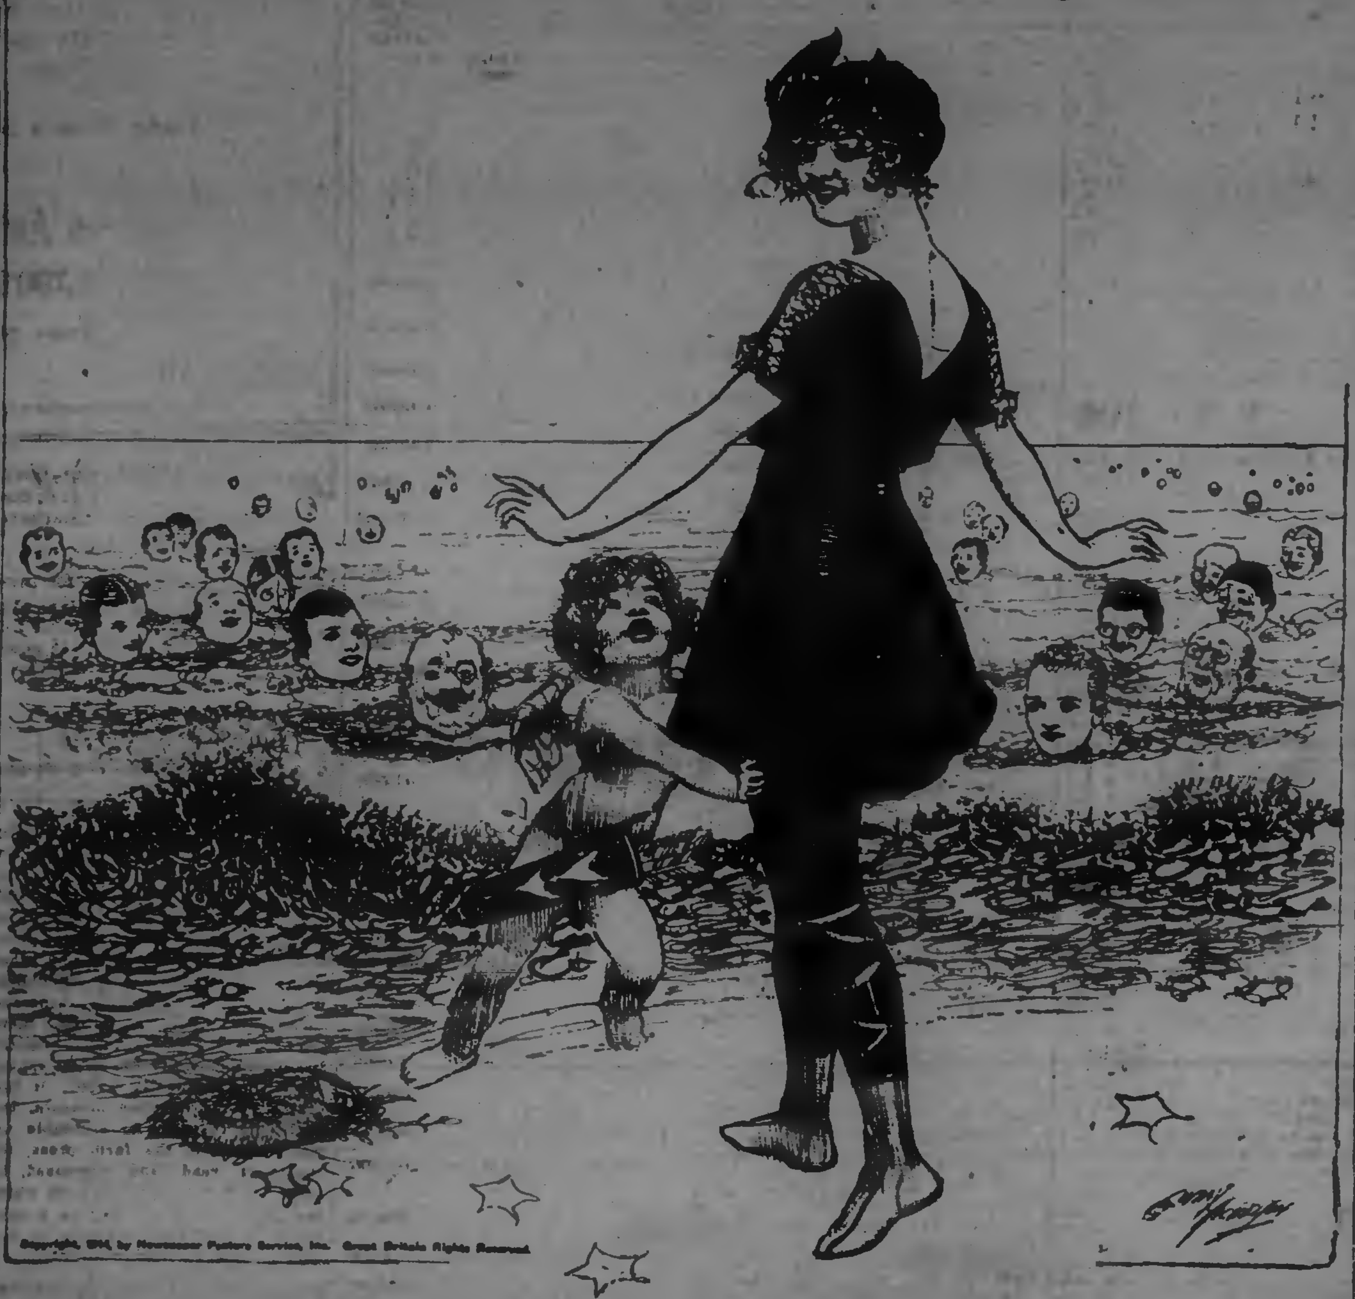
PERILS OF THE SEA ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ By Michelson



Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

OH, YES! There are storms, and monsters, and all sorts of things that make the sea dangerous to persons in ships. Any sailor will tell you how much of a hero he has to be to take the chance.

But there are perils not mentioned in natural history—in shallow water, too. They show themselves to a really knowing [illegible] while the student is still dry at the brink. You can actually count them.

The worst of it is that the longer you hover on the sand the greater the danger grows, for the lurking perils grow impatient and eager. Actually there have been fatal cases when the victim didn't go into the water at all, but just dallied in the gilding sunlight, shimmering and flashing in an unconsciousness of observation that was ALMOST real.

Well, don't blame the old sea. It plays its part well.

"Said the tide to the tied,
You have yourselves to blame."

Dreams in the Songs of Another Day

"YOU must wake and call me early. Call me early, mother, dear."

The little girl is in the other room practising.

She's going to speak a piece at the last day entertainment before vacation.

She had expected to learn something about smile and your heart will smile, or there is no sorrow—we but think it so—or something else "helpful" and "uplifting."

But some one left a volume of Tennyson lying around and the Little Girl found it, and when I went into the room there she sat, curled up in the big chair by the window, and her soft eyes were full of tears—and she said:

"It's so queer about this—I don't know why—but I can't keep from crying when I read this poem."

And she read it aloud in her little soft voice with a kind of gentle sing-song:

"You must wake and call me early,
Call me early, mother, dear.
For tomorrow is the gladdest day
Of all the glad new year.
Of all the glad new year, mother,
The merriest, maddest day;
For I'm to be queen of the May, mother—
I'm to be queen of the May."

The Dear Old Poems.

And, somehow, I cried a little, too; and then we both smiled and were very happy.

And the little girl decided that she wanted to recite the "Queen of the May" at the school festival instead of something modern and "uplifting" and "helpful."

Dear little girl, how in the world would we ever keep our hearts warm at all, in this world of fads and furies, if it were not for such as you.

We know all the old poems, too. "The splendor falls on castle walls and snowy summits old in story." How splendid was the hour when first you heard the ringing glory of that song.

"The long light shakes across the lakes
And the wild cataract leaps in glory."

How your heart leaped and how clear you saw the lake, so blue, so deep, so mysterious, so far, so far away.

"Roll on, thou deep and dark blue ocean, roll—
Ten thousand fleets sail over thee in vain."

Oh, yes, we laugh at that now and we think it's clever to quote it as if it were a joke. But who can write another like it—tell me that?

"Oh, young Lochinvar has come out of the west,
Of all the wide border his steed was the best.
Oh, come ye in peace here or come ye in war
Or to dance at our bridal—young Lord Lochinvar."

Was there ever such a challenge so proudly spoken?

You couldn't be a coward and a sneak and a liar; you couldn't be grasping and envious and mean and small-minded, while you were reading Young Lochinvar.

Get, then, all the old poets, and let's have a riot of joyous comradeship.

"He's tall and he's fine and his shoulders are broad;
His equal scarce ever was seen.
I'd rather beg the world around
For Jock O'Hazeldean."

"Uplift" Is Forgotten.

Well, well, Jock, here you come riding into my heart again, and it's years since I've thought of you at all; and you, with your hair hanging down in threads of gold, brave Jock O'Hazeldean.

Why, you're worth a dozen of the new-fangled heroes with their cigarettes and their highballs and their yachts and automobiles and things.

"Two by two the knights ride down to storied Camelot."

And there you are in your fair tower, sweet Lady of Shalott. Have you been weaving, back and forth, back and forth, all these weary years, and has my cold heart forgotten how to pity you?

"Tirra lirra by the river—sang Sir Lancelot."

How far we've wandered from the shining river; how different are the songs we've heard since then.

"All night long he called her snookieukums!"

How deliciously poetic!

"What's you done with the dollar I give you yesterday?"

I heard a little girl singing both of these songs in one hideous hour, and her mother laughed and we all smiled and said, "Isn't she cunning?"

Well, maybe she is, and perhaps there is no special harm in these songs we cannot escape in these days—but somehow do you know, Sir Lancelot, I rather like your old-fashioned "tirra lirra by the river."

"For I'm to be queen of the May, mother, I'm to be queen of the May."

So you are, sweetheart, so your are. And you shall wear a soft white frock and your brown hair shall fall over your shoulders in a glory of curls, and you shall wear a green wreath upon your brow, and we who are world worn and weary shall smile, and back of the smiles will be, somehow—I know not why—a feeling as of tears.

And perhaps we shan't miss the "uplift" and the "helpfulness" so drearily after all.

Unusual.

"[illegible] marriage is such bad form."

"[illegible] [illegible] insists that they are [illegible]."

Not Hopeful.

"He seems to take a gloomy view of life and its prospects."

"Yes, he's too pessimistic to get a divorce."

The Great Test.

"He says that he can fall in love with any woman he meets."

"I guess that's right. He was in love with a vegetarian once."

An Eye to Business.

Friend—But why are you to have a secret marriage?

Actress—Because the papers will give so much more space to it.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Books a Bracing Tonic to Brain and Body

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

AS sunlight and fresh air, cold water and a plain pabulum are tonics to the brawn and blood, so is reading to the brain and the muscles.

The printed page is the soul's purifier, and it is no new discovery under the sun. An inscription over the door of the library at Thebes says, "Books are medicine for the soul."

It seems the printing press of today had voluminous rivals ten thousand and twenty thousand years ago. Reading was, perhaps, just as universal then as now.

The pyramids were built with a thousand human hands to move each block, and books were inscribed with labor just as cheap and in equal battalions of human "printing presses."

In a word, reading, writing and arithmetic were the same honored medical trio scores of thousands of years ago. Furthermore, the mind of Smith today is not a jot superior to the mind of the Chaldean or Persian shepherd of 25,000 years ago.

Nor is the mind of Edison or Woodrow Wilson superior to that of Aristotle or the ancient wise men. The intelligence and mental incapacity of humanity in general is exactly the same today as it was aeons of years ago, despite all the flubdub and talk of supermen.

All of these truths, however, take nothing from the fact that a little study now and then will more than help the wisest men. The man who is physically and intellectually sick; the domestic drudge with her pandemonium of petty troubles; the fair maid disappointed in love; the bashful, unprogressive youth can all find a cure in the reading room and library habit.

If boys and girls or men and women who by force of circumstances have been compelled to abandon school, study and reading habits early in life, would spend one hour each night in the reading room of a public library, scanning and snatching thought from the pages of elementary books on biology, chemistry, physics, bacteriology, geology, zoology and encyclopedias, much of the mental anguish, perverted intelligence, misdirected thinking, near-insanity and distorted sensations and feelings, which are worse than organic maladies, would be given their coup de grace.

You must, however, mix the living with the dead. That is to say, with every honored old classic that you read you must read three live, vital, current volumes. Such classics as Aristotle, Milton, Shakespeare, Faraday, Dante, Moliere, Hugo and the other worthies must be the meat in the sandwich of current text books, periodicals and newspapers. For each Carlyle, Goethe and Kant there must be several slices of up-to-date 1914 psychology, science, philosophy, drama, poetry and even fiction.

Books then are the safe deposit vaults of thought. They are, moreover, the throbbing, active life blood that pulses the present times and customs through your tissues. Plus muscular experience and environmental contact they are the flesh, the life, the vital spirit of your very self.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie:

I have a boy friend who is a good boy, and one I respect very much. Now I like to dance, and he says if I do he will have to leave me. I certainly do not want to lose him. What do you think I should do?

SINCERE.

WHICH do you like best, your friend or the tango? It seems to be a choice between the two, doesn't it. The tango is pretty sure to go out one of these days. The time's coming, you know, when you won't care for dancing particularly—oh, yes, it is—and if you really care for this person you call a "boy" you'll go on caring for him, always, if that's the kind you are. Is it?

Why doesn't he want you to dance? Can't he dance, and is he jealous of you, or has he really religious prejudice against it?

I'm afraid I should worry a bit about a young man who was so very, very "different" from the others.

Think it over, little girl. Think it over, and make up your mind, for nobody can make it up for you.

But be quite sure that when you have given up dancing the young man does not decide to learn, and get some girl who has not given it up to teach him.

Wouldn't that be vexing?

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care this office.

Three Minute Journeys

The Greatest Tragedy of Conquest

By TEMPLE MANNING

PROBABLY the most striking relics of ancient Roman conquest, preserved mainly by reason of their modern isolation, are to be found in Judea. These are what remain of the fortifications thrown up against Masada, the last Jewish stronghold to defy the Caesars, after the fall of Jerusalem in the year 70.

Today Judea, or that part of southeastern Palestine known as the Wilderness of Judea, is an arid plateau dotted with small conical hills intersected by deep ravines. It is difficult to imagine a more desolate and dreary region, or one filled with more danger, the roving bands of Bedouins being for the most part incurable robbers.

The mountain of Masada towers 1700 feet above the plains of the Dead sea. Its sides are so precipitous that no army could well climb them. Only from one direction may the fortress on the mountain top be reached.

A wall, built by the Romans at the foot of Masada, enclosing the mountain, is still in a good state of preservation. At intervals along its length were camps of soldiers, and these are plain today.

It was here that the most tragic ending happened to the besieged that has ever occurred to any armed force in the world's history. The Jews, finally realizing that their cause was hopeless, agreed to kill themselves. First they burned their valuables. Then they slaughtered their families, and appointed [illegible] men to act as executioners, and after bidding farewell to one another each man lay down by his best friend and presented his neck for the blow. In all [illegible] persons perished.

The early Christians must have rebuilt Masada, for there are the remains of a Byzantine church there.

No visit to Palestine is complete without the side trip to this part of the country, the stories told of [illegible] ancient ruins repaying for the [illegible] of the journey.

How People Feel
When They Have
Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ½ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4838, or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

Oldest Canadian Papers

The oldest Canadian newspaper is the Quebec Chronicle, which was founded away back in 1764, just 150 years ago; next in order being the Montreal Gazette, founded in 1778. These two were older than the New York Globe, which comes third on the continent. Some other Canadian newspapers have reached the interesting age which requires three figures to record it, such as the Kingston Standard founded in 1810; Montreal Herald, 1811; and the Acadian Recorder, 1813, of Halifax. The Kingston Standard is therefore the third oldest paper in Canada, and the oldest in the Province of Ontario.

OIL AND GAS

The Bureau of Mines Reviews Prospects in Canada

The annual report of the mines branch of the Department of Mines makes the statement that Canada possesses gas and oil fields of considerable value, which, if developed, may rival those of the United States. Hitherto, oil as liquid fuel has been used in North America only in the United States, and the report states that there is no reason why Canadians should not also avail themselves of its advantages. It also points out that an increasing demand for liquid fuel has of late constituted one of the outstanding features in power development; and observes that, while the oil business has generally been viewed as a gambling enterprise, and many companies have conducted it as such, the days of [illegible] great chances are past. Dealing with the possibilities of the [illegible] Canadian provinces, the experts [illegible] employ of the mines branch, who have compiled the report, say that in Alberta deposits are considerable, but the cost of drilling is high. Of [illegible] Alberta field, they point out, that it has as yet produced [illegible] commercial quantities. The prisoner's stepmother and a half-brother are responsible for her captivity and are supposed to have acted in this way to have the benefit of an annuity of $140, left to the dwarf by her father. A commercial traveler selling sewing machines [illegible] by a lonely barn when he heard groans and, going in, saw, in the gloom, the pathetic figure of the dwarf raising imploring arms to him. He went to the Paris police and next day ten people listened outside the barn and heard the dwarf moan. They then asked the old woman and her son for the stepdaughter, who had not been seen for twenty years. With complete cynicism the pair confessed that she had been chained all the time in the barn.

A Big Confirmation Class.

Yesterday morning mass at St. Peters Cathedral was exceptionally interesting. bout 60 boys and girls received the sacred rite of confirmation, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien officiating. The girls looked charming in their white frocks and veils, whilst the boys wore white badges on their arms.

These Slit Skirts!

On Saturday a subscriber to the Times asked one of our reporters: "Wouldn't it be a good thing to keep motor cars off George Street when the slit skirts begin to come out? A man can't dodge autos and look over his shoulder at the same time."

Former Local Curate Delineated

The County and City of London, (Eng.) Observer of recent issue contains an excellent portrait of a former Curate of St. John's Church, Peterborough. Rev. P. Clementi-Smith M.A.C.C., who is a nephew of the late Rev. V. Clementi. The occasion was the annual meeting of the City of London Guardians. Mr. Clementi was elected vice-Chairman for the ensuing year.

When the Wind Blew.

A Washington despatch says that "Mexicans are so contrary that they wear, 50 cent shirts and $10 Sombreros." Why that's nothing. A Times reporter saw a young lady standing on George Street yesterday basking in the sunlight. She had on a hat worth $65 and a dress worth $12.00 Along came an impudent gust of wind and our reporter, blushing freely, turned his face after discovering that the lady didn't have any ——. He is too modest to tell the story.

Girl Known Here to Wed.

Mrs. Archer, who is a guest at the Y.W.C.A. yesterday received word that a girl known here, her niece, Miss Jeanette Rubidge of 450 North Normal Park, Chicago, is to be married on June 9th., to Mr. Ritcher of Indiana. The young couple will at once leave for a year's trip in Europe. Miss Rubidge is a daughter of the late Mr. Harry Rubidge, Mrs. Archer's brother, who was auditor of the C. & E. I. SPOILED BY ONE WORD

Sacramento, Cal., May 16.—A discrepancy of one word in the anti-prize fight initiative petition, which contains 34,349 signatures, will keep the measure off the 1914 ballots unless supplementary names are filed before August 1.

The attorney general and secretary of state have discovered that 27,782 persons signed section of one petition and 6021 signed sections of another, both similar, except that in the enacting clause the word "acts" was substituted for "who" The attorney general has ruled that the changing of the word divides the petition into two separate measures.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE.

Yeotes Bros. of this city are opening a new Pool room at Lindsay.

A Mount Morris, N. Y., despatch says: "Water goes down." So it does here but it generally has something else with it!

The Children's Shelter has the smallest number of youngsters there in its existence. There are only four kids there now.

The St. George's Choral Society will wind up a very successful year this evening, when their annual meeting takes place in Coleman's Parlors.

Lindsay is going to hold a public meeting next Thursday to consider the erection of a Children's Shelter in that town.

The young man, Perrin, sentenced at Lindsay to six months in Central Prison, and who, after landing a crack on the constable's jaw, escaped was still at large on Saturday.

Members of Sherwood Forest Camp W.O.W. attended service at the Salvation Army Temple yesterday evening. The Temple Band met the brethern at the hall and escorted them to the Barracks.

The new city by-law was more observed by its absence than its keeping at Saturday's meeting. That is the by-law regarding farmers having tickets recording the weight of poultry, etc.

At Saturday's police court Ben Holmon, who as reported in The Times of that day "ran amuck" on Hunter street, the preceding day, was let go on a charge of vagrancy provided he bade the city fare thee well!

"CREATION" MOVIES AIM AT CATHOLICS CHARGES PRIEST

Signs Protest Warning Against Attending Photo-Play On Christ's Life.

Chicago, May 16.—"The pictures of Creation at the Athenaeum are part of the campaign being waged throughout the country against the Catholic church by the anti-catholic societies, who hope to gain the co-operation of Protestants in making the centennial of Martin Luther's revolt against the church the greatest anti-Catholic demonstration ever held," said the Rev Father Cara,

The priest strongly denounced the pictures from the pulpit of St. Patrick's church Sunday morning, declaring that an erroneous idea of the creation of life and malicious slanders against the Catholic church were insidiously portrayed throughout. As an example he mentioned the incident of the chained Bible, which he said the photoplay implies was for the purpose of preventing the populace from reading it.

Priest Replies

"This is something that has been answered time and time again" said the priest, "the Bibles in those days were worth fortunes, not only for the work the patient monks put in on them, but often the covers were set with precious stones.

"Throughout the printed lecture," he continues, "the idea dominates that the churches in general do not correspond to the ideal of Christ who would recognize no church but a universal communion of Bible Christians In other words, according to their theory to be saves one must be a Bible student. This entirely eliminates the millions of people in the past and present, who couldn't and can't read."

Father Carra added that the work of villifying the Catholic Church was being carried too far and that it was about time for the Catholics to do something about it.

Signs Are Posted

Signs warning the Catholics against attending the performance of Creation are posted in the Jesuit's Church, on Baronne street. Father Foulkes, president of the Jesuit's College, said that one had only to read the literature that was being given away in connection with the picture and to listen to the phonograph lecture which accompanies the play to find out why the Catholic Church objects to the performance. He further said that it shouldn't be expected that the president of a college would have the time to go into such matters for newspaper publication.

The pictures were denounced by Catholics in St. Louis when displayed there recently, and it is expected that some action will be taken in the matter by the Catholics of other cities in the United States.

PLEASE LET US KNOW.

Is the working man, who pays, possibly, an undue percentage of the taxes, going to stand for the increased direct taxation by having his bread made soggy through wrapping it in paper?

Cannot the stench from the Incinerator plant be harnessed and made work? There is a powerful lot of energy going to waste there! Who are going to be the next local Parliamentary candidates?

Has Sunny Jim Wilson's mule had a whisp of hay recently?

Has not the Beautification of Peterborough Society inaugurated good movement?

Is it true that Dinny Daly is going to run for Parliament on the Independent ticket?

When the Bible used the words "when two or three are gathered together, etc" did it forsee that number of Peterborough Street laborers supervised be almost as many bosses at $3 a day each?

THE GAMBLER CHIEF STOOD BY HIS FORMER STORY ON STAND

Reports from Tampico state that the British families and other British refugees, who had sought shelter on board ship, have now returned to their homes on shore.

The gambler chief

New York, May 16.—When Jack Rose left the stand in the Becker trial this afternoon, it was the general opinion that his narrative in the main had not been shaken. "Bridgie" Webber was then called by the prosecution to tell of the part he played in the murder plot and of the gathering of the gunmen, now all dead, at his poker rooms. Webber said he collected graft for gambling houses for Jack Rose and had met Becker through Rose in front of his (Webber's) poker rooms at 42nd Street and Sixth Ave. He backed up Rose in the assertion that he, Webber, was present at the alleged conference in Harlem during June, 1912, where the plot to murder Rosenthal was discussed. This is the conference that the Court of Appeals styled the "heart of a conspiracy." Webber said Becker told him of Rosenthal's threat to "squeal" to the district attorney, then called him aside and told him he wanted him to "get the boys to croak that — — Rosenthal"

"I asked him if he meant to murder him. Becker said he did. I said there would be a lot of trouble if that was done and Becker replied, I'll fix everything. There will be no trouble, I'll see to that.'

"So I agreed to have Rosenthal croaked.'

Webber said he met Becker a few days later and that he asked, 'Why the delay about croaking Rosenthal?' Webber assured him, he said, that it would be done soon.

Borrowed a Thousand

The witness described how the gunmen, Rose, "Dollar John" Langer, Vallon, and other gamblers gathered in his poker rooms the night of the murder. The four gunmen came together. Then Webber said, he went out and succeeded in finding Rosenthal in the Metropole Hotel. A little later Rosenthal was shot down. Not long after, he said, he and Rose met Becker.

Becker," said the witness, "congratulated Rose, and then borrowed $1,000 from me to get the gunmen out of town."

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

You wash dishes about two hours every day. That's one hour wasted!

Dishes get dirty, greasy and sticky and soap will not clean them. Soapy dish water merely cleans the surface; it doesn't dig into the corners and drive out the decayed food particles.

Gold Dust is the sanitary dish washer. It not only cleans the surface, but digs deep after hidden particles of dirt and kills the germs of decayed food which ordinary dish-water overlooks. Gold Dust sterilizes as well as cleanses.

Besides doing the work better than soap or any other cleanser can, Gold Dust will save just half the time you spend in washing dishes.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

LAURIER KEEPS CHURCH HOLIDAY

Special to The Times.

Ottawa, May 18.—In the House to-day, Premier Borden offered to have Parliament sit ... sion Day (Holy Thursday, May 21st) and also on Monday, (Victoria Day). Sir Wilfrid Laurier refused Ascension Day, but agreed to Monday. Mr. Borden promptly refused, with the result that the House rises both days.

TRY ACCUSED AT SCENE OF MURDER

Preliminary Hearing at Bracebridge Annulled; Return 7to Honey Harbour.

Bracebridge, May 18.—The brothers Peter and Andrew Morreau, who are charged with the murder of Robert Hayde, will be taken back to Honey Harbor to-day. It is stated that the preliminary hearing will be heard there instead of Bracebridge. The officials, it is reported, have come to the conclusion that the preliminary hearing must take place at Honey Harbor, where Robert Hayde was found murdered. It seems that the hearing last week in Bracebridge will go for nothing and that proceedings will be started all over again.

The authorities are said to have taken this action in accord with the law, although it will cost much more. The trip from here to Honey Harbor cannot be made in less than twenty-four hours. It is necessary to go to Midland and then across on the boat. The Crown officers here would not talk of the situation.

NO DATE AS YET SETTLED FOR THE PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS

Toronto, May 18.—Outside of what he read in the newspapers Sir James Whitney assured a representative of The Toronto press this morning that he knew nothing of an election. Sir James Whitney admitted that the press was discussing the subject "quite properly."

Asked if the date had been decided upon, he replied that until it was settled as to whether or not there would be an election it would be hardly possible to announce the date. "You will not have to come to me when it is settled," added the premier. "I will send for you."

Sir James was in excellent humor and admitted that he felt like having a chat. As to the appointment of the commissioners to administer the Workmen's Compensation Act, Sir James characterized the measure as one of the most important and far reaching laws that had ever been enacted in Ontario and said that the Government would use the utmost care in selecting the commissioners."

SHRIEKED, SCREAMED; FOUGHT POLICEMEN

London, May 18.—Sentences of a month's imprisonment each were pronounced to-day on "General" Mrs. Flora Drummond and Mrs. Dacre-Fox, two militant suffragret leaders, when they were brought before the magistrate, and charged with disturbing the peace by camping on the doorsteps of the residences of Sir Edward Carson and Lord Lansdowne.

The accused refused to give sureties that they would keep the peace for six months. They turned the court proceedings into a farce by interrupting the evidence, and continuing to talk and jeer at the magistrate while he was pronouncing sentence.

When ordered to be taken to the cells the women became so violent that it was necessary to call in four policemen to remove each of them from the prisoner's enclosure. They were eventually taken out of court screaming and shrieking.

SENATORS TAKE THE FIRST GAME FROM PETES--2-0

The weather man handed out real baseball weather to the teams yesterday, and quite a large number of fans turned out to cheer the boys along. Stan Cresswell made his appearance yesterday on the rubber for the first time and had the Senators at all times eating out of his hand. The Ott... ...ration just couldn't connect with the kind of pill Stan dispensed, and the big guns of the Senators faded away one after another. Mr. Rogers of the visitors, who is an expert with the willow, after adjusting his chest, and brushing last year's dust from the bat, took a long deep breath and just as the pill passed him, swatted at it, but it had passed. Manager Shag followed suit, but on a couple of occasions managed to hit the pill, but little damage was done.

All the boys worked hard, and fielded the ball well, but poor batting kept them out of the running.

Pe—y Swartz was back in position yesterday, while King held the position of shortstop. Fox showed up well at second base and Wilcox played the right garden.

Schoolnox pitching for the Ottawas put up a good game, as also did Catcher Lage, and had the boys working hard all through.

Umpire Bedford will not be present at the Park to-day, he has been called to Brantford. The fans will be sorry to learn this.

Tracey pitched the last inning for the Petes.

LAURIER-GRAHAM LEAD UNPOPULAR

Liberals Divided on C. N. R. With Three Policies of Objection to Choose From

Ottawa, Ont., May 18.—Saturday's sitting at the House was a most peaceful affair. By agreement between the two leaders it had been decided to drop the C. N. R. debate and devote the day to non-contentious bills, most of the members went to the ball game slipped out to the golf links or took a holiday jaunt. A few faithful, never more than a quorum, stuck at their post and five bills, all of a more or less minor nature, were advanced another stage.

The C.N.R. debate will be continued to-day, and the first vote will come Tuesday on the motion of Mr. E. M. Macdonald for a six months' hoist. This will dispose of the resolution. The bill will then be moved and given a first reading. The next fight will be on the second reading and in committee stage.

That the Liberals are about as divided on the C.N.R. question as on the tariff is admitted. Laurier Graham have given the rank and nothing to enthuse over or about. They have criticised the greement. But they have nothing offer as a solution other than the year old solution of the C.P.R. blem o 1904—loan them the mo The country has passed that It demands something substantia return for further aid and thi what the Government has secured.

GOODERHAM BI OPERATION

There is Some Doubt as to lation—Works Commis

Toronto, May 18.—It may be impossible to send a by-law for the oper ation of motor busses in ward seve and other portions of the city to th people before January 1, 1914. Questioned to-day upon the operation the Gooderham bill, or its effect up the motor bus proposals, Controlle Church said: "I think under the ne act, the by-law cannot go to the peo ple before January 1, 1914. We wil have to finanse the proposals in som other way until then. It is just matter of finance. We should hav put motor busses on St. Clair and Danforth avenues before we tore up the pavement and laid tracks, and all that expensive nonsense."

Controller McCarthy does not believe the Gooderham Bill will prevent the submission of the required by-law to the people before January 1. But it would be amusing if the famous bill acted as a boomerang.

Works Commissioner Harris is working upon his report for a motor bus service for Ward Seven, but refused to discuss it.

Recipes for Wrinkles and Bad Complexions.

Of all the beauty recipes that have been published, here are two that have successfully stood the test of time:

Wrinkle Remover—One ounce powdered saxolite, dissolved in ½ pint witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion. It brings instantaneous results.

Face Peeler—Pure mercolized wax, applied at night like cold cream, only not rubbed in; wash off in the morning. It causes the wornout scarf skin to come off in tiny, almost invisible flakes, a little each day, until the fresh young under-skin is wholly in evidence. The beautiful rose-tinted complexion thus obtained is not to be compared with one made over with cosmetics. If the old skin is marred with freckles, pimples or other blemishes, these defects are of course discarded with the skin itself. An ounce of the wax is sufficient in any case.

The ingredients named are inexpensive and can be found in any drug store.

FOUR SURVIVORS OF THE BURNED COLUMBIAN ARRIVE IN HALIFAX

Wasted, Skeleton-like Men, Tugged Manfully at Oars as They Ran Alongside the Rescuing Seneca

HON. MR. COCHRANE IS BACK AT WORK

Arrived at Office This Morning in Ottawa and Plunged Into Business.

Ottawa May 18.—Looking and feeling fine, Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, who has been absent in Great Britain and Europe for nearly three months, returned to Ottawa last night and this morning plunged at once into an arrears of work at his office. He was at his desk at 8 o'clock and was overwhelmed with callers all morning.

Mr. Cochrane broke down in health last fall and for a time it was feared he might have to resign his portfolio. His physicians ordered a complete rest

Halifax, N.S., May 18.—The U. S. Revenue Cutter Seneca arrived here today with the four survivors of the burned steamer Columbian, whom she picked up from their small boat, forty miles south of Sable Island at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The condition of the men was pitiful, but it is believed they would live.

The men are First Officer Robert Tierce; Oscar Kendal and Peter Belanger, sailors; and Michael Ludwigsen. Belanger is a native of Sherbrooke, Que.

Chief Officer Tierce gave the following statement of the experiences of the survivors to Captain Johnston of the Seneca.

LAURIER KEEPS CHURCH HOLIDAY

Special to The Times.

Ottawa, May 18.—In the House to-day, Premier Borden offered to have Parliament sit [illegible]sion Day (Holy Thursday, May 21st) and also on Monday, (Victoria Day). Sir Wilfrid Laurier refused Ascension Day, but agreed to Monday. Mr. Borden promptly refused, with the result that the House rises both days.

TRY ACCUSED AT SCENE OF MURDER

Preliminary Hearing at Bracebridge Annulled; Return to Honey Harbour.

Bracebridge, May 18.—The brothers Peter and Andrew Morreau, who are charged with the murder of Robert Hayde, will be taken back to Honey Harbor to-day. It is stated that the preliminary hearing will be heard there instead of Bracebridge. The officials, it is reported, have come to the conclusion that the preliminary hearing must take place at Honey Harbor, where Robert Hayde was found murdered. It seems that the hearing last week in Bracebridge will go for nothing and that proceedings will be started all over again.

The authorities are said to have taken this action in accord with the law, although it will cost much more. The trip from here to Honey Harbor cannot be made in less than twenty-four hours. It is necessary to go to Midland and then across on the boat. The Crown officers here would not talk of the situation.

NO DATE AS YET SETTLED FOR THE PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS

Toronto, May 18.—Outside of what he read in the newspapers Sir James Whitney assured a representative of The Toronto press this morning that he knew nothing of an election. Sir James Whitney admitted that the press was discussing the subject "quite properly."

Asked if the date had been decided upon, he replied that until it was settled as to whether or not there would be an election it would be hardly possible to announce the date. "You will not have to come to me when it is settled," added the premier. "I will send for you."

Sir James was in excellent humor and admitted that he felt like having a chat. As to the appointment of the commissioners to administer the Workmen's Compensation Act, Sir James characterized the measure as one of the most important and far reaching laws that had ever been enacted in Ontario and said that the Government would use the utmost care in selecting the commissioners.

SHRIEKED, SCREAMED; FOUGHT POLICEMEN

London, May 18.— Sentences of a month's imprisonment each were pronounced to-day on "General" Mrs. Flora Drummond and Mrs. Dacre-Fox, two militant suffragette leaders, when they were brought before the magistrate, and charged with disturbing the peace by camping on the doorsteps of the residences of Sir Edward Carson and Lord Lansdowne.

The accused refused to give sureties that they would keep the peace for six months. They turned the court proceedings into a farce by interrupting the evidence, and continuing to talk and jeer at the magistrate while he was pronouncing sentence.

When ordered to be taken to the cells the women became so violent that it was necessary to call in four policemen to remove each of them from the prisoner's enclosure. They were eventually taken out of court screaming and shrieking.

CONSERVATIVE CONVENTION TO BE HELD ON JUNE FIRST NEXT

Last night the Executive Committee of the Liberal-Conservative Association of West Peterborough held a meeting in the office of Mr. E. A. Peck, M.L.A., with Mr. Jas. Kendry, ex-M.P. in the chair.

There was a large attendance. The chairmen of the various city wards were present except two. These vacancies were filled by the appointment of Messrs. John Edgar and J. D. Craig respectively.

His Honor Judge Hayes of Guelph tendered his resignation as second vice-president. Mr. T. G. Milburn was appointed his successor and Mr. Rich. Sheehy was made third vice-president.

It was decided to hold a convention of the party in the Conservatory of Music on June first to select a candidate for the Provincial Legislature. A committee was nominated to look after details in the interim.

CAUGHT ON ROYAL GEORGE

Chicago Man Arrested on His Arrival in England.

London, May 18.—Adolph Schmidt, alias Kowalskie, who was arrested at the request of the chief of police of Chicago when he arrived at Avonmouth, Bristol, as a passenger on board the Royal George from Montreal, was brought up to-day before the magistrate in the extradition court at Bow street on a charge of alleged forgery. Schmidt was remanded pending communication with the United States Embassy, as no extradition warrant had been obtained. The accused is being held temporarily on a "conveyance" warrant in the hands of the London police.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Light winds, fine and warm.

SENATORS TAKE THE FIRST GAME FROM PETES--2-0

The weather man handed out real baseball weather to the teams yesterday, and quite a large number of fans turned out to cheer the boys along. Stan Cresswell made his appearance yesterday on the rubber for the first time and had the Senators at all times eating out of his hand. The Otta[illegible]ation just couldn't connect with the kind of pill Stan dispensed, and the big guns of the Senators faded away one after another. Mr. Rogers of the visitors, who is an expert with the willow, after adjusting his chest, and brushing last year's dust from the bat, took a long deep breath and just as the pill passed him, swatted at it, but it had passed. Manager Shag followed suit, but on a couple of occasions managed to hit the pill, but little damage was done.

All the boys worked hard, and fielded the ball well, but poor batting kept them out of the running.

Percy Swartz was back in position yesterday, while King held the position of shortstop. Fox showed up well at second base and Wilcox played the right garden.

Schocker pitching for the Ottawas put up a good game, as also did Catcher Lage, and had the boys working hard all through.

Umpire Bedford will not be present at the Park to-day, he has been called to Brantford. The fans will be sorry to learn this.

Tracey pitched the last inning for the Petes.

LAURIER-GRAHAM LEAD UNPOPULAR

Liberals Divided on C. N. R. With Three Policies of Objection to Choose From

Ottawa, Ont., May 18.—Saturday's sitting at the House was a most peaceful affair. By agreement between the two leaders it had been decided to drop the C. N. R. debate and devote the day to non-contentious bills, most of the members went to the ball game slipped out to the golf links or took a holiday jaunt. A few faithful, never more then a quorum, stuck at their post and five bills, all of a more or less minor nature, were advanced another stage.

The C.N.R. debate will be continued to-day, and the first vote will come Tuesday on the motion of Mr. E. M. Macdonald for a six months' hoist. This will dispose of the resolution. The bill will then be moved and given a first reading. The next fight will be on the second reading and in committee stage.

That the Liberals are about as divided on the C.N.R. question as on the tariff is admitted. Laurier and Graham have given the rank and file nothing to enthuse over or cheer about. They have criticised the agreement. But they have nothing to offer as a solution other than the 30 year old solution of the C.P.R. problem o 1884—loan them the money. The country has passed that stage. It demands something substantial in return for further aid and this is what the Government has secured.

DR. BRUCE SMITH ILL IN HOSPITAL

Ontario Inspector of Hospitals and Charities Stricken with Appendicitis.

Toronto, May 18.—Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith Provincial Inspector of Hospitals and Public Charities, who returned yesterday from a trip to New York, was taken to-day to the General Hospital suffering from an attack of appendicitis. It is stated that the attack is mild and that an operation will not be necessary.

LONDON WELCOMES HINDUS

Gathering to Discuss the Question of the Rights of Citizenship in Canada.

London, May 18.—The anticipated British Columbia difficulty with the arrival of the Hindus gives Canadian interest to speeches at a gathering here of the British committee of the Indian National Congress. The object of the gathering is to welcome delegates from India and establish an atmosphere of sympathy and brotherly kindness between India and the rest of the Empire. Lord Courtney presided.

A. M. Jinnah, a Bombay delegate, said nothing aroused the people of India so much as the rude awakening that they, who always understood they were members of the British Empire, should now be denied rights and privileges of British citizenship. Were they or were they not citizens of the British Empire?

Other speakers emphasized the grave importance of the question to the future of India and the Empire.

GOODERHAM BILL MAY DELAY OPERATION OF MOTOR BUSSES

There is Some Doubt as to the Effect of Recent Legislation—Works Commissioner Preparing Report

Toronto, May 18.—It may be impossible to send a by-law for the operation of motor busses in ward seven and other portions of the city to the people before January 1, 1914. Questioned to-day upon the operation of the Gooderham bill, or its effect upon the motor bus proposals, Controller Church said: "I think under the new act, the by-law cannot go to the people before January 1, 1914. We will have to finance the proposals in some other way until then. It is just a matter of finance. We should have put motor busses on St. Clair and Danforth avenues before we tore up the pavement and laid tracks, and all that expensive nonsense."

Controller McCarthy does not believe the Gooderham Bill will prevent the submission of the required by-law to the people before January 1. But it would be amusing if the famous bill acted as a boomerang.

Works Commissioner Harris is working upon his report for a motor bus service for Ward Seven, but refused to discuss it.

GAMBLER FOUND GUILTY OF MURDERING HIS DAUGHTER

Purcell shot his daughter after an unsuccessful attempt to kill his wife.

Recipes for Wrinkles and Bad Complexions.

Of all the beauty recipes that have been published, here are two that have successfully stood the test of time:

Wrinkle Remover—One ounce powdered saxolite, dissolved in ½ pint witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion. It brings instantaneous results.

Face Peeler—Pure mercolized wax, applied at night like cold cream, only not rubbed in; wash off in the morning. It causes the wornout scarf skin to come off in tiny, almost invisible flakes a little each day, until the fresh young under-skin is wholly in evidence. The beautiful rose-tinted complexion thus obtained is not to be compared with one made over with cosmetics. If the old skin is marred with freckles, pimples or other blemishes, these defects are of course discarded with the skin itself. An ounce of the wax is sufficient in any case.

The ingredients named are inexpensive and can be found in any drug store.

THIEVES TOOK $10,000 FROM MOVIES HOUSE

Posed as Detectives to Get in; Blew Safe; Made Watchman Ring the Signals.

New York, May 18.—Posing as detectives, four men gained entrance to a Broadway motion picture theatre early to-day, made the watchman a prisoner, handcuffed three workmen who were in the theatre, then blew open the safe in the boxoffice, obtaining $10,000. The robbers were in the theatre building three hours and compelled the watchman to wind the watchmans clock at various points in the theatre at the proper time so that no suspicion as to their presence would be noticed on the outside.

PESSOU GOES TO PEN

Wife Accompanies Forger on "Long Trip."

New Orleans, May 18.—Alphonse O. Pessou, one of the most notorious forgers who ever operated in New Orleans, cleaning up, as he did, $77,000, was transferred from the parish prison to the state penitentiary at Baton Rouge Tuesday morning, to serve a term of ten years. Richard Meredith, captain of the parish prison, accompanied him. Mrs. Pessou obtained permission to take the trip.

Pessou was tried twice before he was convicted. The forgeries he committed were so skilfully covered up that it was difficult for the prosecuting attorneys to get enough evidence to convince a jury of his guilt.

DISTRESS ON WELLAND

Foreigners and Other Attracted to a Jobless Public Job.

Welland, May 18.—A gathering of two hundred foreigners from the factory section appealed to the town authorities for work or aid to relieve distress. Many of the men have been out of work for weeks and months, and with their wives and children have nothing to eat. Arrangements were made to open a free lunch room at once. Mayor Goodwin wishes to give notice to all men to stay away from Welland as the labor market is overflooded with men coming here expecting to find work on the new canal.

FOUR SURVIVORS OF THE BURNED COLUMBIAN ARRIVE IN HALIFAX

Wasted, Skeleton-like Men, Tugged Manfully at Oars as They Ran Alongside the Rescuing Seneca

Halifax, N.S., May 18.—The U. S. Revenue Cutter Seneca arrived here today with the four survivors of the burned steamer Columbian, whom she picked up from their small boat, forty miles south of Sable Island at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The condition of the men was pitiful, but it is believed they would live.

The men are First Officer Robert Tierce; Oscar Kendal and Peter Belanger, sailors; and Michael Ludwigsen. Belanger is a native of Sherbrooke, Que.

Chief Officer Tierce gave the following statement of the experiences of the survivors to Captain Johnston of the Seneca.

Eleven of us left the Columbian at two o'clock on Monday morning, May 4, in a great hurry, following a heavy explosion. We had no compass in our boat, as it had been taken out for cleaning. We had matches and a lantern, but there was a strong wind and the spray prevented us from securing a light. We kept the Columbia in sight until daylight. The smoke and fire of the ship enabled us to see her until that time

Then the rain began to fall and we lost sight of the ship. We did not attempt to row or sail, but put over our sea anchor and drifted. That day a four-funnelled steamer passed us about a mile and a half away, but we were unable to make any signal before she passed us by.

The next morning, Tuesday, May 5, a steamer with a black, red banded funnel passed us about four miles away, but we could not attract her attention.

On the afternoon of the fifth a Cunard liner came within two miles of us and seemed to stop as though she was picking up something! She soon disappeared, however, and after that we saw no ship until the Seneca picked us up.

For the fourteen days that we were afloat the weather was thick with mist, fog and rain, but the day we were rescued was bright and clear and the sea smooth.

When we abandoned the Columbian we had a cask of water and the boat's tank was three-quarters full. I put the boat's crew on rations, one biscuit and a half a cup of water three times a day for each man. When it rained we caught water in the sail and in that way kept up our supply until we were rescued.

The biscuits ran low and at the end of the first week the allowance was cut down by one-third. On Saturday that he would not stand short ration of water, and despite all the advise of the boat's company began drinking sea water. That night he was taken with delirium and died the following morning.

POLITICS VS WEDDING

French Political Fervor Manifests Itself in a Most Remarkable Manner—Police had To Separate the Fighters.

Paris, May 18.—Political fervor in France manifests itself in extraordinary ways, as the mayor of the small commune of Sarignac near Brest has bitterly realized. On the wedding day of the worthy man's son three local candidates at the general election were invited as honored guests to the wedding dinner. They came and everything went well until some one casually made a remark upon the increased expenses which people are called upon to meet nowadays.

One of the parliamentary candidates—an enthusiastic politician—could not let his opportunity slip. Springing to his feet he declared "If I am elected to the chamber, I shall insist that the taxes for the army and navy should be borne entirely by the rich."

The other two could not let this go unchallenged, so they too, sprang to their feet. In a moment the wedding dinner was transformed into an election meeting. The guests, now divided into three hostile camps, all began to speak at once, each one eulogizing the candidate which he favored and abusing those who dared to disagree. The mayoress, meanwhile, was much distressed to see that her carefully prepared dishes were growing cold and that the choicest delicacies were remaining untouched. Her anguish was unnoticed even by the mayor, who a benefited a conscientous politician, took a prominent part in the discussion. The bridegroom and the bride also proved themselves to be passionate debaters.

The Fra Says---

"When you tell me of your wonderful invention and want to sell me stock in your company, just bring me a snap-shot of the man who is going to manage your concern, as well as a list of what he eats and drinks, the hours he sleeps, and how he exercises both his body and sky piece. Then I'll talk with you."

It requires healthy men—with clear thinkers and strong bodies to build a prosperous business.

VICTORIA DAY ANNEX

Wednesday, May 20th, 1914

THIS is our Annual Victoria Day Sale in the Annex, and for many weeks past our Annex Buyers have been preparing for this great event. Here on Wednesday you will find an immense stock of new Summer Merchandise, to say nothing of odd lines from our regular stock. Everything marked at prices that are away below their real value. We want to make this a record-breaking day for the Annex. We have done our share by preparing values that cannot be surpassed — values such as that have made the Annex the biggest value-giving department in the province. Read this bill over carefully, it will mean the saving of many dollars to you, and take particular note of the windows on Tuesday. But above all, make a point of coming early on Wednesday morning, it is then when the lines are most complete and the choice widest.

Asquith and Redmond

"Never has the temper of Nationalist Ireland been so menacing," writes a cable correspondent. "Mr. Asquith's further advance has created an ugly feeling amongst the Nationalists."

And yet what can Mr. Redmond do? asks the Hamilton Herald. We have often been told that Mr. Redmond holds the government in the hollow of his hand, and is not only able to dictate his terms, but has done so. It is true that he can turn the government out if and when he chooses; but Mr. Asquith is not utterly at the mercy of the Nationalist leader, and is fully aware of the advantage of his position. Mr. Redmond must choose between a dissolution of parliament and endorsement of whatever concessions Mr. Asquith may see fit to make in the amending bill which he is to introduce. A dissolution of parliament and an appeal to the country might result in a Unionist victory—then good-bye to home rule for some years to come. Will Mr. Redmond take the risk? Isn't it more probable that rather than have his cause shipwrecked in sight of port he will consent to any concession which Mr. Asquith is likely to offer to Ulster sentiment.

Col. Hon. Sam Hughes

"The best Minister of Militia Canada has ever had," is the statement that is often heard from the public platform these days by Chairmen at public meetings introducing Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence in the Borden Cabinet, and the Minister justly deserves the title. But it is not a mere title. It is the result of years of arduous work by a man who has pursued the ambition of training the Canadian youth morally, mentally and physically.

When Colonel Hughes undertook the portfolio of Militia and Defence he brought to that important position the qualifications of a soldier and administrator, and the success which has attended his efforts has been due to the fact that he is the right man in the right place.

Nerviline Ends Neuralgia Brings Relief Instantly

No Remedy Like Old "Nerviline" to Cure Pain or Soreness.

That terrible ache—how you fairly reel with it—that stabbing, burning neuralgia—what misery it causes. Never mind, you don't have to suffer—use Nerviline, it's a sure cure. Not an experiment, because nearly forty years of wonderful success has made a name for Nerviline among the people of many different nations. "There is nothing speedier to end Neuralgic headache than old-time 'Nerviline,'" writes Mr. G. C. Dalgleish, from Evanston. "It is so powerful and penetrating that it seems to eat up any pain in a minute. My family couldn't get along without Nerviline. We always keep the 50c. family size bottle handy on the shelf, and use it to end chest colds, sore throat, coughs, earache, toothache and pain in the back. My wife swears by Nerviline. For cramps its effect is astonishing and we believe it is better and speedier than any other household family remedy."

ARTIFICIAL PEARLS

Most of Them Merely Glass Balls With Lustrous Coating Inside

The industry of manufacturing artificial pearls has developed enormously of late years, both in extent and in the remarkable degree of perfection which these imitations of the natural gem have attained, some of them almost defying detection save under the close scrutiny of the keenest experts.

The simplest forms are uniformly spherical and are merely glass balls blown by means of tubes of varying sizes. More ingenious and more natural-looking are the irregular pearls or perles goitrenzes. To produce these the workman sometimes merely touches the ball momentarily with the end of a redhot tube, thus melting the glass at the point of contact and drawing it out irregularly. In other cases he touches one spot or another of the ball to a flame, at the same time blowing gently in the tube. The ball is pierced by two holes, one of which is caused by the breath of the workman, and the other by the hollow in the tube at the moment when this is detached from the pearl by means of a slight tap.

These balls are then merely coated inside with a preparation known as "essence of the Orient." This, despite its elaborate title, consists merely of pure water holding in solution the scales of the little fish known as the bleak-fish. The operation consists in the sucking of the liquid into a tube drawn out to a fine point and then blowing it into the glass bead, which is then given a rotary motion to spread the coating evenly.

The beads when coated are placed in a sieve whose bottom is covered with parchment and shaken incessantly till dry. Finally they are filled with wax so as to be less fragile and a little heavier.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN IT THUNDERS

Simple Explanation of Cannonading in the Sky—Little Electric Particles Make Lightning

What is thunder?

Blow air into a perfectly tight paper bag until it is full. Hold the bag so that none of the air can escape and strike it sharply and suddenly. There will be an explosion like the crack of a pistol. That is what thunder is!

The scientific explanation for it is the expansion, compression and sudden escape of air. It is the same thing that happens in a cartridge shell when you press the trigger of a gun or pistol. In fact that is really a better explanation of thunder than the paper bag experiment because it has all the elements that cause thunder. The spark caused by the cap causes the ignition of the powder, forming a gas which pushes the bullet out of the barrel of the gun and when the gas comes in contact with the air, it makes a roaring, crackling sound trying to get through, because the pressure of the gas is greater than the air. The thunder therefore, is the result of the lightning.

Now, what is lightning?

We don't know. We know that it is electricity—which is another way of saying we don't know because we don't know what electricity is. But we do have a general idea of what lightning does to make the thunder. There is electricity in the air all the time. Sometimes we feel it more than we do at others—or at least we are more conscious of it being there at one time than at another. This is due to the condition of the atmosphere. If a good breeze is blowing and the mixture of water and gas and dust that we call air is kept stirring we don't feel the electricity much.

But if there is not much of a breeze the air feels heavy and oppressive and seems to be filled with moisture. It is filled with tiny particles of water we call droplets which, when in large groups are rain clouds and when these clouds run into a cool strata of air they condense and form rain drops.

These droplets are curious things—curious because they are so small. It takes 300 trillion of them to make one drop of rain. And it is in the making of the drops of rain that the lightning comes. The surface of every droplet is covered with electricity. This brings out another curious fact. When you take two balls of the same size and make one ball of them you find that the surface of the one big ball is really smaller than the sum of the surface of the two original balls. So that when the 300 trillion droplets form the single drop of rain there is an enormous amount of electricity left over after the surface of the rain drop is covered as full as it will hold.

This great excess has got to go somewhere else. Whenever there seems to be a good place for it to go—to another rain cloud or to the earth a lot of these electrical particles get together and make a sudden break for it, making a lightning flash. They go through the air so fast they heat it considerably.

The heat causes the air to expand, to become greater in volume than it was originally and this volume of air—just like the gas in the gun barrel or the air in the bag when you hit it—has got to distribute itself over the atmosphere and it starts doing so with a roar and a bang just as there is a roar and a bang when the gas is shot out of the gun barrel and when the compressed air is released from the paper bag.

TORONTO'S SITE ONCE UNDER WATER

This Was Eight Thousand Years Ago—Winters Growing Colder and Summers Warmer

The greater part of what is now the city of Toronto was once covered with water, if we may believe the statement of an eminent scientist, Dr. A. P. Coleman who deals with the subject in a volume issued by the Canadian Institute. The high ground in the northern part of the city formed the shore of the old glacial Lake Iroquois, which is known only by name, having been taken off the map some eight thousand years ago. In Rosedale, now a district of aristocratic homes, mammoth and caribou once wandered, and at a more distant period fresh water molluscs abounded in the water that spread over even this area, now several hundred feet above the level of Lake Ontario.

With the gradual wearing away of the vast forests, says the chapter containing Mr. R. F. Stupart's report of the weather of the Toronto district, climatic conditions have slightly changed, winters being colder than in the early days of settlement, autumns and summers warmer, but with the springs practically the same. Spring now lasts from March 10 to May 20; summer from May 21 to September 10; autumn from September 11 to November 25; and winter from November 26 to March 9.

During the 78 years of observations taken at the Meteorological Institute there, the mean annual temperature has been found to be 44.4 degrees, being, according to the seasons 23.4 in winter, 41 in spring, 65.3 in summer, and 47.5 in autumn. The heat record was broken in July, 1911, with a temperature on six consecutive days of 98, 101, 103, 97, 96 and 92. February, 1875, was the coldest month on record, with an absolute minimum of 16 degrees below zero. The downward curve of the temperature curve is stated to be gradual during the autumn, not reaching 50 degrees until October 7, and dropping to the freezing point on or about November 26. The coldest part of winter centres about February 4, but from this approximate date the curve ascends first slowly and then more rapidly, crossing the freezing point in the direction of warmth on March 26.

TRAFFIC IN DRUGS

Far Too Much Cocaine Sold in Ontario—Government Inspection

The Canadian Pharmaceutical Association is on record as against the traffic in cocaine. The Registrar-General, said that over two thousand ounces of cocaine were sold in Ontario alone during one year, and that was far more than is necessary for surgical use and prescriptions. He declared that too much of the habit begetting drug is being imported into this country by degraded agents, who distribute it like any other commercial commodity. "They barter them on the highway and in secret places for the sake of gain, which is a disgrace to humanity," said the speaker, who told his fellow-pharmacists that the only source of detection and imprisonment of such unscrupulous persons was by the appointment of a Dominion Inspector. The cocaine laws of the Province and the Dominion were not put on the statute books any too soon. Speaking from actual experience, as inspector for the Ontario College of Pharmacy, of sales of cocaine by wholesale houses, he was of the opinion that there was far more cocaine being sold than was necessary for legitimate prescription purposes, and had the same opinion in regard to the sale of morphine and opium. Something should be done to further curtail the illegitimate sale of these three bad habit-forming drugs, and money should be expended by the Government toward furthering this end. He had not found it necessary to bring all cases and druggists into the public courts, but privately faced them with the charge that they were personally violating the law. In some cases, he was sorry to say, such accusations had been denied, but when they discovered that he had had access to wholesalers' records of sales, they acknowledged their faults, professed sorrow and begged of him to overlook their action, and humbly promised never to do it again. Judging from what he knew he would advise all pharmaceutical associations to recommend the Government to appoint a Dominion Inspector.

We are most of us willing to acknowledge that we have been fools—seldom that we are fools.

Cross a Real Mystery

Leach Cross is one of the mysteries of the ring, says Jim Corbett. There is no denying he can fight when he cares to. Nearly all his battles have been over the ten-round course right in New York. At times his showing has been of a high order, and at others he has looked like a preliminary scrapper. Cross likes to meet the rushing, slam-bang fellows. He has a wallop, second to none, and knows how to use it on the fellows who tear in. Long experience has taught him that. But every time that Leach has boxed a clever man, his showing has been very ordinary, and that is the reason why he so frequently enters the ring at a good price in the betting.

CANADIAN LAW IS COMMENDED

American Paper Says Canada Has Least Security in World For Escaping Criminals

The New York American referring to the capture of H. K. Thaw in Canada said: "Of all countries in the world, Canada offers the least security to strangers with unpleasant chapters in their histories. The Dominion has a cold way of looking at these things, that, to a suspect, must appear exceedingly inhospitable. In the first place, the Canadian courts have absorbed from the present British tradition an appalling contempt for technicalities. Anyone who has ever watched criminal trials of the present day in England must have been impressed with the brusque attitude of judges to phrase-juggling or efforts to translate words into some meaning other than what might be called their 'horse sense.' Barristers even hesitate to chance the snub of 'his worship' by advancing a technical objection, unless it be unusually clever and subtle, in which case the court may, after a few brief, keen-witted sallies, leave it to the jury, with a shrug, as much as to say: 'You gentlemen of common sense are, of course, not going to take such mental gymnastics into consideration.' This reaction from a too technical period, when a misspelled name or word by an ill-fed engrosser could almost upset an indictment, has had its effect on Canadian practise. We recall the cases of Greene and Gaynor after the Captain Carter-Savannah harbor scandal. In these the defendants, refugees drenched with unlimited money in a luxurious hotel in Quebec, fought with the aid of the most astute legal talent for months, right through all the Canadian courts to the Judicial Committee of the Imperial Privy Council in London, only to be landed back ignominiously in the United States for trial and sentence.

Jack Johnson, the pugilist only escaped the clutches of this law by having in his possession a through ticket from Chicago to Havre, France, which had been actually purchased in Chicago and was convincing evidence of his bona fide intention to seek neither refuge nor residence in Canada. The criminal offence of which he had been convicted in Illinois was not an extraditable offence, the Mann White Slave Act having been passed long after the extradition treaty had been negotiated. Even at that, the Canadian immigration authorities never lost sight of him until he left the country on a steamship. Nor did he then take a chance on landing at any British port."

DOGS OF THE WILD

Australian Dingoes or Wild Dogs Easily Domesticated

Although the highest authorities agree in stating that the dingo was at some remote period introduced into Australia, and that it subsequently reverted to a wild state—like the "wild" horses of the Andes—there are still those who regard this dog as one of the original wild dogs from which our domestic dogs are descended. In any case, the breed is one of very great antiquity, and therefore of the highest interest to all dog lovers.

The dingo is about the size of a collie and much resembles a wolf in appearance and habits, but he is much more easily tamed. Those who know him best are warm in his praise, declaring that the dog may not merely be tamed, but is capable of readily acquiring useful habits, and of becoming a good companion. Even his voice alters as he comes under the influence of domestication. In course of time he learns to bark, an accomplishment unknown to the dingo of the wild.

Old Shipping Company

The Allans have been identified with the Canadian mail, passenger, and emigrant service for over ninety years. The line was originated by Captain Alexander Allan, a ship owner-mariner of Glasgow, with a brigatine, named the "Hero," of 174 tons, her first duty being to carry stores to Wellington's army in the Peninsula. The service to Quebec was inaugurated by the "Jean" of corresponding size to the "Hero," in 1819.

BUSINESS IN 2,000 B.C.

The Babylonians and Their Neighbors Knew of "Short Cuts"

The deciphering of the old Babylonian records of clay have revealed some very interesting facts with reference to business life two thousand years before Christ. In many cases these records relate to trade transactions, to business disputes, incident to the ordinary, every-day doings of the merchants, and to their troubles as to the title to property. There are even data to show how the Babylonians and their neighbors conducted their accounting systems. Nearly four thousand years ago these people had so far progressed in [illegible] that it was actually found necessary to enact special laws to deal with those who were trying the "short cuts" to wealth. The young man with "prospects," like his prototypes of to-day, was wont to utilise those prospects in negotiation with the professional money-lender. The banker of Babylon deposited regularly and issued his brick "checks" and bill of exchange, and the law intervened, as it does to-day, to uphold the rights of property. Most careful accounts of revenue and expenditure were kept. These show in many cases that investments in loans and purchases of land, as well as other profitable dealings, were a regular part of the fiscal activities.

Very Latest Fancies of Fashion

Blue the Favorite Color for New Ruffled Coats

By MADGE MARVEL

THE Old-Fashioned Woman, who likes to be well dressed after her own conservative ideas of what "a lady should wear," went shopping in New York city for her summer wardrobe.

When she returned to her hotel, after what she described as a "most shocking day," she confessed that she had been forcibly impressed with the fact that she was an almost extinct type, and that the fashion world had moved on and left her at the cross roads.

According to her views her demands were perfectly reasonable.

She wanted "simple, neat things, a tailored suit, a practical silk gown quite good enough for church and semi-dress wear, a light-weight street gown, two or three plain and becoming hats, suitable for the woman of mature years, and some dainty collars and accessories."

"As well hunt for needles in hay stacks!" she complained. "When I finally found something which approximated what I thought I wanted, it was shown me in such a way that I hadn't the heart to buy it.

Ways of Tailors.

"Now I don't know whether I want to buy the things that once seemed impossible and be the dressed-up old lady I said I never would be, or just sit down and hope the fashion wheel will turn around so I can once more be in the procession."

Any one who has shopped this season on Fifth avenue, the wonderful New York shopping center, must appreciate the experience of this woman. Among all the variations of all the different periods of fashion the only one missing seems to be that wherein the plain tailored suit with its faultless fit and trim lines held sway.

It is the most difficult suit to find. If one wants to save time let her search for it in the department store where "sports suits" are displayed or else brave the shoulder shrug and lifted eyebrow of the tailor who will make it, "certainly, if madame wishes. After all, it is madame who is to be pleased."

And by that time, if you have had your eyes open, you find that a plain tailored suit isn't half the desirable possession you thought it was. Someway it lacks style. And where is the woman of taste who wants to be conspicuous? And, really, isn't it just as conspicuous to be too plain as to be too dressy?

The little funny, loose, draped, tasselled and ruffled coats, without the slightest suspicion of what we once knew as fit, and skirts either a mass of flounces or a mass of tuckings-up and illogical drapings—that is the suit of today. Collars sticking out midway between neck and shoulders, or else flaring under the ears. For what time has not been expended on the draperies has been devoted to making much of the collars. And the linings! Such delightful brocades, with such lovely colorings, and so soft and clinging. Many a suit is sold by its lining, with its pink and rose and blue and yellow gayety.

Examples in Blue.

The average shopper thinks she wants the thing she doesn't find, and when she finally does locate it she realizes that her preconceived ideas have completely changed.

There is really no use in previous planning. The wisest plan is to start out with an open mind and a full purse and be shown.

There is much talk of colors, and when one comes to buy a suit she finds—blue. Dark blue, navy blue, the bright blue which belongs to Yale, and dozens of intermediate shades of which Alsatian is the newest.

Blue is the raging color in all materials and for all manner of wear. There is every evidence that it will continue throughout the summer, for the cottons and linens and their new companions in ratine and crepe weaves show a surprising amount of blue in all shades.

Consider these blue examples: A street suit of blue gabardine has an underskirt of blue striped with yellow, red, purple and green. Over this is a long peplum of plain blue. The bolero is also plain, and there is a vestee of the striped.

Next, a draped skirt of blue serge. Over it a coat, bolero in front, postilion in the back, of striped gabardine in lighter blue with rose, yellow and white lines.

A suit of moire in Alsatian blue, the skirt very full about the hips and draped to simulate a bustle. Wide straps of the blue moire over a lace blouse. A girdle of dull yellow. A ruffled coatee of crepe, the ground the same shade as the moire, the figures little Chinese designs of yellow with a touch of lighter blue and dull red.

Blue linen with a long tunic embroidered in colors in a deep border. These are just a few of the blue frocks noticed in less than an hour.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

De[illegible]

I am [illegible] trouble. I have good reason [illegible] that the girl who is all [illegible] to me has not been as discreet in the past as she should have been. So far as I know she is not aware that I am in possession of this information. What shall I do?

PERPLEXED.

SO you are in great trouble are you, Perplexed? And what do you think the poor girl you suspect is in?

Do you mean that this girl who is, so you say, all the world to you, has been foolish and light-headed some time long ago before she knew you?

Where have you heard this news that is making you so unhappy?

Is it a plain, straight story that a man of sense could listen to and believe, or is it just vague whispering rumor?

And, brother Perplexed, who are you to sit in judgment upon this girl you say you love so dearly? Are you a saint straight from the pearly gates yourself?

Has the girl a good name among good people, and is she loved and respected by honest and genuine folk? Then why should you listen to a cruel slander that may not have one single word of truth in it?

Some of the best women and the most loyal and devoted wives I have ever known were once foolish girls, who were really what their enemies called "indiscreet" before they married and settled down.

If you love this girl and she loves you, and there is nothing really serious to be said against her character, then you are a fool to listen for one moment to anything that will bring trouble to you and to the woman you love.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care this office.

Three Minute Journeys

Where One Man Is the Whole Show

By TEMPLE MANNING

IN [illegible] part of India the fakir is [illegible] man who does strange tricks, charms snakes, etc.—but the real histrionic ability of the native is not appreciated until one has seen a "bahurupi" (literally a "man of many shapes"). These men travel alone invariably, and, once having obtained permission to exhibit their talents, proceed to mystify their patrons in a most extraordinary fashion, appearing in all sorts of clever disguises and deceiving travellers and natives alike.

A performance I witnessed at Bundargarh is typical. A mummer came into the compound, introduced himself and was ordered to show what he could do. He departed, but reappeared almost at once—or rather, there came before us a weird hooded apparition. Its movements were mainly gyratory, the accompaniment being a rhythmic clashing of hidden anklet-bells and a droning reiteration of "Bhoom-bhoom bholanath sibi saukar," a chanting invocation to the god Mahadeva.

All at once the "spook" pivoted slowly and, with a dexterous sweep of its right arm, divided its draperies in half, revealing a serpent-girt fakir who symbolises the god Siva. We had hardly taken in this picture when the curtain closed, to reopen swiftly over a side view of the goddess Parvati. These illusions certainly mystified.

Later, the next day, the "bahurupi" continued his impersonations. As an importunate Eurasian loafer he followed me; he worried my host asking for employment as a "khid-mutgar" (butler); he prowled about the gate as a milk-seller, a dancing girl, a venerable "pandit," a meek-eyed Hindu widow, and in several other characters. We became so confused finally that we had to order him away emphatically.

This intelligent actor required few props, and, although no detail is ever wanting in his get-up, everything is so skilfully managed that one needs to see him several times before any particular items in his wardrobe are recognised. A pair of spectacles forms an important part of his equipment. He apparently considers these indispensable when portraying dignified roles.

For some religious reason, the "bahurupi" never revisits a locality where he has once gone through his entire repertoire.

WHAT BEAUTY IS THE WORLD OVER

Mlle. Lucrezia Bori

Famous Prima Donna Writes First Article on How to Be Beautiful

MLLE. LUCREZIA BORI, the youngest star in the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, has finally been prevailed upon to write on beauty for this paper.

She herself is petite, with an exquisitely rounded figure, wonderful hands, with as much expression in their gestures as there is in her liquid black eyes, eyes that show a glint of warm reddish brown in certain moods and lights, and that glow with limitless, inky depths in other tempers. She has the freshness and charm and enthusiasm that belong to her twenty-four years. Her skin is like milk with a faint flush on the cheeks, and her Cupid's bow mouth is laughing and red.

The family name of Mlle. Bori is Borja, or Borgia, whichever spelling is chosen, and her father is a colonel in the Spanish army.

The family is descended from the Borgias famous in history, and Mlle. Bori is a namesake of the famous Lucrezia Borgia, about whose real character there has ever been mystery. Some writers have made her a veritable fiend. Others have defended her and have produced facts to prove that instead of being the wicked person she has been generally believed to be she was a victim of circumstances, and that she really was a woman whose good deeds should have given her lasting fame.

Whatever one believes, the beauty and charm of the original Lucrezia Borgia have never been questioned, and her descendant has inherited her undeniable beauty from her.

When Mlle. Bori became an opera singer she dropped the latter part of her family name, for she was not willing to gain any prominence through the advertising which her father's position would give her. Now that she has succeeded, she feels "that it would not matter."

By LUCREZIA BORI

IT seems very difficult for me to speak to American women about beauty, because they seem so well to know how to make themselves attractive. They are very fascinating to me, these fine, tall, independent women, with their splendid health. They seem so competent, so alive, so ready and able to meet any emergency.

Then they have such charm! It is a charm which is all their own. It is as distinctive as their independence. It is entirely different from the charm of the Spanish women, or the French beauty, or the Italian lady. It is different too, from the charm of their cousins, the English women. It is something inborn, native. I do not feel that it is cultivated or that it can be acquired through study, to be exactly the same. No matter how faithfully it is copied, I think it would always be an American charm with a foreign accent.

We hear a great deal of the Spanish type of beauty. Sometimes I think there is no real type. It seems to me Spanish women vary so much. Of course I love them whatever their "type," for they are my sisters. And I think they are very beautiful. Beauty means a great deal in Spain and in fact in all the Latin countries.

The first question a young man asks about a young lady is, "Is she beautiful?"

Spanish women have not the independence of the American women. They think it is the best ambition for a woman to marry the young man who is a suitable match for her and to have a home and family of her own. Even now, with all the great progress the world is making, the average young Spanish girl does not think of having a "career" like the American girl. She marries. And if she wants to marry well she has to think about her good looks.

May I tell you at the beginning what is considered the requirements of beauty in my country?

There is the same general idea of beauty in Spain that there is in some of the oriental countries. It is expressed in a sort of beauty proverb which divides the elements of beauty quite simply.

There is a division of color and form which covers all womanly beauty.

Black should be the hair, eyelashes, eyebrows and iris of the eye.

White should be the skin, the teeth and the "white" of the eye.

Red should be the tongue, lips and cheeks.

Round should be the head, throat, arms, waist and ankles.

Narrow should be the eyebrows, nose and feet.

Long should be the arms, fingers, back and legs.

Small should be the bust, hands and feet; and large should be the eyes.

When one comes to analyse these requirements don't you think they will fit the beauty demands of all women? Only, of course, there should be an allowance for change of coloring, for blue eyes are quite adorable and so is golden hair, or that wonderful Titian shade and some dusky skins are far more lovely than white ones.

So! At once, you begin to talk about woman's beauty and you see where you are! What you Americans would call "up in the air."

I believe in so simple a plan of keeping one's looks I am afraid I shall not be able to tell many secrets.

But—I believe always in trying to be as beautiful as one can.

Almost the first word the little girl learns to lisp in whatever language, is "pretty," "beautiful." Listen to the babe who wants to admire you. She will pat your cheek with her rose petal fingers and coo, "booful." And "booful" is the doll she loves, and the kitten she pets, and "booful," too, is any flower, or color, or jewel, or soft silk, or velvet, or fur. Everything proves that love of beauty is planted deep in the woman baby's heart, and it is right that it should be developed as the baby body grows to womanhood.

So the very first beauty secret that I shall give you, is to love all beauty and try to act beautiful. Is that bad English? It expresses what I mean. Be kind and loving toward all the world. For the world is beautiful—just as it should be to hold all the beauty there is in it, including women—for any woman who is a true and good woman has elements of beauty.

What do I use on my face? I know you would ask me that. And I will tell you and you can use the very same thing.

Listen! SOAP AND WATER. And in my next article I will tell you all about it.

Odd Facts from Abroad

An "Association of Neglected Wives" has been formed at Schoenebeck, on the Elbe, to establish a time limit for husbands' visits to beer houses and cafes. If necessary, the wives will form a militia to remove all husbands found on the premises after 11 P. M.

A notary named Sauter, who died recently in the town of Arbon, on the border of Lake Constance, had a strange mania for fine shoes. He left a museum containing about [illegible] pairs of boots and shoes, valued at over [illegible]. No one—not even his wife—was allowed to enter the room where this collection was kept.

The latest articles devised for the benefit of the modern woman are musical clothes brushes, scent bottles, sprays and powder-puff boxes for her dressing table. Two tunes can be played on the brush while it is being used. The little button which starts the mechanism is placed just where the hand is certain to press it.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

How You Can Gain Weight; Why Lankiness Is Common

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

ARE all thin persons concave? The original meaning of the word lean so indicates. The Anglo-Saxon, Middle English and Scandinavian words, from which this term is derived, mean bent, bowed or stooping.

A gap-cheeked man is usually pictured by poets and painters as lean as death, yet a scrawny mare is best for a long journey.

Those of us who are scant of flesh and far from plump, with spare ribs, spindle shanks, lanky legs and hollow cheeks have often the better half of Goldsmith's verse: "The fat were so pale, and the lean were so ruddy."

Honest toil by honest men make them lank and lean from their exertions. Chastity itself is associated often in the public mind with a wasplike thinness. Edmund Spenser phrased this universal view when he clothed chaste Diana in silver buskins from her nimble thigh, and described her "lank loins ungirt."

"Common Folks" Thin.

Personified trusts, sleek senators, corporations and other unpopular individuals who "sleep o'nights" are all as rotund and globular as the equator or a theatrical magnate.

The "common people," Socialists, reformers, clergymen, poets and other professionally honest creatures are drawn as thin as the eye of a needle. Self-satisfied, complacent, equatorial individuals with squab-like breasts, squat hips, dumpy corporosities and bay-windows instinctively may fear the hawk-like penetration of the slim, tapering slightly-built bodies.

Since all the fair and fat would be thin, and all the gaunt and skinny would wax butter-like, it is always a serious sanitary problem to discover whether he who drives fat oxen should himself be fat.

If you are thin and have a cough, not only is your ambition to grow rotund justified, but your very life may depend upon a rapid gain in weight.

Tenuity of your tissues and tuberculosis are an unhappy combination. You must overcome these unheavenly twins at once. If you are lean and have an annoying bronchitis, laryngitis, bronchial infection, or any other sort of cough, do not blame either the "cough" or the "lankiness" upon smoking or eating.

"What makes you so thin?" was a query levelled at a club acquaintance recently.

"Oh, just a slight cough," he smiled.

"What's that from?" was a friend's question.

Way to Get Fat.

"Oh, the doctor said it was only a cigarette cough or a stomach cough."

This man or the doctor lied. No doctor nowadays ascribes a cough to smoking or to the stomach. Ninety odd times in the hundred any cough of great duration, accompanied by a waste of flesh, spells tuberculosis.

An admission of the truth that it is this malady means early and prompt measures to eradicate it. Self-deception as to the truth means death or disaster.

The way to grow fat, to gain flesh, to "make weight," is to live in the sunlight, in the fresh air, in the dry country, where rich cream, clean oxygen, fine butter and "honest-to-goodness" fresh eggs are always to be had.

Butter, beef fat, pork fat, oils, blubber, fats, greases, creams and a sane moderation in outdoor muscular practice, all aid in producing corpulency.

Sugars, starches and sweet pabulum generally all contribute to make fat. Eggs and rich milk, extra meals, sleep, nocturnal diets are all "fast bind, and fast find," a proverb never stale in the fat-starved kind.

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN MATRIMONY

By Leona Dalrymple

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

Nature's Error?

LEONA DALRYMPLE

MOTHER, tell me," said I one night to that unfailing confidant of mine whose judgment I always trust, "in all this talk of sex equality and sex antagonism what do you suppose men and women honestly think in their hearts about it?"

"That," said mother, "I've sometimes wondered myself."

"Take the man with the studied attitude of deference to all women, for instance, does he honestly respect feminine opinion as much as he pretends to?"

"He usually respects beauty and sex," said mother. "He'd be hurt if you mentioned the existence of a feminine brain."

"Then there's the casual chap and the man who simply ignores anything at all a woman says merely because it emanates from a feminine source and he's sure it can't be right."

"The last," ventured mother, "is probably not quite so genuine as it appears. It's rooted in a very headstrong sex egotism which the man may have been driven to adopt for purposes of self-defence. Likely, Peter, he's known some strong-minded lady who bossed him about a bit, and he takes revenge on the sex in general. The casual chap I imagine is most sincere."

"And women?" I went on thoughtfully. "Their attitude toward masculine superiority keeps me guessing. I've so often watched flashes of the keenest impatience and disgust with men as a sex, haven't you?"

"Yes," said mother. "Of course. But whatever her attitude, she, a woman is usually more on her guard than a man. She'll flatter him insidiously into thinking he's the most marvellous work of creation, and then when he turns away and begins to strut she laughs up her sleeve. With men it's a little different, and there isn't the same necessity for subterfuge that there is among women. Men as a race are not economically dependent upon another sex. Most men therefore bluntly lose poise once in a while and reveal a flash of that colossal egotism which is as much a part of them as life itself. It's inbred."

"Oh, come now, mother," I protested feebly, knowing well enough that she was right, "you're a little hard on men. You know, when all's said and done there is a certain secret egotism among women, too. I believe there is a strong conviction of inherent superiority in the heart of every woman. She thinks she's something subtler and finer than mere man——"

"She is," said mother promptly, and we both laughed.

"And, moreover," I went on, "she's pretty sure man doesn't understand her."

"He doesn't," said mother with instant conviction. "No man ever understood women half so well, Peter, as women understand men."

"It's a queer situation," I mused, "half of one sex insidiously and chivalrously deferring to a sex at whose weaknesses and viewpoint they secretly jeer. All of the other sex pandering instinctively to men—for what?"

"Protection," said mother. "Economic support—good of the race—whatever you may choose to call it."

"And most men," I suggested, "like the clinging vine. It's disconcerting to a man's sense of indispensability to find that a woman can stand firmly on her two feet and get along without him. It's a monstrous perversion of the fitness of things in his sight."

"And the result?" wondered mother.

"A draw!" said I. "With veiled antagonism and a mutual sense of sex superiority on either side."

"Locke," said mother reflectively, "saw the thing as it was. You remember, Peter, how, in 'The Morals of Marcus,' Carlotta asks what sex is. Marcus answers, 'Sex is nature's fundamental error.' And I think he's right."

How People Feel
When They Have
Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy. Some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ⅛ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4830, or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

Medical statistics as to the age when man has the most intellectual vigor give interesting results. It is from forty to fifty-six years that the most brilliant things have been accomplished by the majority of human beings. Chemists and physicians have made brilliant discoveries at forty. Poets have accomplished masterpieces at forty-four, and novelists two years later. Famous warriors average forty-seven, musicians are most brilliant at forty-eight, and actors at the same age. Moralists are greatest at fifty-one, politicians at fifty-three, humorists at fifty-six, thus demonstrating that the last thing one learns is how to amuse one's contemporaries.

DO WOMEN TALK LESS

French Scientist Claims They Are Growing Silent

M. Dubudout, a French scientist, reported some startling facts which appear to show that the tendency of woman to talk is actually growing less, and that if this alarming decline keeps up the woman of a thousand years from now may be man's silent partner, speaking seldom and only when words are absolutely necessary.

"This strange change," he says, "can be explained in several ways. For that there has been a change I have no longer any doubt, after my extended observation, not only in France, but in England and America, Italy and Spain.

"Take, for instance, women in restaurants and at public places of all kinds, where they are seen freely moving about with men. Everywhere you see the men taking not only their own share in the conversation, but even leading it in many cases. At receptions, too, and at public dinners the fair sex seems, for some time now, to be letting the reins of conversation slip from their hands.

"One explanation of this queer state of affairs is that women, with their growing interest in outside doings, in business, and politics, and in the strenuous pursuit of careers independent of men, are becoming more and more self-absorbed. A woman whose mind is occupied with some burning question of the day, or who is greatly concerned over the success of her next business venture, or the popular approval of her latest book or picture, or song, is not nearly so likely to keep up a running fire of light conversation as her more care-free sister of twenty years ago.

"If the man she is with shows an inclination to talk, she is more than willing to let him. It gives her greater opportunity to follow out her own train of thought, while outwardly she pretends to drink in every word that he says."

DANGERS IN ANAESTHETICS

Only Trained Physicians Should Them

Enormous numbers of anæsthetics are given annually and fatalities are proportionately very rare. Yet every anæsthetist knows that there are many more fatalities than ever reach the public eye. Moreover, he knows that, short of death, there are illnesses, disabilities and discomforts that frequently follow the employment of anæsthetics by those not properly skilled in their use.

Considering, indeed, the power for harm, as well as for good, that these drugs possess, it is astonishing with what indifference the public at large submit themselves to their action without enquiring to what extent the administrator is acquainted with the agents he uses and is skilled in controlling them. For it must be clearly stated that on this depends almost entirely the danger of taking anæsthetics.

Some authority has said, tersely and with truth, "the anæsthetist, not the anæsthetic, kills." Danger in the hands of a skilled administrator is practically negligible. There are no "nevers" in medicine, and no one can say that there is never a death in the hands of the competent, but the chance of it are infinitesimal. They are the chances that existed in the pre-anæsthetic days of patients dying from fright before the operation had begun. Such cases occurred and were recorded, but they were extremely rare.

If people generally were a little more conversant with the action within the body of anæsthetics they would realise better the need for knowledge and skill on the part of those who wield these agents.

Nearly all the known anæsthetics are what are called tissue poisons. They have the power of destroying life if taken into the system in sufficiently strong doses or over a sufficiently long period of time. They produce their deadly effect in varying ways. One anæsthetic acts on the muscle fibres of which the heart is composed, gradually softening and weakening them until the whole organ is incapable of proper contraction; another gradually paralyses that nervous centre in the brain by continued action of which the breathing is normally carried out; another affects the vessels through which the circulation is carried on; and so on.

Scott's Journal

The original journals of Sir Robert Scott during his south polar expedition were placed in the British museum by Lady Scott. By order of the trustees they were placed on view on the second anniversary of Scott's arrival at the South Pole. The journals are three small, pencil-written books which Scott carried with him to the pole and which were found on his dead body by the searching party. At the end of the last of these is the "Message to the Public," which made so deep and lasting an impression on the heart of the nation.

On arrival at the merchant's home the carter demanded $1.25 for his time. He was ordered to take the shingles back. And now the contractor has ordered the merchant to remove the shingles he bougot.

The Royal Theatre management hit a vein of pay dirt, as the prospectors up Cobalt way would say, in securing the big Dixie Co., for this week. They were almost unable to handle the crowds yesterday and the theatre was packed to the doors. The performance is a good one, in fact, just about the best colored show in Peterborough in many moons, and the low price of admission appeals to the public. Tonight a complete change of program will be presented when this clever company of ten talented colored people will present "Indian Land." The costumes and scenery for this are carried by the company and Mr. Ed. Winn, the clever artist of this show painted the scenery and wrote the songs and music with which Indian Land is packed full. Mr. Winn's motto is "For Laughing purposes only." No doubt another full house will be on hand tonight.

Terrible Scalding Accident

ZAM-BUK GAVE QUICK RELIEF.

For taking the pain out of a burn or scald there is nothing equal to Zam-Buk. Mrs. Eugene Demers of Pembroke, Ont., who was the victim of a painful scalding accident, proved this. She says: "I was carrying a boiler of steaming water from the stove to the wash-tub when suddenly my strength failed. As the boiler was falling in spite of my efforts, I heard my babies cry, and to avoid scalding them I gave the vessel a quick turn. The effect of this was that every drop of the boiling water poured over my feet and limbs, scalding me from my waist down.

"As soon as I saw the children had escaped, I told my oldest boy to bring the Zam-Buk (which we always keep in the house.) I applied Zam-Buk freely, and the pain was soon eased. I continued using Zam-Buk, and in a wonderfully short time the sores were completely healed."

Zam-Buk is equally good for cuts, bruises, eczema, ulcers, piles, pimples etc. Price 50c. per box, at all druggists and stores, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, on receipt of price. Refuse substitutes and imitations. There is nothing "just as good!"

KELLY-SPRINGFIELD TIRES

AN UP-TO-DATE NURSERY RHYME.

There was a man in our town,
And he was wondrous wise.
He bought a second-hand old car,
With inferior supplies.
He then acquired some cheap skate tires,
They claimed them good, though cheap;
What happened to that poor old slob
Would make an angel weep.
He started on a tour one day
With the manners of a prince.
His tires blew higher than a kite,
He's ne'er been heard of since.

ABOUT WOOD-FILLERS

The Man Who Works About the Home Needs This Information

Open-grained woods require paste filling, being "hard woods." The varieties most in use are ash, beech butternut, baywood, black walnut, chestnut, elm, mahogany, oak and rose wood.

Close-grained woods such as bass, cedar, [illegible] and white [illegible] filled with liquid fillers, being soft woods.

There is another group of woods that occupy an intermediate place, though they might properly be classed with the close-grained woods, namely, birch, cherry, circassian walnut and maple. They are sometimes filled with paste filler, sometimes with liquid filler.

Chestnut [illegible] oaks are very open-pored [illegible] require filling but often [illegible] and a stiff paste. The purpose of the paste filler is to fill up the [illegible] in the tissue of the wood, the [illegible] of the filler saturating [illegible] to some extent preventing [illegible] and robbing the varnish [illegible] occasioning pinholing, etc. [illegible] purpose it is best to [illegible] apply a coat of liquid filler [illegible] paste filling, and in some instances another coat of paste filler over the liquid is best. In any case the [illegible] is to form a hard and impenetrable foundation for the varnish coats that are to follow.

A filler should be colored to match the wood; but [illegible] be made a shade or so darker. The following is a very good formula for making a paste filler: Mix two parts of best coach japan and three parts of raw linseed oil, both by weight. To this liquid add enough finely [illegible] silica to form a stiff paste. The mass needs to be thoroughly mixed.

A white liquid filler is sometimes desirable, and the following is a good one. In one gallon of raw linseed oil put two pounds of pale powdered resin and place in a suitable vessel on the stove until the resin has melted, stirring meanwhile. Then remove from the fire and add one pint of white japan dried and two quarts of turpentine; stir well, then set aside to cool; when cold, stir in eight ounces of corn starch. After which thin with turpentine and pass it through a strainer.

What Are Meteors

Meteorites, or air stones, are metallic or stony masses of matter falling from the sky, and the fire meteors, which are occasionally seen rushing through the air with an average velocity of more than 30 miles per second, [illegible] to be aerolites, which have [illegible] contact with this planet. The latest theory of earth origin, the planetesimal hypothesis, considers the earth as wholly made by an the infall of meteoric matter. Physicists consider meteorites as merely fragments of the innumerable interplanetary bodies, which form a part of the solar system.

ORE THAN QUARTER OF TAXES IN BRITAIN NEEDED FOR NAVY

afety of Empire at Sea Necessitates the Laying of Fresh Burdens Upon Old Country Ratepayers to Extent of Many Millions of Dollars

ondon, Eng., May 19.—That Mr oyd George has not yet recovered wonted vigor was evident from appearance and manner in the esentation of his sixth budget. His ir is fast whitening, he has lost uch of his old-time fire and his exanation of his new proposals was far from clear that the country s not yet quite grasped the full nificance of these departures. As r as these are understood they ase many and disappoint others of s followers. Some of his political ponents are very angry while the inion of others may be summed up the phrase that the fresh taxation might have been worse." Governt newspapers cap the speech with headings as "Great National elfare Budget," "Rich to Help the or," and "A Public Health Char."

Where Was Canada's Share?

For Canadians one of the most directly interesting of Mr. Lloyd George's statements is to be found in this paragraph:

"Naval expenditure has undoubtedly greatly exceeded all anticipations. The forecast in 1909 was that the expenditure would come up to £44,000,000—it was a time of very abnormal shipbuilding—and that after that abnormal period has passed it would revert to the figure of about £40,000,000. That was the basis upon which the finance of 1909 was founded. But unfortunately there has been an increase in shipbuilding programmes abroad. There was also the continental situation which had to be taken into account, and the anticipations which we formed then could not be realized. Otherwise I should now be in a position to make proposals for the relief of local taxation on a liberal basis without incurring the odium of having to propose any fresh taxation."

IVISION ON C.N.R. RESOLUTION EXPECTED LATE LAST NIGHT

on. Mr. White Points Out to House That Present Crisis is Not a Matter of Aiding Mackenzie and Mann But of Protecting Canada's Interests

Ottawa, May 19.—To-day will see end of the debate on the C.N.R. ution. The division on the amendnt of Mr. E. M. Macdonald for a months' hoist will not likely come til late at night. The next move ll be the introduction of the Bill the Finance Minister. It is rumed that the Liberals are so divided the subject it may go through th only a perfunctory debate.

The continuation of the debate yesday was featured chiefly by the ech of Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance. As one of the Ministers chiefly concerned in bringing about the agreement, Mr. White spoke with authority on the financial aspects of the question. He emphasized the fact that the alternatives were Government aid or a receivership. With all the business and Governmental interests that were involved, a receivership was not to be thought of. With such a great system it could mean nothing but disintegration and even if the Government itself were the receiver it could only result in great damage to the credit of Canada.

WITHDRAWS CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

William Goodenough Walks From Police Court a Free Man.

Toronto, May 19.—William Goodenough, the motor man in charge of the Dundas street car which killed Annie Belz, after the woman had been jolted from the rear seat of the motorcycle while crossing the car tracks, was pronounced a free man by Magistrate Ellis to-day, the charge of manslaughter being withdrawn. Crown Attorney Corley stated that he had gone carefully into the evidence taken by the coroner's jury and was satisfied that the motorman did not have any opportunity to avoid the accident, the woman apparently falling against a part of the fender that did not respond.

THIS REMOVES HAIRS ALMOST LIKE MAGIC

(Helps to Beauty)

Much favorable comment is being made upon the new formula for removing disfiguring hairs. One serious objection arises and that is, any woman can enjoy this treatment in her own home and thus deprive the beauty specialist of her fee. For the benefit of others, the formula is here repeated: Mix some delatone with water: apply to hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off and with it comes every hair. The skin should then be washed to free it from the remaining delatone.

TROUBLE IS COMING IN GUELPH POLITICS

Both Parties Call Conventions for Same Time and Place on Saturday.

Guelph, May 19.—Unless some changes are made in a hurry the political pot in South Wellington will bubble and boil in great style here on Saturday afternoon, for both Conservatives and Liberals have issued notices calling a convention for Saturday afternoon at the same hour. According to the City Treasurer's books the Conservatives are in on the ground floor as tenants for that date.

The Independents have a convention here to-night when Mayor Carter will probably be placed in nomination

HUERTA IS LOSING SUPPORT

Vera Cruz, May 19.—Archbishop Mora V. Del Rio was driven out of Mexico City by Provisional President Huerta, according to information reaching here to-day. The Archbishop, the story says, sought an interview with General Huerta which was at first refused, but later accorded upon the representation that the churchman had a communication from the Pope.

The communication, it is stated, proved to be a suggestion that General Huerta resign. The President appeared to take this advice dispassionately, making no reply. On the following day, however, a messenger came to the Archbishop with a warning from Huerta that he would do well to leave the country.

WILL CUT OUT PARTY POLITICS AND VOTE THE TEMPERANCE TICKET

Peterborough County Temperance Association Take Strong Stand at Meeting Yesterday

At a meeting of the Peterborough County Temperance Association, attended by some one hundred delegates from practically all the municipalities of the county, held yesterday forenoon and afternoon in the Public Library, the delegates concluded their discussion by pledging themselves unanimously by a standing vote to cut out party politics in the approaching elections and work for the election of the candidate of whichever party that takes the most advanced stand on the temperance question. The delegates furthermore answered to a roll call of the different municipalities and pledged themselves by a standing vote to return to their municipalities and work through their primaries for the election of delegates of the party conventions who will work for the nomination of candidates to the party convention favorable to advanced temperance legislation.

The executive of the Association was instructed to interview the candidates immediately after their nomination and obtain from them signed statements showing exactly where they stand on the temperance question. In the event of neither party bringing forth suitable candidates the executive was instructed to call temperance conventions in both ridings with the view of taking action to promote the interests of the temperance party. The convention discussed the platform of the Dominion Alliance relating to political action, clause by clause and adopted it in full.

The convention was most representative in character. Delegates were present from Havelock, Norwood, Lakefield, Peterborough, Keene, Warsaw, Bridgenorth, Selwyn, Indian River, Bethel, Westwood, Zion, Stewart's Hall, Young's Point and other points throughout the two ridings. One from Apsley arrived late.

The convention throughout was harmonious and enthusiastic.

The importance of the thorough organization of the temperance forces was emphasized again and again. Those persons realized that public opinion all through the Province is being shaped at this time on the temperance issue and those present were determined to crystalize this sentiment into definite action as far as the county of Peterborough is concerned. The meeting was thrown open to the fullest possible expression of opinion. To insure the question at issue being discussed by both parties conventions in both ridings the executive was instructed to forward a communication to both parties to be read at the nominating conventions. This resolution expressed in full the attitude of the convention. It was as follows:

(1) that this convention reaffirms as its platform the object for which the Dominion Alliance stands, namely, "The total suppression of the traffic in Intoxicating Beverages," and declares it to be the duty of the Ontario Legislature to enact legislation prohibiting the liquor traffic as far as within the power of a Provincial Legislative Assembly.

(2) That this convention calls upon all friends of the temperance cause to rise above party preference and affiliation in earnest effort, on every opportunity to secure the nomination and election to the Legislative Assembly, of men who will support the most progressive temperance legislation proposed, regardless of party consideration, and that this can only be attained by loyally standing by candidates who are known, avowed, and trustworthy supporters of the Alliance policy.

As we represent both political parties we would prefer to support the candidate of the party to which we belong and therefore we express the hope that both parties in both ridings in the county will place in the field, candidates who will undertake, if elected, to vote for the abolition of the bar and shop and the cancellation of club licenses, and who will also undertake to support all advanced temperance legislation by whichever party it is introduced.

Should only one temperance candidate be nominated in each riding we shall feel in honor bound to support him provided his record is acceptable to the temperance interests, and if neither party places a temperance man in the field our executive is instructed to immediately call riding conventions and arrange for the taking of such further action as may be in the best interests of the temperance cause.

A resolution was passed urging the members of the city of Peterborough Temperance Association to initiate a campaign for the cutting off of the shop licenses in the city of Peterborough. It was pointed out that the sale of bottled liquor is now confined to the retail shops and that these are the main source of supply for the local option districts surrounding the city of Peterborough. In the event of a vote being taken it can be carried by a bare majority.

Dr. W. S. McTavish, of the Dominion Alliance, was present and reported on the program of the temperance sentiment throughout the Province. The meeting was presided over by the President of the County Association, Mr. H. R. Cowan. Mr. A. B. Cunningham acted as secretary.

TORONTO URGED TO PROVIDE CHILDREN'S DETENTION HOME

Commissioner Boyd Leads a Big Deputation Before Board of Control to Impress the Need of Procuring Quarters for Neglected Minors

Toronto, May 19.—Another great question of social improvement was brought to the attention of the Board of Control to-day, when Commissioner Boyd, of the Juvenile Court, supported by over 80 representatives of the church and social organizations of the city, waited upon the Board, asking for municipal action towards establishing an Industrial Home for the care of children during such periods as home conditions made it impossible for them to live with their parents.

Both in size of the deputation and the importance of the question under discussion, the meeting was one of the most interesting in the recent history of the city. Only Mayor Hocken and Controllers O'Neill and Church were present, but they gave ample assurance that the city was in sympathy with the movement, and that the proposal to remedy conditions where parents are separated for years from their children, even after they had reformed, would be given earnest consideration.

IS NOW TOTTERING, CRUMBLING DECLARES SENOR DA GAMA

Second of A. B. C. Mediators to Arrive Says Mexico's Dictator Has Been Crumbling from Start

Niagara Falls, May 19.—"Tottering—Crumbling! Let me see, was it a year ago in April, or was it in May, that he ascended?—And they said that he began crumbling immediately and could not hold out for long. He has been crumbling, crumbling ever since."

Thus did Ambassador Dominico Da Gama, of Brazil, the second of the A. B. C. mediators to reach the Clifton Hotel, characterize the Mexican dictator and his year as Mexico's "President."

Senor Da Gama had just come out of the dining room of the hotel and had been presented to a small army of newspaper men in the foyer by R. F. Rose, the representative of the Department of State. He dropped into a chair and began a general conversation.

In soliloquizing sort of way the Ambassador said that Huerta a year ago probably had reasoned with himself thus: "They call Carranza, Villa Zapata, Madero and myself all bandits. Why should I not be supreme?" And then the Ambassador spoke of the tottering of Huerta's Government concluding with a statement that he hoped the mission of the mediators would result in lasting peace in the country.

SENATORS FALL BEFORE PETES IN A HARD FOUGHT BATTLE

It was a real ladies' day at Riverside Park yesterday. The fair fans turned out in force and crowded the main stand to capacity, and during the game the Petes were cheered lustily on to victory.

The weather was of the A1 kind for ball playing and the boys were full of the old life.

The Ottawa aggregation opened the game as though they meant to capture the second of the series, and had three men on bases in the first innings but with Schettler in the box, they had gone their limit.

It was a pitcher's battle from start to finish, but the Petes were there yesterday with the willow, and timely hitting netted them two runs, one in the first and one in the sixth innings, and the gates were closed on the Senators.

The boys played snappy ball and although they had three errors to their credit, no damage was done. Fox played a very brilliant game, and was roundly cheered by the fans when he trapped a real fast one that looked like a cannon ball, but Foxy had a hole in his mit and the ball just couldn't get away. Schettler also handed out the best kind of ball and was held up in good fashion by Catcher Miller.

There promises to be another real game to-day at 3.45, when the Petes will go after the Senators for the rubber.

Catcher Ryberg and Shortstop Price were let out yesterday.

The Ottawa team played snappy ball, and Pitcher Kane, held up by Lage, were given the best of support.

Umpire Evans took charge of the game.

DOWER CHESTS

Every Girl Should Have Something to Begin Housekeeping With

Every girl ought to begin a dower chest when she is about twelve years old, says the Pictorial Review, that is, as soon as she can sew without assistance, tell the difference between linen and cotton, and be given a definite place in the home to keep the things that shall be her very own. Whether she ever marries or not makes no difference. In this day of business girls' and bachelor maids' apartments, it is quite conceivable that a girl who does not wish to marry would have very good use for her own household appurtenances just the same. More and more professional women find it convenient and desirable to set up establishments of their own.

Even a stay-at-home girl likes to have her own personal belongings in daily use, and the time of the hall bedroom occupant can be made much sweeter if it be brightened with a few little accessories like bureau scarfs, dainty towels aud simple curtains from the treasure chest.

Why not have your daughter from early girlhood make and select things to be laid aside—not necessarily for the time she is to "get married," but to "begin housekeeping" with? Why not choose a special emblem—a rose, a chrysanthemum, a daisy, a violet, or some other sweet and girlish flower, and work it into every piece that is laid away? What a delicate personal touch you could obtain by always embroidering a wreath, a fleur-de-lis, or a group of butterflies on all your underwear or linens? It is little individual notes like these that give a woman's clothing distinction and charm.

As a piece of ordinary bedroom furniture for every woman the red cedar dower chest is invaluable. It provides a place to store the spring sewing as fast as it is completed; to tuck out of the way the tablecloths and ginghams and curtainings that you pick up at midwinter sales, and to assemble the needful travelling outfit ready for the summer vacation. And when all these materials are put into use it is the only place to pack away the winter clothing during the warm weather. Another use for a dower chest is as a gift box.

SOME HEATING LORE

How to Make the Best Use of Your Heating Facilities

A furnace authority says: "In mild weather it is not necessary to 'shake down' the furnace fire. You can economize on fuel and still have a fire ready to start full blast should the north wind begin to blow. With the furnace poker rake down only part of the ashes, forming a sort of crater by poking out the ashes thoroughly from the bottom and the top. Into this 'crater' put the fresh coal. This is really a sort of furnace within the larger one and holds the fire without using coal to heat the whole furnace. When the cold snap comes shake the grate thoroughly, shovel on fresh coal and open the drafts."

Another point is that coal that is kept in a dry and airy place will burn much longer than that which is kept in a close cellar with no ventilation. When coal is stored in an airless place it gets rid of its gas, and the absence of this renders it less powerful and more wasteful when burned.

Although the iron of your gas and oil stoves is a good conductor of heat, it is not a good radiator. To increase the radiating power of your stoves, firebricks or tile may be laid on top of the heaters. These bricks or tile are the best of radiators, holding the heat for hours, and will help materially in keeping your rooms at an even temperature.

Where the heat of the kitchen range is utilised to warm adjoining rooms place a number of firebricks in the oven. When the oven is not in use open the door and you will have a constant wave of heat even after the fire is out. On very cold nights these bricks may be wrapped in newspapers and flannel and used as bed warmers. The stone radiators that are used in the fireless cookers are also useful for this purpose.

Rough Edges on Collars

How many are bothered with that sawlike roughness at the edge of collars after being laundered several times? A complete cure may be effected by merely rubbing the edge with a piece of ordinary paraffin wax. Thus the collars do not soil so readily and the material lasts much longer, for the wax in a wonderful way fills up the roughness of the edges and greatly enhances the comfort of the wearer.

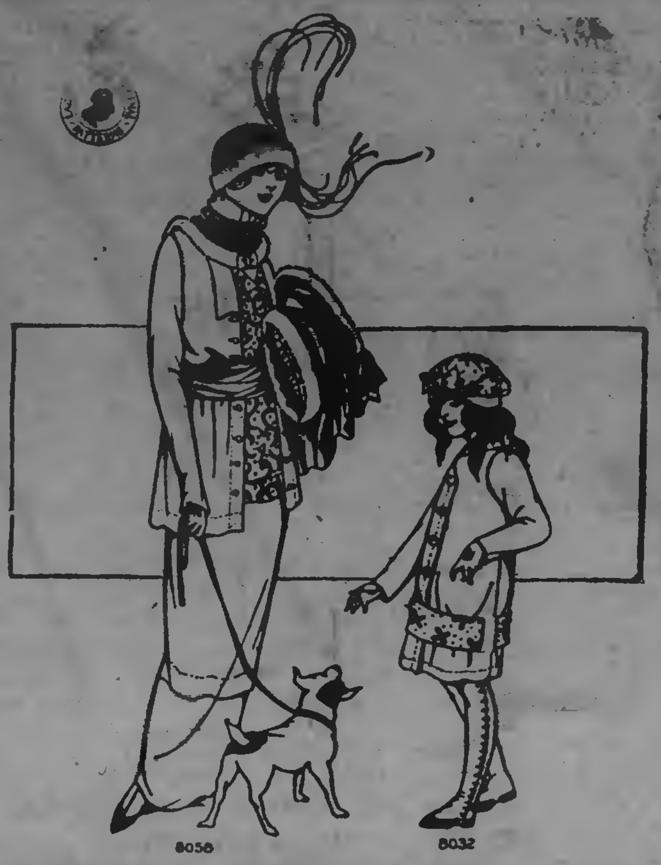
Threat Was Not Fulfilled

An amusing story is being told of Sir Douglas Dawson, who had so much to do with the preparations for Prince Arthur's wedding. Sir Douglas had a very worrying time, and the story goes that one day he went into a room in the Palace where a friend was sitting, and, sinking into a chair, he remarked, wearily:

"If anyone so much as breathes the word 'wedding' in my presence I'll knock him down!" He had scarcely uttered the words when the door opened and King George came in looking worried.

"Oh, by the way," he began at once, "about this wedding—"

His Majesty got no further than the word, for, in spite of all his efforts, Sir Douglas's friend was forced to laugh. The King glanced at him in surprised annoyance, but laughed heartily when Sir Douglas explained what he had just threatened.



DISTINCTION THROUGH DULL GOLD CRESCENTS ON A CREAM DUVETYN VEST

Individuality in dress does not necessarily mean that one must wear something entirely different from what is being worn, but that there must be something about our clothing that is characteristic of our own personality. It may be a blending of colors that are becoming, and it may be in the judicious choosing of accessories, hats, shoes, gloves and the other trifles that go to complete a costume.

The woman of discrimination and taste, no matter how limited her dress allowance may be, has as good a chance to appear as well-dressed, or perhaps better, than the woman with the well filled purse, as she is obliged to think and plan carefully for her wardrobe each season.

8058 is a semi-tailored frock fashioned of bronze colored eponge with a waist-coat of cream duvetyn, over which is a sprinkling of dull gold crescents.

The sash is of dull gold satin and the buttons are cream colored bone, thus reproducing the same color motifs.

This dress may be copied in size 36 with 6¼ yards of 36 inch material and ⅝ yard of silk for trimming.

8032 is a girl's coat made of seal brown velveteen with collar and belt of oddly figured silk.

It may be made in size 6 with 1⅝ yards of 36 inch material and 1 yard of bias silk for trimming.

Jap's Ideal Husband

Here are the seventeen virtues of an ideal husband, placed according to the order of their importance in the eyes of fair Japan: He must not be a miser; not be too much taken up with his own toilet; be neatly in appearance; not be a [illegible] must [illegible] himself clearly [illegible]; be prompt in decision and clever in extricating himself from an awkward position; have an ideal [illegible] may be left to his own choice; leave the management of the household to his wife; never put his face inside the kitchen, never criticise his wife's hats or dresses; never make other people the recipients of his confidences; not end by becoming an object of disgust to his wife; not interfere in feminine matters at all; cultivate the virtue of [illegible] and drink heartily; not be fat; not be too jealous.

Cleaning Gas Mantles

A good way to clean gas mantles or gas burners that are blackened by carbon deposits is to sprinkle sodium chloride or "salt" upon them while burning. This causes the carbon to burn away and prolongs the life of the mantle and increases the efficiency of the light or burner.

When making blue-water for clothes, add a little salt to it. This distributes the color deeply and prevents "patches."

KITCHEN HELPS

To remove egg stains from silver apply table salt with a wet cloth.

To remove the odor of fish from silver knives or forks or from cooking utensils, allow to stand in cold water before washing.

When the lower ends of your window blinds get soiled and cracked take them off the rollers, turn them the other end up, then tack on again nicely and they will last for a long time.

A few drops of turpentine on a woollen cloth will clean tan shoes very well. A drop or two of orange or lemon juice will give a brilliant polish to any leather.

A simple and quick way to clean knobs, lamps or other fixtures of brass is to use a mixture made by dissolving in one pint of vinegar four heaping tablespoonfuls of salt. This compound is harmless and leaves no scratches.

To prevent milk or foods cooked with milk from burning rinse the saucepan with cold water and rub with a little fresh butter or lard.

To remove egg from dishes, sprinkle with salt and rub well before washing.

When oil lamps are used they should be very carefully cleaned at least once a week. A lamp whose air ducts are clogged with dust becomes overheated and an explosion will follow. Lamp filling should be a part of the morning's work, and then it should be done as far from the stove as possible. Gasoline or oil stoves should be filled between meals, and not when the stove is warm from a recently extinguished fire.

Cat Survives Eight-inch Pin

After having swallowed an eight-inch hatpin, a three-months' old kitten belonging to Elsie Kinney, of Watertown, N.Y., has been relieved of her trouble.

The pin was swallowed head foremost, the head entering the stomach. The sharp end could be felt under the jaw. A veterinarian cut a small hole in the cat's throat, worked the pin out as far as the head, swung it around, and by bending it slightly, pushed it out head first from the cat's mouth.

Insurance Bill in Australia

The commonwealth ministry of New South Wales is preparing a national insurance bill on the lines of Lloyd-George's measure. Provision will be made for benefits for funerals, maternity sickness, accidents and unemployment.

MODERN WOMEN

Lecturer Declares That Sport is a Bad Marriage Market

Women will not be altogether flattered by some of the things that Dr. T. Claye Shaw had to say about them in the course of a lecture on "The Nervous Factor in Women's Health," at the Institute of Hygiene, London, England.

Dr. Shaw, who was formerly medical director of Banstead Asylum, said the type of woman had changed; she had become harder in feature and more wrinkled; her complexion was affected by her outdoor life; she was more independent; she had less reverence for authority, fewer home interests, and was less of a stay-at-home. If as seemed to be the case the women's desire was to be what men were, and to do what men did, then he thought he could see some reason for the present style of dress in women. Women seemed to be more indifferent than men to cold; anyhow, they went about in much thinner attire in cold weather and at night, and wore openwork stockings in the coldest and wettest weather!

"Sport is a bad marriage market," said Dr. Shaw; "the sporting girl becomes too like the man, and exposes her character to him too much. Besides, as a rule, she neglects her home. I am struck with the enormous number of 'beauty preservers.' Well, I see no harm in them, but it all points to vanity."

It had been said that suffragists who had done violent acts were insane or hysterical. Nothing of the kind. On the contrary, they had in a great measure got what they wanted. They had gone in for hunger-striking, and had been successful in obtaining their freedom. Did that look like insanity? It was, he added, of no use asking women to stay where they were, for the knowledge of success gave them thirst for more.

An Expensive Ass

"I have a shed, your honor, but the old ass gets out in spite of me. He has cost me more in fines than would buy a pony," said Jane Emmett, Finglas, amid laughter, when she was fined 25 cents at Drumcondra Sessions for allowing an ass, her property, to stray on the public road.

Four-legged Chicken

A Plymouth Rock cockerel with four fully developed legs, bred by Mr. S. H. Wilson, of Highfield Mill, was sold by auction in Sudbury Market for 75c. At Mr. R. Moore's farm at Great Wilbraham, Cambs, a duck has been hatched with four legs, and is still living.

Huge Stained Glass

One of the largest windows in stained glass made for many years is nearing completion as a memorial to King Edward at Hove. The dimensions are 40 feet in length by a width of 20 feet, and this huge expanse of beautiful glass is to be the west window in the parish church at which King Edward worshipped when he stayed in the neighborhood.

MISTAKEN FOR MILITANT

London Cabby Refused to Drive Mrs. Asquith

Mrs. Asquith is laughing with her friends at an amazing incident in connection with the militant excitement of which she was the victim or the heroine. She had occasion to call on her distinguished husband and hailing a taxi-driver, gave the order, "No. 10 Downing street." The result was disconcerting. Descending from his seat, the taxi-driver motioned to his fare to alight. "Not if I know it, young woman," he said; "you'll have to get another man for this job."

Mrs. Asquith tried to explain to the chauffeur who she was but he would have none of it, and the wife of the Prime Minister was compelled to seek other means of getting to her husband's official residence.

Women will find more news of interest to them in The Times' magazine page every morning than in any other paper.

An Australian Labor Member of Parliament punched another on the nose. Labor in Australia, like everywhere else, insists on the right to strike.

Decrease In Labor Unrest

According to the record maintained in the Department of Labour a feature of the labour situation during April was the marked decrease in the number and strikes and lockouts as compared with the corresponding month of last year. During April, 1913, twenty-five disputes commenced, which, together with the eight previously in existence, affected 8,430 employees and caused time losses of 112,446 working days. The record for April, 1914, shows only ten disputes in existence (four new ones) affecting 1,297 employees, and causing time losses of about 25,000 working days. Industrial conditions were not seriously effected by trade disputes in any particular locality, the strike of coal miners on Vancouver Island being the only disturbance affecting a considerable number of working men. Five disputes remained unsettled at the end of April.

Advancing—Not Retiring

An Ottawa dispatch says the defection of Sir Lyman Jones and A. C. Ross has frightened the opposition so much that "it is expected that as far as they will go in their amendment to the budget will be to ask for free food and free agricultural implements."

"Only" free food and free agricultural implements — a mere bagatelle, a delicate snap of the fingers according to the dispatch, expected to impress the readers of the Tory press with the full measure of the Liberal retreat. But Finance Minister White has other views, concurred in by Sir Lyman Jones, Mr. Cockshutt, M.P. and the Canadian management of the International Harvester Co. of Hamilton, a branch of an American combine. Their opinion is that free agricultural implements would be deplorably radical and revolutionary. Hear Mr. White in his recent budget speech on this point: "I say that the policy of free trade in agricultural implements means free trade out and out." Mr. White clearly does not think Sir Lyman Jones's defection has frightened the Liberals into a retreat. On the contrary, in his view it has spurred them to a stride forward in the way of reform which sends cold chills down his backbone.

Then there is "only" free food. This, also, we presume, is altogether negligible, but the suggestion seems to have alarmed Mr. White as much as the proposal for free implements. Why, he said, it would injure our millers; it would benefit the farmers, it would benefit the consumers of British Columbia, the highest food-taxed community in the world, but that is a mere nothing in consideration of the dividend exigencies of the milling industry.

Rheumatism Goes Quickly Its Virus Forever Destroyed

EVERY CASE IS CURABLE.

Good-bye to Rheumatism!

Your aching joints, your stiff, sore muscles! those sleepless nights and suffering days—good-bye forever—your day is gone.

Sufferer, cheer up, and read the good news below.

"A man met me a month ago, and said, 'don't stay crippled,' quit complaining, limber up.' My answer was 'I'm rheumatic, I can't do it.' He looked me over in a pitying sort of way and told me to go to the nearest drug store for Nerviline and Ferrozone. The combination had cured him. I was convinced of his sincerity and followed his instructions. I rubbed on Nerviline three times every day—rubbed it right into my aching joints. The pain quickly lessened, and I became more limber and active. To draw the virus of the disease from my blood I took two Ferrozone Tablets with every meal. I am well today, not an ache, not a pain and no sign of stiffness at all."

What Nerviline can do in a case like this it can do for you too. For nearly forty years Nerviline has been recommended for Rheumatism, Lumbago and Sciatica and Lame Back. It is the only remedy that never disappoints.

Ireland's Signposts

Ireland is the country for useless signposts. During the last few years there has been an outbreak of Gaelic League activity in the country. Among other manifestations it has taken the form of erecting signposts with Gaelic inscriptions. There is one such in the little Village of Omeath, in County Louth. It directs the traveler to Carlingford and to Newry—but it directs him in an unknown tongue. It is not easy to see what useful purpose is served by such a signpost. For the inhabitant knows his way without any such assistance and the English-speaking traveler is unable to find it unless he happens to consult one of the villagers, not one of whom—so far as I have been able to discover—can either read or speak a single word of Gaelic.—London Chronicle.

HEROES OF SHAFT AT NIAGARA PLANT

Remarkable Feat of Four Men Who Stopped Flood in Tunnel

Three electrical workers went in a punt down through a raging torrent that choked a power company's tunnel along the mighty cliff that holds up the weight of Niagara Falls. Three men with three boxes of dynamite groped their way in pitch blackness through a circular chamber swirling with water in order to blast out ten tons of rock lodged unexpectedly in the tunnel's "spout." They failed. And then what? A few days later they did what mortal men have done neither before nor since; they climbed up the face of Niagara Falls from the outside, crawled under the curtain of water that leaps out from the giant cliffs and placed a charge of dynamite in the mouth of the tunnel. That time they were successful. The channel was cleared without the loss of a life. Here is the second trip as told by one of the men:

"Although we were dressed in silskins, oil hats and rubber boots, we were quickly drenched to the bones by gusts of spray that tumbled on our heads and backs like pails of buckshot. So great became the force of these gusts that we could stand upright no longer and crawled from bowlder to bowlder on our hands and knees. All this time we were advancing literally under Niagara Falls, for the cataract was falling over and slightly beyond us, now and then giving us an extra heavy swish of water as the winds in the gorge blew direct against the face of the fall.

"We were walking about a hundred feet up from the pool, bracing ourselves against the pile of rocks. It was, at first, an almost impossible task to make steady progress. So we kept some distance apart for safety's sake in the event of one having a tumble, and by taking our medicine patiently at every downpour sent our way, we finally reached the ledge directly under the tunnel's mouth. It was a matter of a few minutes to place the dynamite and wires where they would hit the blockade to best advantage.

"We rested a few minutes and commenced the return journey. Bad as the approach had been, the going back was infinitely worse. The adverse winds had practically isolated us by walls of water and indeed at one time the prospect was good for a twenty-four-hour stay on the edge of an ugly cavern.

"During a lull we were enabled to make another start. Having to drag the pair of copper wires with us made the trip much more difficult, but we held on and gained foot after foot, sometimes slipping, often bringing blood, until the sight of the Cave of the Winds peeped through the abnormal mists. Exhaustion was slowing down our steps, and a fearful hunger increased the discomfort, for the adventure had taken the best part of a day. I remember some one throwing us a rope and we snatched at it with a sudden return of energy.

"Lifted safely into the cave, the superintendent touched the copper wires. A far-off roar, that sounded even above the boom of the falls—and we turned to face a messenger who had been waiting at the telephone for instant news of the water level in the tunnel. 'It is rapidly lowering,' said he, and all of us knew that the blockade had been broken by the blast."

Railway Engines Lost

Some amusement was occasioned by the discovery in the stocktaking at the South-Eastern and Chatham Railway Works at Asford that two railway engines were missing.

Inquiries were made up and down the main lines, but no trace of their whereabouts could be found. One of the engines was of up-to-date pattern.

A local skit runs: "Passengers who sometimes lose the train will be interested to learn that the railway company have lost the engines."

An Effort to Commercialize the By-Products Failed

An enthusiastic genius from England who visited Newfoundland promoting a scheme for developing various fishing industries more extensively, advocated the employment of a steamer to follow the sealing fleet, pick up all the carcases, and bring them into St. John's, where the best of the meat might be sold and the remainder converted into fertiliser; but it was pointed out to him that if it would pay a steamer to do this it would pay her very much better to engage in the actual seal hunt, and the scheme thereupon collapsed. The same genius it was who proposed, and actually did put into practice, the experiment of canning flippers and offering them for sale, but it is scarcely necessary to observe that as the appetite for these dainties is somewhat of an acquired taste he has not yet succeeded in inducing even the Island railway to include them in its dining-car menu. At the same time it must not be imagined that there is anything unpleasant or unpalatable in seal flippers, because the contrary is the case. They are excellent nourishing food.

The flipper or the carcase must be eaten fresh to enjoy it at its best, but staleness is not an insuperable obstacle, as may be understood from the fact that the salting of both into barrels for summer consumption is by no means unusual. Just as with beef and other meats the flipper or carcase of an old seal is not nearly so delicate or tender as the younger one, and it becomes rancid through the operation of the oil much quicker. There is, however, an ample number of the flippers of young seals obtainable every year to satisfy all of the local demands, and it would be no exaggeration to say that the sturdy health of the 4,000 Terranovan seafarers who tread the Arctic icefloes in the quest for these creatures is due in a substantial measure to their indulgence in flippers and seal meat, which provides the good red blood and the other elements that make for strength and physical endurance.

SAILED FOR CANADA NINETY YEARS AGO

Remarkable Old Sea-dog Recalls Days of Savage Punishment in British Navy

Wyebridge, in Surrey is very proud of John Durrant who went to sea ninety years ago and is still alive and well at the age of 104. When fourteen years old he joined the Campden, a merchant vessel The destination of the Campden was Quebec, and that city has probably never been in a more pitiable condition than when the English vessel arrived.

"We had a good view of Champlain street, which runs near the docks," said Mr. Durrant, "and we were alarmed to discover that the city was in the grip of yellow fever, or something equally as devastating. Nine out of every ten houses that we could see had nobody living in them, and the doors were painted with a red cross to indicate that they had been visited by the fever."

Three years later Durrant joined Sir John Franklin's expedition which was then preparing to go to the Arctic—the ill-fated party not one of whose members ever returned from the frozen North. At the last moment however, Durrant was drafted into the Navy, joining H.M.S. Winchester.

The captain of the Winchester was a Captain P——, of whom old John entertains anything but pleasant recollections. He was of the old school of naval commanders, who prescribed flogging for the most trifling offences.

Saw Terrible Floggings

"The Winchester was the flagship of Admiral Harvey, whose son was on board as flag-lieutenant," said Mr. Durrant, "and we were to pick up the Admiral at Halifax and then proceed to Barbadoes. We were a little over a month in making Nova Scotia, and in that time things became so bad—half the crew almost suffering from the 'claws of the cat'—that it was a miracle to me that no mutiny occurred.

"It came near to that one morning, I recollect, when a poor fellow was receiving three dozen lashes at the hands of the bo'sun and his two assistants. While the bo'sun was laying on the first dozen the poor chap screamed out in agony, 'Oh, mates, will you stand by and see this dreadful punishment?'

"There was a dead silence, and the man moaned, 'Oh, comrades, comrades, cowards you are to let it go on.' The marines were on deck armed, and Captain P——, who was watching the scene, shouted out to the bo'sun, 'Mr. G——, you aren't half doing your duty, sir!'

"Very quietly, upon that, the bo'sun laid down the 'cat,' and, looking at the captain, he said, clearly, 'I've done with it. I'll punish no more men while I belong to this ship. I know I'm in your hands, sir; you can do what you like with me!'

Dared the Captain

"As I have said, we had aboard as flag-lieutenant Admiral Harvey's son, and when we reached Halifax and the Admiral came aboard, his son showed him a log of the punishments which he had kept. Admiral Harvey examined the crew thoroughly, and then he gave the order for as many of us as could get there to go aft. Then he produced this log, and turning to Captain P—— he said: 'Now, sir, I have a very good mind to send you back home to England. You are not fit to be in charge of this ship. Look here,' he says, shaking the log, 'there has been too much punishment aboard. Two days after you left Plymouth you punished two marines, and every day since there has been punishment inflicted. Go to your cabin, sir,' he concluded, and calling up the master-at-arms and the ship's corporal he confined Captain P—— to his cabin and kept him there for a fortnight under sentry—a prisoner in his own ship."

Not Long in Navy

Durrant left the Navy an invalid after a few years and returned to the merchant service. Again he came to Canada and started to work as a pilot on the St. Lawrence. A year later he left Canada in a new vessel of 1,200 tons, built at Prince Edward Island. He was second mate.

"We ran into bad conditions," he recalled, "and lost our masts. We were at the mercy of the sea, with big waves breaking on the deck. There had been thirty-one on the ship altogether, but when the dawn broke there was only the captain, a man named George Jury, and myself, who had climbed for the maintop directly we realized the plight of the ship.

"For thirteen days we drifted about, existing upon ice and frozen snow, and when the pangs of hunger were very terrible, I chewed a piece of lead. The last three days we were insensible. It was a ship called the Frances Ridley which came to our rescue."

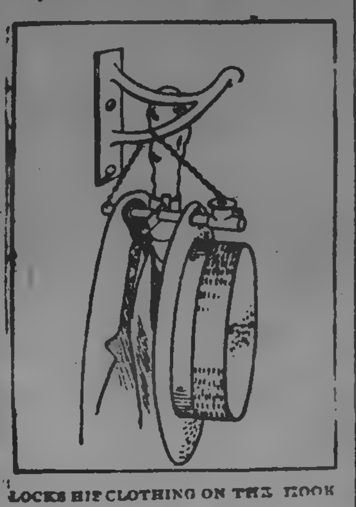
Locking Device Designed to Frustrate Hotel Thieves

Necessity is the mother of invention and the inventor of the lock for wearing apparel shown in the accompanying illustration, was probably prompted by an unfortunate experience in a restaurant of some busy city. He probably discovered that some persons keep themselves supplied with hats, umbrellas and coats by picking out the best at hand when they are ready to leave such a public place as a restaurant. If they make their getaway, all right, but if detected, it is a very simple matter to ask pardon and say mistake.



LOCKS HIS CLOTHING ON THE HOOK

This device, which has been recently patented in this country by a Canadian, consists of a bar with a removable head and a small chain and a key for locking the two parts together. If it is desired to relieve oneself of hat and coat, the garments are secured on the bar and the chain passed through an opening in the wall hook and they can then be left with perfect safety so far as stealing the garments is concerned. This bar is adapted to hold hat, coat and umbrella or cane.

A Slippery Mystery

After years of study scientists are still in ignorance as to the origin of the eel, which is in many ways an exceedingly puzzling creature.

For instance, he will reside for years in the dark depths of the ocean and then suddenly adjourn to the surface for a couple of years.

He is a born wanderer, and apparently quite indifferent to changes of climate; for he will warm himself in the Gulf Stream for a time, and then, all of a sudden, make tracks for cold water

After that he may decide to try fresh water and proceed to take up his abode in a river, travelling sometimes 3,000 miles to do so!

Neither does the eel mind very much whether he is in the water or not, for he will make his way over damp grass, even when quite young to a pond or lake miles away. Here he may stay for years, but eventually he will probably return overland to the nearest river, and from thence once more to the sea.

An exciting incident took place at Jamaica Bridge, Glasgow, when a man, supposed to be a sailor, attempted to enter the Clyde from the Broomielaw. Could be Greatly Increased by Proper Testing of Cows

A common question in the country is, "How are the cows doing?" What a volume of thought that suggests! If they are doing well is it because of good feed and careful attention, or may it be despite the feed and care they deserve, but do not get? Leaving aside the questions of weather, breed, heredity and persistency of flow of milk, is it possible to account for the remarkable differences in yield that are to be found? For instance, the dairy division at Ottawa found in one locality 100 cows that gave 3,000 pounds of fat in one month, but 100 cows close by in the same county gave only 3,500 pounds of fat. Another lot of 100 cows in a nearby county gave only 2,200 pounds.

Is the ordinary herd keyed up to the pitch of creditable performance, or is it just jogging along in the old rut of "average yields?" Suppose the farmer ascertains his herd is doing "about as well" as his neighbor's, does it not seem a great pity that his ambition should end there?

Cow testing has helped many communities to far larger banking business, because it shows that scores of cows and average herds can be made to produce far more than they do at present. Make each cow pay a good profit.

Peter's Adventures In Matrimony

By Leona Dalrymple

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

Resting!

LEONA DALRYMPLE

"PETER," read a letter from Mary, "you must come up here over a week-end soon. Everybody else's husband does, and it doesn't look well for you to be an exception to the rule. The fare is pretty high, I know, but we can economize some other way when I get home."

If that isn't consistency for you! Not once has Mary mentioned the extravagance of her summer at the lake, but she calmly speaks of economizing in the same breath with my railroad fare.

I decided to go in spite of the extravagance, however, and departed one Friday to surprise her. She didn't expect me until Saturday. After a railroad journey of considerable tediousness we arrived at a country station and proceeded by rickety stage to a summer boarding house by the shore of a lake.

A Hotbed of Gossip

I shan't forget my first glimpse of the rocking chair brigade on the porch. There they sat, files upon files of melancholy women, rocking endlessly back and forth and fussing over the ridiculous fancy work with which women waste so much time. Occasionally one would dart hysterically from the piazza and rescue a squalling youngster on the lawn. Over in a corner four gray-haired ladies with somewhat masterful chins were squabbling fussily over bridge whist and peering with disapproval at the younger women chatting noisily beside them. Under an apple tree a woman in a hammock was reading a novel. Through the trees beyond I glimpsed several of elderly card groups and an irascible old gentleman with his foot on a chair who seemed to be the victim of an ailing toe by the malignant glances he shot in that direction. He was the only man in sight, and he was not at all happy.

Of all hotbeds of petty gossip, commend me to such a place as this! A summer hotel that caters to married people of mediocre mentality and medium circumstances is the most deadly thing under heaven! It is calculated, I'm willing to wager, to increase tenfold the petty failings of every woman there.

[illegible] would exchange our trim [illegible] for this squabbling, holiday-hunting mal- [illegible] than I could under- [illegible] much upon the altar [illegible]

[illegible] her at dinner [illegible] and healthful here," [illegible] firmly, "and I'm surprised to [illegible] speak so, Peter. I'm [illegible] I feel ever so much better [illegible] I came up here. And you can't imagine," she added with a [illegible] naivete, "how nice it is to write to your out-of-town friends and say casually 'I've been away all summer at the lake.'"

Worse Than at Home.

The irascible old gentleman with the toe, however, told me a different story. He unburdened his vexed soul to me over a post-prandial cigar.

"Rest!" he roared at me when I mentioned it, "these women don't know what rest is! They'd rest more at home. Here [illegible] fuss from morning to night, changing their duds at every opportunity to dazzle each other. Rest! I'm imprisoned here with this cursed toe to rest, and if it wasn't for my daughters who watch me like a hawk I'd escape tonight, toe or no toe. The women gossip and grumble, talk clothes and ailments and [illegible] and babies until I don't wonder [illegible] get on each other's nerves.

"And don't you tell me they don't, for [illegible] 'em! They brag by [illegible] their homes, and [illegible] of [illegible] homesick, but [illegible] to you see, folks ex- [illegible] a woman goes off [illegible] the buzz [illegible] -horsepower [illegible] I know, sir, [illegible] and the mothers [illegible] ones squabble [illegible] and dusty up [illegible] swear they're [illegible] they're not. When [illegible] day night packed [illegible] they ought to be [illegible] a different bunch. [illegible] let my toe get bet- [illegible] away from Ann and go [illegible] there isn't any rest."

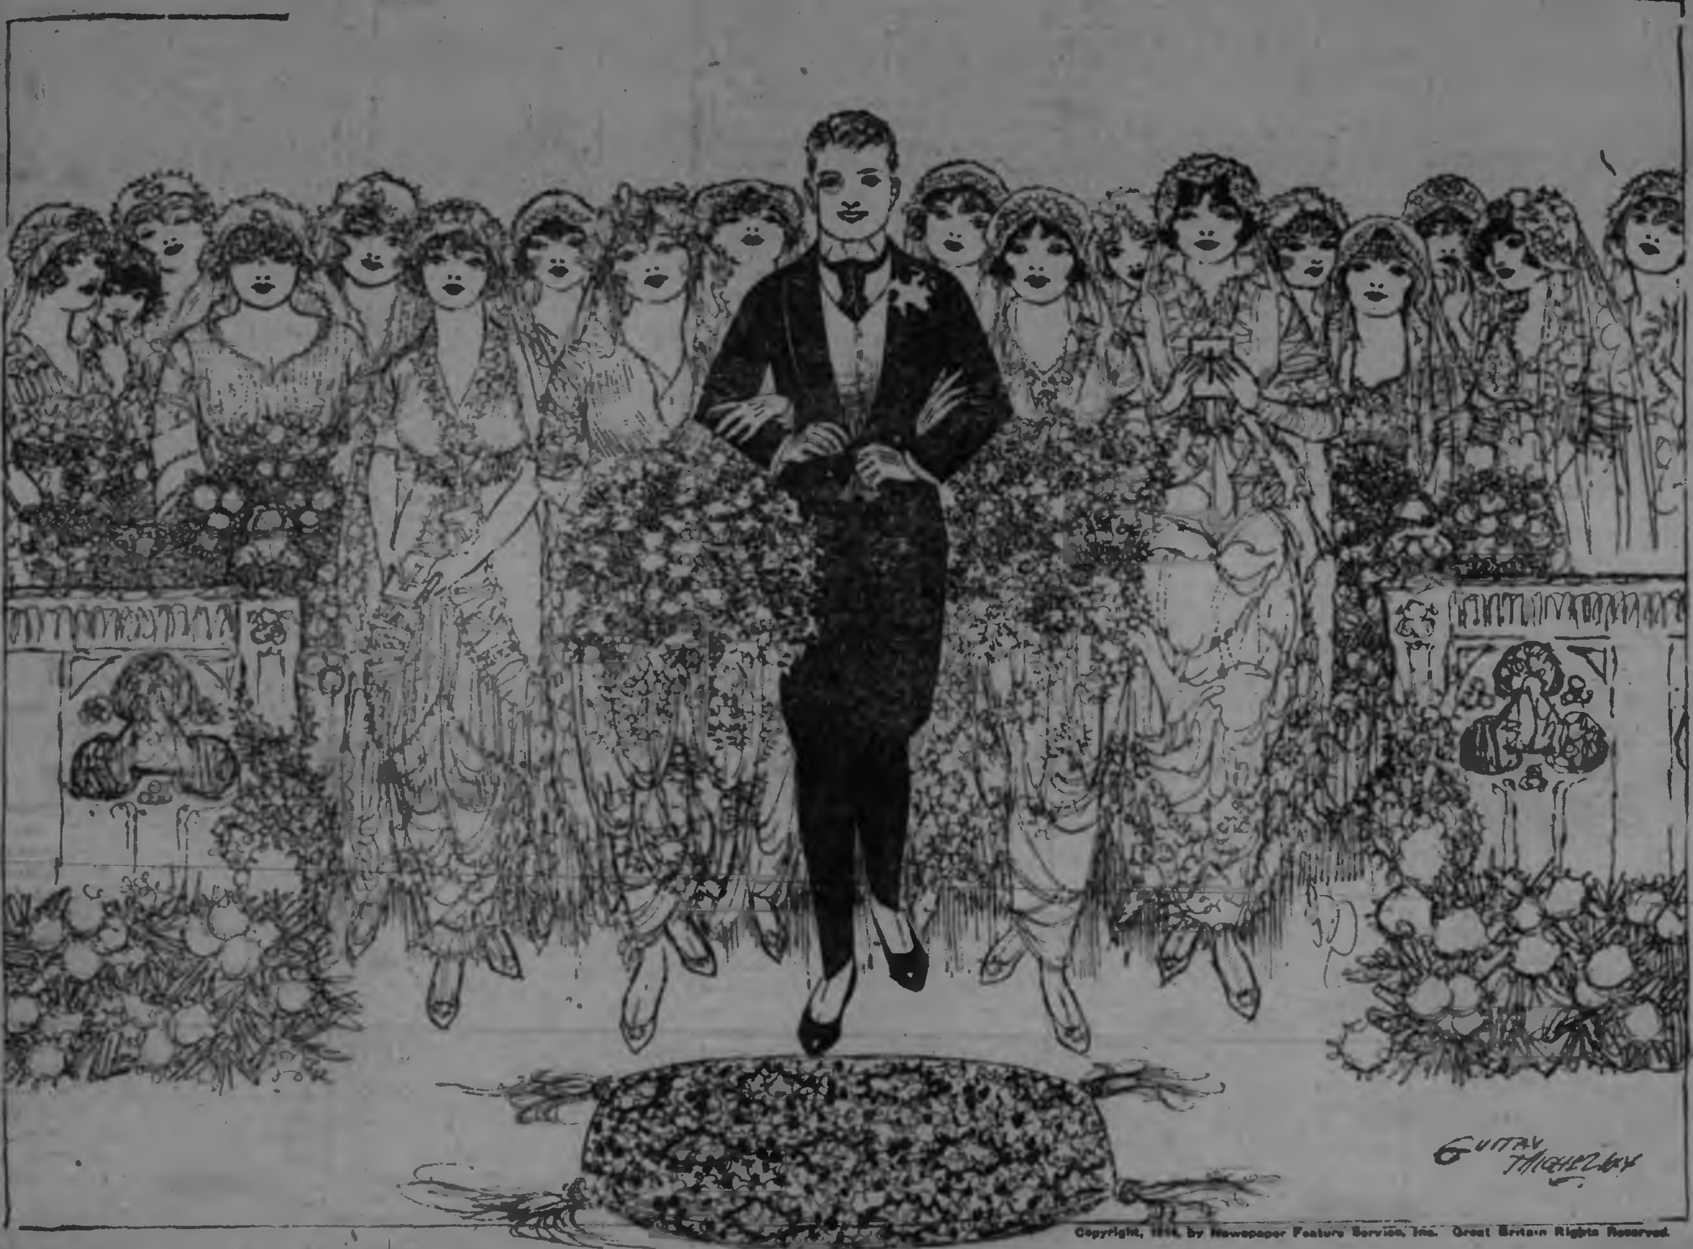
IF ONLY HE COULD MARRY ALL OF THEM!

By Michelson



Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

MAKE no mistake, dear friends, he is no Mormon or aspirant for the dishonors of bigamy. He's just a plain, honest, likable chap whose sin is being in love with a great many lovely girls and not knowing just how to discriminate against all the others by asking one.

If only he could marry them ALL! If only that altar cushion might be indented by the whole delightful brood, all at once—anything to escape that heart-twisting business of pushing all the other charmers away from any one.

You see, he happens to know so many girls who LOOK just like brides; and here's JUNE coming and the blossoms and honeymoon time tables and heaven knows how many other inducements to bridal thoughts.

Such a young man needs sympathy—and good advice. He needs to be reminded that just ONE requires a whole lot of love and a whole lot of money, and that he's lucky if he gets that one to HAVE him.

Paper Dress Frolics for Children

By Jeannette Young Norton

CHILDREN, aping the grown-ups in their search for new party sensations, love the crepe paper frolics. Many novelties are made from its crinkly rolls, and each child may design her party after her own ideas, and even help in the making of her costume.

Perhaps the economical mother may consider it a great deal of trouble to make a dress for one occasion only; but when she takes into consideration the fun it gives in the wearing she will admit the preparation is no more troublesome than seeing to the proper laundering of the lace and cambric dress, the pressing of sashes and hair ribbons.

Some of the dresses are made on cambric foundations, and others right on to the petticoat and waist combination. The paper is quite tough, and is not nearly so difficult to handle as one might suppose.

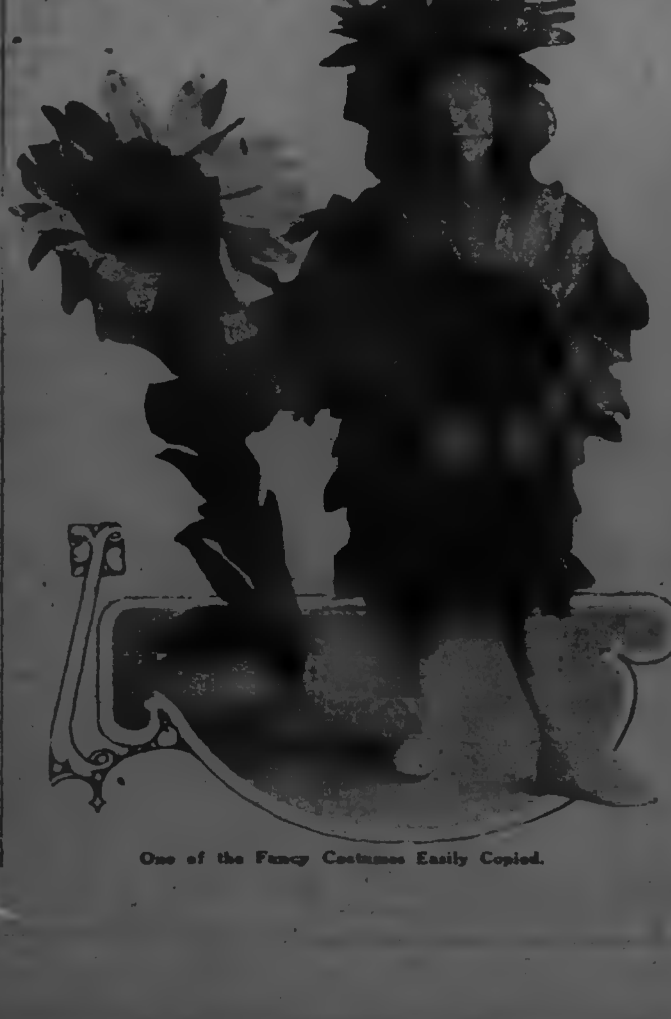
The flower costumes are exceedingly pretty. A sunflower design may be worn either by girl or boy. Both skirt and trousers are made of leaf green, as is also the jacket. A big sunflower is fastened to the belt in front; another behind. A green paper hat trimmed with the flowers is worn, or just a big flower with yellow ties under the chin. A sunflower wand is carried, and is quite as tall as the wearer of the costume.

The Wild West boy is all in brown with fringed trousers, a big sombrero, with bells on the brim, and a lash whip in his hand makes him look the part to perfection.

As the refreshments are nearly always served at small tables or are passed in buffet fashion, many charming effects may be achieved with the paper decorations for the table. One device is that of having the centre-piece a "Jack Horner" pie in the shape of a bee hive. This is surrounded by a circular mound of brilliant flowers with big bees resting here and there upon them, and some may be suspended in the air by fine black thread which does not show.

The creams and jellies may be frozen in flower individual moulds, sandwiches cut in diamond and heart shapes, cakes frosted and marked like dominos, a big wasps' nest filled with prizes having little gray ribbons hanging out of the holes to burst it with when the time comes, and little Marzipan peas, radishes and strawberries in tiny yellow market baskets for the bon-bons.

Indeed, crepe paper is a boon for these affairs, for there is nothing to launder, and all the waste may be thrown out together, leaving only a few dishes from the serving for the maid to clear away.



One of the Fancy Costumes Easily Copied.

Where Liberality Counts.

Mrs. Wabash—Don't you believe in liberal divorce laws?

Mrs. Lakeside—Well, the laws don't matter much if the husbands are liberal.

Not Wholly True.

"Is he a true poet?"

"I don't think so. His wife got a divorce from him."

One That Will Work.

"He has a new attachment on his auto."

"What is it?"

"I don't know. The sheriff put it on."

Three Minute Journeys

Where the Natives Seek Slavery

By TEMPLE MANNING

NOTWITHSTANDING all that has been written in this country and abroad concerning the atrocities practised on some of the rubber plantations in Peru and Bolivia, this much I can say about the slaves in one large district on the Amazon, about a thousand miles below the trading post of Puerto Alianza:

They rank higher socially than the free, unattached natives; are really envied. It is the common ambition to become attached to some trader as his chattel.

The reason for this is not hard to find. Instead of wandering wild about the woods they are brought into the camps, given clothes and a gun and introduced to alcohol. A good crop is invariably followed by increased supplies of alcohol, more guns and ammunition and finery for the women.

Sometimes, when there is gross laziness, whipping is resorted to, but care is taken in this. If the ill treatment be excessive—that is, more than the men think they deserve—the next morning may find the master assassinated. I know of at least two slave owners and their staffs who met their fate in this way—all wiped out in a night.

Of all the miserable, monotonous trips I have ever taken the journey up the Madre de Dios river, a tributary of the Amazon, was the worst. We had to punt our peculiarly shaped canoe with long bamboo poles up some of the worst rapids in South America, and we could only do this by keeping close to the shore. This was at the expense of great suffering, for hordes of mosquitoes, "manta blancas," and other flying and creeping pests came out gayly from the jungle banks to feast upon us.

When you have travelled thus for days and days you will appreciate a thatched covering in a clearing and the presence of a few cheerful savages. I most certainly did; and the roasted monkey, turtle eggs, wild pig, wild turkey and small hard cakes, which pass for bread, were as delicious as any banquet in the centre of civilization.

To show the pride of the natives, and explain the prime reason why they will work so readily if their owners keep on hand an assortment of cheap finery, I was sitting with a Huitoto chief over the remains of a feast one evening when a huge copper-colored savage appeared. He was in process of taming, preparatory to being sent out to gather gaucho. A trade shirt and trousers covered part of his frame, and on his head was an old felt hat with a lining of greasy silk.

I was wearing an unlined felt cowboy hat that greatly interested the natives. Suddenly, monkey fashion, the big newcomer reached down and grabbed my hat, looked at it, noted the absence of lining, gazed at his own resplendent headwear, and then laughed and danced about in satisfaction that he was the owner of a more elegant hat than mine.

The governments of Peru and Bolivia have never recognized the state of slavery as it exists on the Amazon, but little or no attempt has been made to wipe it out. Men and women are bought and sold freely. When I was at Madre de Dios the market price of a man was $200, a woman $200, and a child $50. One land owner there bought 20 families in one deal—say 80 persons in all—for $25,000.

Secrets of Health

Beware Cramp If You Swim After Eating

By Dr. L. K. HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

CHEERED by the milder beam, the sprightly youth speeds to the well known pool. A while he stands gazing at the inverted landscape—half afraid—to meditate the blue below. Then he plunges headlong.

The old swimming hole of boyhood's happy hours has been found in these matter of fact, bacteriological days to be not all that it is cracked up to be. Like the old oaken bucket that hangs in the typhoid infected well and the cakes that mother used to make, the swimming hole is a nest of lurking microbes.

How many a time have you, like the Two Foscari, cloven with arm still lustier and breast more daring the wave all roughened at the swimmer's stroke?

Who in these lithesome, blithesome hours, be she a swimmer or he only a bather, has not pined for thirst amid the sea of waves. Then comes the thought, as you hatchet and chop the green water, that, however near or far one shore may be to another, the wave which now ripples across your moving foot will soon be on the distant strand.

To swim with discretion means never to venture in the earth-absent depths when you are the slightest bit below par. You must neither dare the waters after a meal nor brave even the ripples after the loss of a night's sleep.

The slightest indisposition may mean drowning to the best and most venturesome swimmers. "Cramps," as muscular contractions and spasms of the tissues are termed, paralyze the most alert and skilful water nymphs, when they appear.

These usually assail the bold swimmer when he is tired, overfed, underfed, overworked, shocked, or otherwise in want of a complete physiological balance.

"Children are we
Of the restless sea,
Swelling in anger or sparkling in glee;
We follow our race,
In shifting chase,
Over the boundless ocean-space!
Who hath beheld where the race begun?
Who shall behold it run?

The waves are full of whispers wild and sweet
They call to me—incessantly they beat
Along the side from stern to curved prow."

Answers to Health Questions

A. N.—My hair is falling out. Please recommend a growth promoter and dandruff cure.

Loosen the scalp with the tips of your fingers twice a day, simultaneously rubbing in this:

Castor oil	2 ounces
Sulphur	½ ounce
Cocoa butter	½ ounce
Salicylic acid	10 grains
Beta napthol	10 grains
Balsam Peru	½ dram

Take two grains of thyroid gland three times a day for one week, then stop one week, and so alternate for two months. If palpitation, nervousness or other disturbances appear do not take it.

MARY McL.—My head aches every morning, and I have fever with it. When I kneel down I feel as if my head would come off, and after I stand up I feel as if I would fall down. I snore when asleep very loud. A thick phlegm comes in my throat and chokes me, and a bad feeling goes up my back to my head. I get short of breath when I go up two flights of stairs. Am 3[illegible] years old and have had seven children.

You need a good rest and relief from all responsibility. If your oldest children and others of your family will allow you a month or two away from them, and if you will expend much of the time in bed, eating green vegetables, fresh fruits and thinking only of pleasant things, taking purgatives daily, you will be quickly improved.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie:

There is a boy who lives near us whom I like very much. He has been told that I like him. And whenever I see him I am so shy I don't know what to do. But what makes it worse is he doesn't care for me. What shall I do. How can I make him care for me?

SWEET SIXTEEN.

HOW can you "make" him care for you when he doesn't?

There's no how about it, little girl. There's no such word as "make" when it comes to love.

Who told him that you liked him, and did you tell some one to do it, you foolish little girl you?

So you are so shy you don't know what to do, are you? What makes you shy? Are you afraid of the boy, or what?

You just stop thinking about that young man, Sweet Sixteen. Isn't there some work you ought to be doing this very minute instead of mooning around thinking how beautiful it would be, if the bell should ring and you should go to the door and he should stand there with a big bunch of roses and a box of candy and an engagement ring in his pocket, and couldn't wait until the door was shut before he clasped you in his arms?

Oh, of course, you'll have to go through it; you can't escape it any more than you can escape the measles but try to have as light an attack as you can.

In six weeks from now you won't be worrying about this boy at all. It will be some other boy—and that's a good thing; that's just the way it should be at your age.

Be happy, Sweet Sixteen, you're the right age for that anyhow. [illegible] your heart, be happy.

Annie Laurie

How People Feel
When They Have
Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ⅝ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4830, or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

A Long Acquaintance

A celebrated actress tells an amusing story of a young "nut" who fell in love with a certain leading lady who was appearing in a provincial town. He sought out the manager of the company—a fine-looking, bearded man—and tried to get an introduction to the lady. "I expect you, who see her so often, are very fond of her?" he suggested. The manager admitted that he was; he had known her for a long time. "But it can't be so very long," protested the other; "she's little more than a girl." "Well, I've known her ever since I was born!" replied the manager. "You see, I'm her son!"

CHEAP MONEY FOR FARMERS

The movement for cheaper money for the farmer is attracting the attention of many not closely identified with agriculture. Prof. H. Michell, Kingston, makes a strong plea for the farmer in this connection. He said: "A farmer is not in the position of a merchant with a large and quick turnover, with money coming in every day over the counter, who can discount a bill of lading and obtain advances from the bank if his credit be good, readily and at reasonable rates. What is more, the banks are prohibited by law from advancing money on mortgage, and can only make loans on personal security, thereby cutting off the farmer's chief asset. We find the farmer, therefore, in peculiar need of credit facilities, and also peculiarly handicapped in his ability to obtain them."

Society Nicknames

The Duke of Portland is known among his intimates as "Jumbo," on account of his somewhat stout and rubicund appearance. Nicknames are growing even more popular than they have been in society circles. The Marquess of Saveral is known as "Blue Monkey"; Lord Stamfordham, King George's private secretary, as "[illegible]"; the fondness of Lord Lonsdale for horses has led his being dubbed "The Groom"; Prince Albert, second son of King George, is known as "Lobster"; and the Marquess of Crewe as "Robin." The fact that the editor of "Punch" is now Sir Owen Seaman promptly led his friends to give him the nickname of "S.O.S."

Mixed Bathing

Mixed bathing was a question that caused trouble under the Roman empire. It came in with the collapse of austere republican manners, and the Emperors Hadrian and Marcus Aurelius found it necessary to issue orders against it. Alexander Severus also forbade the opening of "balnea mixtra" in Rome. Later on we find great diversity of view in Europe on the matter. In the fifteenth century Bohemian and Spanish travellers were astonished at the goings-on at Bruges, Malines and Brussels. The public baths at the Swiss Baden, where only a railing separated the sexes scandalized Poggio Bracciolini.

Pilgrims to Mecca

The annual number of pilgrims to Mecca often exceeds 100,000, the greater number coming from the far east and the middle east, and of these the last census included about 15,000 from Bombay, 10,000 from Singapore and about 12,000 from Batavia.

FARMS CHANGING

A Woodstock Man's Observations on the Subject

"The farm is changing because it is ceasing to be the farm. That is why the farmer refuses to remain on the farm," said Mr. Markey of Woodstock. "Modern conveniences, such as the elaborate implements, telephone service and such devices are taking away the old style of farm life. I can remember when agriculture was born. The farmers were once farmers, but years ago they became agriculturists, and then the vocation gave way to science. The man who worked the soil began to see how much money he could make out of his land instead of how much pleasure he could find in taking care of it, and the tendency leaned toward immigration to the city. Even in the public schools the beauty of nature is being shattered. The schools are botanizing the beauty out of the world. Every pupil knows the geological formation of the rainbow but he does not know the poem 'My heart leaps up when I behold a rainbow in the sky.'"

Mr. Markey could remember when hogs sold for $4. Whether it was $6 a ton or a bushel, he did not remember. "While I was still a journalist, an important incident happened in my life," he said. "When a young lad gets a job in a newspaper office he becomes a journalist. After a few years he realizes that he is a newspaperman. I got a report for my paper that hogs were selling at $6. When the report was set up the six dropped upside down and read $9.

"A farmer outside of Woodstock read it. He went out and killed everything on his farm that looked like a hog and brought it into town. When he arrived the price of hogs had dropped beneath $6. He came into our office and threatened to sue us for $450, the difference between $9 and what he was forced to sell at."

Oil in Quebec

Viscount Selby, chairman of the Eastern Canada Company, has the highest hopes of the oil producing possibilities of the Gaspe Bay District, Quebec. Shipping facilities there are he says, admirable. In view of the increasing attention being given to the adoption of oil in the Royal Navy and the decision of the Government to secure supplies as far as possible within the British Empire, there opens up the prospect of another large Canadian industry.

The following conversation was heard last night on a George Street car between two gentlemen returning to their respective homes. One of the pair was in that condition that a Cowboy would describe as considerably "Lit up." The "Lit up" one, in reply to a question by his friend, said "Yes, I'm running a garden at my place. All the apartments have been let.

Chased by Black Flies.

Mr. Frank Milligan of this City returned yesterday from lumbering operations near Marmora. He said he could not stand the deadly black flies. They were in such swarms that one could hardly see through the clouds of these pestiferous insects for a distance of ten feet. He told the Times that many of the settlers in that neighborhood come low in the human scale. They are content to vegitate rather than to live. So long as they get through the summer and can lay in enough flour and "Sow-Belly" to see them through the winter, they are content. A sad state of immorality, he stated, exists among many of them.

All Saints' Church.

Highly satisfactory returns were made at All Saints' Parish Hall, when the ladies who took part in the Talent System, reported on the result of their work and the young people of the Sunday School on the results of their efforts with the building fund cards. The Sunday School contributed $172.75 through the building fund cards. Not a few of the children in the Primary Department had there cards filled, making a total of $5. In the returns by the ladies, was one of $02.25 and many others of $10 and upwards.

BALL-BEARING SHEARS.

Attention is drawn to an advertisement in this issue of the Ball Bearing Self-sharpening Shears. These Shears are one of the "last words" in such goods. It would pay those requiring such goods to carefully consult the advertisement.

The Ball-Bearing Self-Sharpening Shears were patented January 7th, 1913. They are made from selected cutlery material each pair with hardened and keen cutting edges carefully ground.

They are first polished, then highly nickel-plated and brightly finished.

They are ready at all times for hard work and equal in every respect to cutlery costing many times the price of these Shears.

The pattern of the Shears gives the fingers and thumb perfect ease and comfort in the cutting of either light or heavy materials.

The Roller Ball Bearing cannot get out of order as this ball bearing is neatly and firmly held in proper position by the Arrow tensioning spring and the blades ride smoothly at all times.

There are no parts to adjust, no screws to turn, each being perfectly adjusted and ready for instant use.

Self-Sharpening Feature.

They are Self-Sharpening for the reason that the spring causes the blades to gently grind one upon the other, keeping the edges at just the right angle and sharp at all times.

The Shears will stand up and give entire satisfaction under the hardest kind of usage. In fact the Shears combine three important features:

They are especially designed and the handles actually fit the fingers like a glove.

The genuine Ball-Bearings make the Shears run smoothly and cut cleanly.

To Cure Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness and head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected a complete cure after all else has failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear a watch tick have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear.

Therefore, if you know someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrh or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand to them and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz Parmint (Double Strength), about 75c. worth. Take this home, and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of moist or granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose promptly ends the most distressing head noises, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing rapidly returns as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell and mucous dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison, and which are quickly overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent. of all ear troubles are directly caused by catarrh; therefore, there are but few people whose hearing can not be restored by this simple home treatment. Every person who is troubled with head noises, catarrhal deafness, or catarrh in any form should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.

Important. In ordering Parmint always specify that you want Double Strength: your druggist has it, or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c. to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, P.Q., who make a specialty of it.

KELLY-SPRINGFIELD TIRES

PRICE!

I know no joy or pleasure,
My life is full of pain,
No sooner do I pump my tires
Than flat they go again.
My fabric's cracked to pieces,
The tread is worn to naught,
I haven't gone a hundred miles,
With these punk tires I've bought.
A glib young man approached me
And talked to me of price.
The money which he said I'd save,
Has gone like last year's ice.
If cheapness was their virtue,
Then prate it not to me,
I'll pay the price for KELLY'S
And from trouble I'll be free.

You wash dishes about two hours every day. That's one hour wasted!

Dishes get dirty, greasy and sticky and soap will not clean them. Soapy dish water merely cleans the surface; it doesn't dig into the corners and drive out the decayed food particles.

Gold Dust is the sanitary dish washer. It not only cleans the surface, but digs deep after hidden particles of dirt and kills the germs of decayed food which ordinary dish-water overlooks. Gold Dust sterilizes as well as cleanses.

Besides doing the work better than soap or any other cleanser can, Gold Dust will save just half the time you spend in washing dishes.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

NGLISHMEN ARE APPRECIATING SERIOUSNESS OF THE SITUATION

ecent Dramatic Events Around Belfast Making the Steady-going Electors Realize the Predicament Into Which the Government Has Got the Nation

London, May 20.—An Ulster infant, ently christened, will carry through the name "Edward Carson Bonar aw McCarty." Despite the Nationist surname the child's parents are dent Unionists. Feeling still runs gh throughout northern Ireland, and e Government evidently fears that e naval service may become furer contaminated than it already by too close contact with the rebels." Officers and men on the uadron of destroyers, now hovering out the Ulster coast, have been rbidden to accept dinner invitations hore, or even to answer the friend- messages from volunteer wireless ations. There is little doubt about the defection of the rank and e in the army. The other day a ronto man asked a London policean who carries several medals for lliant service in a line regiment, at the troops would do if ordered fire on Ulstermen. There was no sitation about the reply. "Three-arters of them would throw down eir arms, sir, and the rest would oot high in the air."

It is claimed by Unionists that recent dramatic events in and around elfast have brought the seriousness the Ulster situation home to Englishmen as nothing had ever brought before. If this is so, if steadying electors all over England are w for the first time coming to aliz the predicament into which Government has got the nation, en the most popular of Budgets ay not save Ministers. Perhaps pending bye-elections in Grimsby, ortheast Derby, and Ipswich may ve us some clue as to how deeply ublic opinion on this side of the ishSea has been aroused. The difficlty of drawing a clear deduction in is respect from the results of the olling is increased by the multiplicty of local and other issues involv in the three contests. The unpoparity of the Insurance Act in some arters, Welsh Disestablishment, Ta Reform, the new Budget and the nd question—all these will have eir influence on the verdict.

CHICAGO'S ORANGE ORDERS SEND HELP

Large Sum Already Forwarded Ulster; More to Come in Near Future

Chicago, May 20.—Sympathizers in this city with Ulster's fight against Irish Home Rule to-day sent a draft for $1,250 to the Unionist headquarters in Belfast, Ireland. NAVAL RESERVE FORCE FOR CANADA AUTHORIZED, TO TAKE EFFECT AT ONCE

Force at Victoria Privately Financed to be First Division of Force; Admiral Kingsmill on His Way to the Coast to Give Official Recognition

Ottawa, May 20.—An Order-in-Council has been passed by the Government and was signed by the Duke of Connaught yesterday, authorizing the establishment in Canada of a volunteer naval reserve force.

The new force will be under the Naval Service Department and steps are already being taken for the organization of volunteers. A sum is being placed in the estimates sufficient for this year's work.

There is already a volunteer Naval force at Victoria, B.C., which has been financed privately. Admiral Kingsmill is on his way to the coast and this force will be given at once official recognition.

It will be the first company in the new naval reserve.

There is a petition already before the Department for the formation of a company of naval reserves in Toronto, and steps will be taken at once to organise the force. Mr. Aemilius Jarvis is particularly interested in the Toronto company, and predicts easily the formation of a company of 250 men.

The headquarters of the force, of course, will be at Ottawa, but it is proposed to organise three divisions, Atlantic, Great Lakes and Pacific.

The headquarters of the Atlantic division will be Halifax, and will extend along the Atlantic coast and lower St. Lawrence River, as far as Montreal.

The Great Lakes division will likely have its headquarters in Toronto, and will include the Upper St. Lawrence, the Great Lakes, and the territory as far as the Rockies.

The pacific division will include British Columbia and the Pacific Coast, and will have its headquarters at Esquimault.

It is proposed to have three kinds of training, so as to meet the needs of all classes.

Absorbs Skin, Chases Wrinkles— Young Again.

"The shock at beholding myself in the glass after nine long weeks abed nearly caused a relapse," writes Emily Golson in Home Queen. "The faded face, with its lines of illness and ... seemed twenty years older. Now I thought, I could not attend my chum's wedding, eleven days off, to which I had looked hopefully forward.

"She herself came to my rescue. She ... an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at the drugstore, which she bade me spread on like cold cream, washing it off next morning. Applied nightly this apparently absorbed the withered skin so gently I experienced no discomfort. Upon the wedding morn the pallid complexion had entirely given way to one of youthful color and loveliness.

"And there wasn't a wrinkle. This due to a wash lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. The daily face bath had dispersed every line."

CHATHAM PUZZLED AT STRANGE DEATH

Not Known Whether Murder or Accident; Inquest Will Be Held.

Chatham, Ont., May 20.—The body of William Connelly was taken from the water of McGregor's creek this morning. It had been in the water only a few hours as the deceased was noticed about the city last night in a partly intoxicated condition. The point where the body was found was directly under the railway bridge over the creek.

On the left temple there is a bad woundand it is considered possible that Connelly was the victim of foul play. It is also possible he fell from the bridge on a stone underneath the bridge. Some blood was found strengthening this belief. Connelly's parents live in Detroit, where they moved from Chatham ten years ago, but the deceased occasionally returned to Chatham to work at odd jobs. Coroner Charters is in charge of the investigation and an inquest will be held.

WAITERS INCENSED OVER TIPPING BILL

Senator Davis the Recipient of Many Protests From Various Quarters

CANNOT LIVE WITHOUT THE TIPS

Ottawa, May 20.—The waiters in the Dominion are beginning to protest against the anti-tipping bill of Senator Davis, and petitions objecting to the measure are pouring into Ottawa. A petition from the waiters at the Chateau Frontenac against the bill was read in the Senate last night. It said that if tipping be made illegal, waiters would be fortunate if proprietors paid salaries of $75 a month, and upon that a man with a family could not live and dress as a waiter was obliged to dress. It stated that every one of the forty-five waiterns in the Frontenac were opposed to the bill and relief was expressed that 90 per cent. of the waiters of Canada were against it. The petition stated that tipping was now ovtional and should remain so.

Senator Davis said he had some communication on the same subject which he would read at the proper time.

CITY'S BOARD OF WORKS IN REGULAR WEEKLY SESSION

Deal Between Overend Estate and City by Which Narrow Portion of Prince Street Will be Widened to 66 Feet Concluded Last Night--Two Heavy Dump Wagons to be Procured--To Cost Between $122 and $160 Each

The City's Board of Works met in regular monthly session last night, Chairman Ald. Geo. Duncan presiding. There were also present Ald. Stratton, McIntyre, Johnston, Green, Saunders, Anderson, Mayor Buller and City Engineer Parsons.

W. H. Baker petitioned for sidewalks on the new streets he has cut out on Patterson street. This work will be advertised with other sidewalk work in the usual way.

Dumble & Johnston, on behalf of the Overend Estate, offered a strip of land on Prince street, 16 feet in width and 350 feet long, between Aylmer and George street, for $150. This strip is needed by the city to continue Prince street at this point the regulation width of 66 feet. Apart from the purchase price offered, the Estate asks a fixed assessment of $2,000 on their remaining block of land lying between Prince and Princess streets. This fixed assessment to remain in force four years, any portions of the land being sold in the meantime to be assessed in the regular way.

On motion of Ald. Johnston and Anderson, this proposition was accepted, thus securing a clear 66 foot right of way the whole lenth of Prince street.

The Mayor and Ald. Johnston moved, without prejudice to the city's interests, that Mrs. Scott be offered $100 for a 10 foot strip of her property on Maria street. This is to offset Mrs. Scott's claim for damages to this property by reason of the construction of the C.P.R's siding into the Vermont Marble Company's premises. The city will use the strip of land in question for widening the street at this point, erect a fence, and construct a ditch to drain Mrs. Scott's property. the motion carried.

The Board will make their annual tour of inspection on some day soon called by the Chairman and City Engineer.

Carts and Wagons.

The chairman and engineer were authorised to purchase four carts for street maintenance work.

On motion of Ald. Stratton and Green, the chairman and engineer were authorized to purchase two 3000 lbs. dump wagons at a cost of between $122 and $160 each.

Repairs Ordered.

A culvert on Victoria avenue will be put into good shape.

Loose planking below the rails at corner of Park and McDonnel streets, will be attended to.

A bad culvert at Edinburgh and Reid streets will receive the street commissioners attention.

A quantity of loose stones on Rubidge street, north of London, will be removed.

The foregoing needs were introduced by Ald. Johnston.

More Street Watering.

On motion of Ald. McIntyre and Saunders, the City Engineer was instructed to arrange for additional street watering as follows:

Hunter street, from Rogers up the hill to Concession street; on Antrim street, from George to the G.T.R. track; on London street, from Aylmer to the G.T.R. track; Harvey street, to Smith street; Wolfe street to the G.T.R. track.

Dirty George Street.

Ald. Stratton offered that merchants complain of the dirty condition of George street pavement and suggested that they be flushed with water at times.

On motion of Ald. Anderson and Stratton, the Fire, Water and Light Department will be asked to have the firemen turn on the hose on the pavement of the two main business blocks on George street and on Hunter street at six o'clock in the mornings occasionally.

SHAUGHNESSY'S SENATORS GIVE THE PETES A GOOD TROUNCING

The "game" at Riverside Park yesterday was a fine exhibition of ball. The Petes were playing with Ottawa, but the Senators did not see any fun in it and were chuck full of pep all through the game. One real live wire on the Petes line-up was Belting and the way that boy went after the Senators looked good to the fans although the game was lost before he took the rubber from Tracey, who retired in the fourth innings.

The support handed out to Tracey was of a very poor brand and by the time the fourth innings was reached the score stood 8 to 1 in favor of the visitors. It is hoped that these off days will soon be cut out.

Ottawa put up a good game, with our old friend Rogers ready to take any kind of a chance to cross the plate, in fact, the Petes were getting so bad that he even tried to steal home, but Belting happened to be looking and Mr. Rogers was nailed at the plate.

It was also an off day for Umps Evens, and although the players were a little off color, the Umps did not remedy the matter very much. But his decisions on balls and strikes got the fans into a fever, and a lot of nasty things were shot at him.

The score stood 11 to 2 in favor of Ottawa.

SUFFRAGETTES TRY TO BURN OUT KING

Set Fire to Underbrush Around the Camp at Aldershot About Midnight.

Aldershot, Eng., May 20.—A great brush fire, believed by the authorities to have been the work of militant suffragettes, encircled shortly aget midnight, the royal pavilion in Long valley, where King George and Queen Mary are in residence, in the centre of a great army of British troops.

The entire camp was alarmed, and several battalions of infantry and regiments of cavalry turned out to fight the flames.

Water is plentiful in the vicinity, but the swords of the cavalrymen proved a better means of distinguishing the fire, as with them the men cut down and beat out the blazing undergrowth.

Suffragettes have shown great activity in the neighbothood since the King and Queen arrived here, and as their majesties left the Royal Pavilion to-day, two women dashed in front of their carriage waving a banner with the words "Votes for Women" emblazoned upon it.

HON. GEORGE H. PERLEY MAY BE TEMPORARY HIGH COMMISSIONER

Is Leaving for England, and General Belief is That He Will Act Until Permanent Appointment is Made; Mr. Borden Silent on the Matter

Ottawa, May 20.—It is the general belief at Ottawa that Hon. George H. Perley is to be appointed High Commissioner temporarily until a permanent man is named.

Neither Mr. Perley or Mr. Borden would made any statement to-day. Mr. Perley laughed in a non-committal way. "There is no announcement to be made as yet," was all the premier would say.

Mr. Perley leaves next week for Great Britain, and it is the belief that he will act, for the summer at least, as High Commissioner.

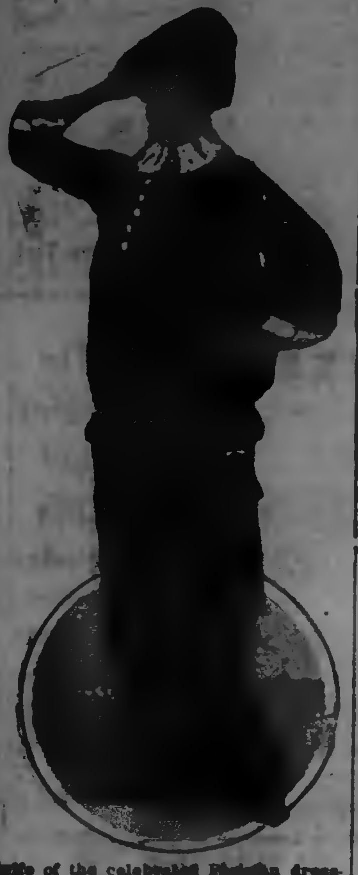
MME. POIRET



Wife of the celebrated Parisian dressmaker who gave a lecture on dress in which she insisted that trousers for women were a certainty of the future. Mme. Poiret wore a plaid skirt of yellow and blue, yellow coat and white hat and yellow Russian boots on the street.

PETS TATTOOED

The Latest Craze Amongst Society Women

The latest craze amongst smart women is to have their pet animals tattooed on their arms, ankles, shoulders or elbows. Mr. South, an English tattooist, tells how he first makes a drawing of the little favorite, which he then transfers to the body of the owner, and afterwards tattoos, with the aid of electricity, into the skin. "There is quite a craze for women to have their pets tattooed on their arm," he said. "I have done this in the case of horses, dogs, cats, birds, and even wild animals, such as lions and tigers. I recently tattooed on a woman's shoulder a photograph of her little pet rabbit. It is no uncommon idea to have a 'lucky' pig tattooed on the arm. Both men and women come to me to have lucky pigs designed for them."

Few people associate mining and sanitation, but in the Oliver mine, in the Lake Superior district, the two go together.

For the convenience of its miners, the Oliver mine established bubbly fountains of the most improved type, and, more than that, concrete and steel reinforcements replace the ordinary timber to prevent a cave in.

SAFE NIGHT FLIGHTS

Germany to Dot Country With Lighthouses For Aviators

The men who go up in the ships as welle as those who go down to the sea in ships may cruise at night, with guiding lights. The German government plans to add to many of its present light houses vertical beams as powerful as those which are thrown horizontally.

It is planned to scatter light houses for aircraft throughout Germany, each being distinguished by differing lights, just as the light houses of the mariners are now identified by their steady and flashing lights at stated intervals.

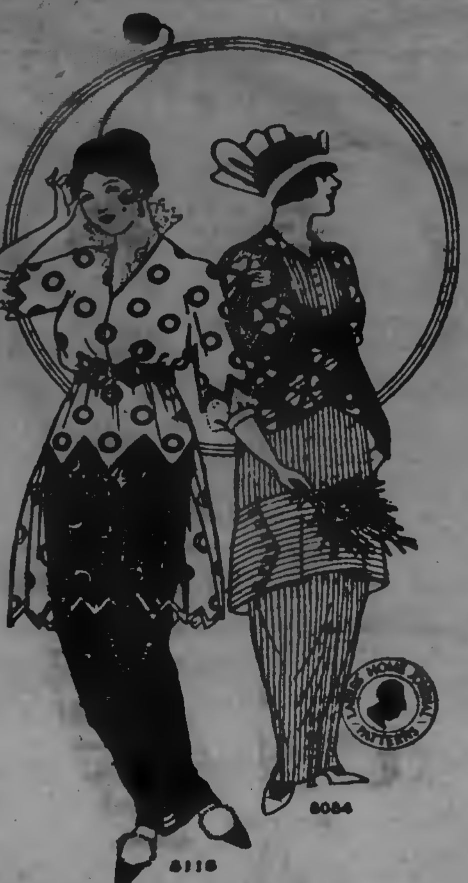
MUNICIPAL FORMS ALWAYS IN STOCK



THE FLARE'S THE THING, WITHOUT A DOUBT

If you would be modish just now, you must literally flare from your hat to your hem: the hem is narrower, however.

Straight lines are seen no more unless it be on the rather severe little tailored suit, and just as like as not the bottom of that coat will flare too.

There are many modifications of the tunic or overskirt: it may be single, double or triple, or it may be a band arranged to give the effect of an overskirt; it may be short or long, one sided or regular, but it must stand out a bit from the figure.

No. 8116 shows a straight foundation skirt of black charmeuse over which is hung a double tunic. The upper tier is of figured Chinese crepe and the lower one of chiffon.

Charmeuse averages in price $1.50 per yard; chiffon may be purchased for about the same. This frock would be quite as attractive and a bit more practical, if made up in taffetas, which is wide and may be purchased from $1.25 up.

In size 36, this dress requires 6½ yards of 36 inch material.

No. 8084 shows the flare brought about by a trimming band. The skirt is of pin striped serge and the blouse is of flowered taffetas; a wide draped sash and a smart vest effect, render the frock distinctive.

To copy this costume in size 36, it requires 4¾ yards of 36 inch material.

No. 8116—sizes 34 to 42.

No. 8084—sizes 34 to 42.

Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

CANADIAN DON'TS

Useful Hints to Intending Emigrants From England

Some useful hints to those contemplating investments or settlement in Canada were given by Hon. W. E. Scott, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for British Columbia, in an address in London:

"Do not," he said, "put money into anything without careful investigation of its merits."

"Do not expect 100 per cent. profit in a short time without risks."

"Do not buy agricultural lands without first seeing them and satisfying yourself that they are as represented. If you want to buy land and cannot inspect it for yourself, employ a competent judge to report as to its capabilities and value."

"Do not expect to get the best results from farming and fruit growing if you have no knowledge of this business."

"Do not believe all the statements you hear as to profits. There are good profits to be made, but there have been a number of statements circulated which are not justifiable."

"Do not put all your money into land. Enough should be retained to provide for stocking, implements, and living expenses until the returns begin to come in."

Mr. Scott added some "don'ts" for parents who are thinking of sending their sons overseas:

"Do not send your boy out just because you do not know what to do with him at home," he said. "Satisfy yourself that he has a natural liking for outdoor life and is physically adapted for it."

"Do not send him out with plenty of money, knowing that he has only to apply for more to get it. Throw him on his own resources."

"Do not pay a premium. If the boy has anything in him at all he is worth his board."

"Do not send a boy to an agricultural college in this country. Conditions of farming here and in Canada are altogether different."

"Dirty Bertie" is the latest addition to Royal nicknames. It has been bestowed upon Prince Albert by his fellow-middies on board the "Collingwood" because of his fondness for the engine room. It has been decided however, that he shall enter Trinity College, Cambridge, this autumn as an undergraduate. In Court circles it is an open secret that he looks upon this decision with great disfavor; his whole desire is to be a sailor Prince, like his father before him.

HOW TO BRING DOWN THE COST OF LIVING

In a book just issued, the problem of reducing the cost of living to families of small incomes, is discussed in a novel and very intelligent way, and the author proposes a solution at once practical and helpful. His scheme is based on careful study of conditions in the United States and in Europe, and he holds, can be used with good results in any city, large or small. In brief, he suggests that the greatest possible freedom to use the city streets and open spaces should be permitted to open-air traders. These, he insists, are what citizens of small incomes need in order to be delivered from the burden of intolerably high prices. His call is for: (1.) Abundant street vending, free to all comers, limited in range only by necessary health laws and any higher social exigencies of traffic. (2.) Open air markets to be held for a few hours semi-weekly or tri-weekly, in streets or park or other public space, in any quarter where bodies of consumers may demand them; free to all vendors of foodstuffs or manufactured articles of household or personal use. (3.) Existing public markets to be used to the fullest extent through a modern methods, auctioning, licensing the market commission man selling by sample, ordering from producers for direct delivery and encouraging the attendance of local producers.

INNISFREE

I will arise and go now, and go to
Innisfree,
And a small cabin build there, of clay and wattles made;
Nine bean-rows will I have there, a hive for the honey bee,
And live alone in the bee-loud glade.

And I shall have some peace there,
for peace comes dropping slow,
Dropping from the veils of the morning
to where the cricket sings;
There midnight's all a glimmer, and noon a purple glow,
And evening full of the linnets'
wings.

I will rise and go now, for always night and day
I hear lake water lapping with low sounds by the shore;
While I stand in the roadway, or on the pavements grey,
I hear it in the deep heart's core.

An Expert Says Men Quit at Thirty-five

Thirty-five, according to experts, is the age when most men who have been losing their grip upon life give up the struggle and become derelicts. Charles B. Barnes, special investigator for a number of charitable institutions, when asked for his opinion on this subject said:

"Yes, 35 seems to be the deciding age for men of the class with whom I am dealing. Up to that age these men try to keep up a good appearance, but at 35 they commence to sag.

"There are no born derelicts, but more than half of the homeless men are naturally feeble minded. This, together with the influences which have been at work throughout their early life, has made them what they are. At 35 life becomes a serious proposition to them. Their natural disabilities and many failures begin to crush them. Then comes the final collapse—the mental and moral breakdown."

PROPHECY FULFILLED

Preparing to Cultivate the Garden of Eden

Wherever the original Garden of Eden was situated the traditional first residence of man on earth is what is now the south-eastern part of Turkey in Asia in the region around the Euphrates and Tigris rivers—a land once studded with many great cities, later covered with a continuous forest of verdure, but for centuries an uninhabitable desert of salt marshes, bare plains and sand drifts. Such transformation has the Garden seen, where, according to the author of Genesis, "The Lord God made to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food." And now despatches report still another change, whereby Eden's original fertility is to be restored through a vast irrigation system that will cost $115,000,000 and reclaim 3,000,000 acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Part of the system has already been completed.

Isaiah's prediction that "the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose" is about to come true, for the yield of wheat and cotton along the Euphrates and the Tigris is expected to return rich dividends on the cost of irrigation.

Prince as Mentor

On one occasion the present Prince of Wales and Prince Albert stayed in a nobleman's house in charge of their tutor. The princes were then quite small boys. They were given porridge at breakfast, and when the footman put the porridge—which was served in silver bowls—before Prince Albert, his Royal Highness said, "No, thank you!" The man just removing the bowl when the Prince of Wales, who was sitting opposite his brother, said: "Don't be an ass, Albert! Eat that porridge; it's good for you!" And his brother obeyed him.

Shared Her Husband's Tastes and Was Devoted Nurse

The widow of Robert Louis Stevenson, the great writer of fiction, died not long ago of apoplexy at her home in California, where she had resided since Mr. Stevenson's death in Samoa nearly twenty years ago. Her maiden name was Van de Grift, and her first husband, from whom she was divorced in 1879, was a Mr. Osborne. She became the wife of Mr. Stevenson the following year, and was during the rest of his life "a perfect companion, taking part keenly and critically in his work, sharing all his gipsy tastes and love of primitive and natural modes of life, and being, in spite of her own precarious health, the most devoted and efficient of nurses. Her son and daughter both co-operated with Stevenson in his literary labors.

Can Latin Come Back?

This is cheering intelligence that has come to friends of the old learning within the last few days. Harvard sends out word that her students are resorting in larger numbers to the classical studies, and now from Princeton comes some convincing statistical evidence that even in the public high schools of the United States the study of Latin is steadily gaining ground. Taking these schools as a whole, the Princeton report shows that more school instruction in Latin is given to-day than in mathematics or science or modern languages. In view of the popular idea that the so-termed 'dead languages' have been crowded off our school and college programmes by the rapid march of utilitarian studies, this showing is remarkable. It proves once more the power of that ancient tongue upon which the literature of civilization has so heavily depended for nearly two thousand years.

Throughout these generations Latin has been the common heritage of scholarship amongst all races of men. No modern language approaches it in symmetry or grace. None affords to young minds the same opportunity for literary discipline. Even to-day it remains the most nearly universal medium of thought for educated men, the most catholic among the languages. In education, as in every other branch of human activity, the links that bind us to the past have been rapidly giving way; but the injunction to hold fast to that which has proved its worth is one which we ought not to disregard. So long as men do not live by bread alone there will be both room and need for the cultivation of young intellects along lines which do not lead straight to a place on somebody's pay-roll. A reaction against scholastic materialism is about due in this country, and the present swing of the pendulum in our educational institutions suggests that it is on the way.

Lame Back Strengthened, Stiffness Taken Right Out

Was Relieved in An Hour, and Cured in a Night

Lame back? Quite unnecessary. All you have to do is to rub on Nerviline. It's simply a wonder for backache—relieves after one rubbing. "Nothing possibly could cure an aching back faster than Nerviline" writes Mrs. Arthur Kobar, of Lower Chelsea, N.S., "I caught cold and was so prostrated with pain I could not bend over. We always have Nerviline at home, and I had the painful region rubbed thoroughly with this grand liniment. At once the pain departed. The lameness was rapidly reduced and in an hour I was able to be about my housework. I was rubbed again just before retiring and awoke as usual in the morning without a sign of my back trouble."

There is no sort of muscular pain that Nerviline won't cure quickly. Thousands swear by it for Rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, and lumbago. It sinks to the core of the pain—right through muscle, tissue and nerve—it penetrates where no oily, greasy liniment can go, and invariably cures quickly. If you have an ache or a pain anywhere—use Nerviline—it will cure you. Family size bottle, very large 50c.; trial size 25c at all dealers.

BEDS OF IRON ORE

Ungava Bay Islands Are Believed to Have Great Wealth

Two islands in Ungava Bay are said to contain about 465,000,000 tons of iron ore. The manager of a company there was the pioneer in that country, going north in 1907. He made several expeditions to explore the country, and located minerals. A number of claims have been staked, and from $50,000 to $60,000 expended on work on Clarke, Armstrong and Curran Islands. The three islands, which form part of the Nastaooka group on the eastern side of the Hudson Bay, are part of the Dominion lands. The eastern mainland, however, which was Ungava, is now part of the Province of Quebec. The islands are about five miles from the mainland. Clarke Island, which is the largest of the three held by the company, measures about 2,980 acres; Armstrong Island, farther north, measures about 500 acres, and Curran Island, north of that, measures 800 acres. All the ore is of the finest quality. The beds vary from 7 to 15 feet in thickness. It is thought that the ore will be smelted on the islands. An expedition will leave Montreal probably in April.

ENVELOPE SEALER

Handy Device Which Facilitates the Handling of the Office Mail

In the days not so long ago, the salivary secretions of the office boy were entirely sufficient for the purpose of moistening all the letters which had been written during the day and which were entrusted to him at the end of the day to mail. Such is not the case to-day, when the facilities for turning out letters and for doing business by mail are so great as to make the sealing and stamping of mail matter a serious problem.

The device shown herewith will apply just the right amount of moisture to the gummed flap of the envelope, and the inventor has also made provision that when once charged with water the supply will last a considerable time and not dry out by evaporation.

MOISTENS THE ENVELOPE FLAP.

It consists of a moisture-proof box with a hinged lid, the latter having a spring, the action of which is to hold the lid open. Under the lid is one moistening pad, which comes in contact with the envelope flap and this is maintained at the proper degree of moisture by automatically coming in contact with an auxiliary moistener. The envelope is placed on the lid with the flap overhanging, and as the lid is pressed down the water is applied. As the envelope is removed the parts are pressed together and the sealing effected. The moisture-proof qualities of the box prevent the evaporation of the water, which, when not in use is simply closed.

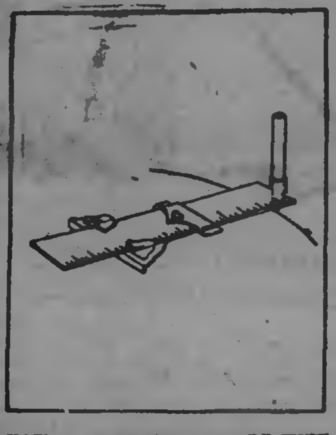
SQUARE MAKES CIRCLE

Seemingly Impossible Performance Accomplished by a New Tool

The seemingly impossible achievement of making a circle by means of a square is accomplished by a new device which has been lately patented. A view of this implement is given herewith and anyone who may be the least bit familiar with the construction and use of a T-square will see at once how it is done and also the advantages of the improvement.



HOW A CIRCLE MAY BE MADE WITH A SQUARE.

A flat, graduated rule has a socket at one end, designed to hold a point such as a piece of lead or lead pencil, and the length of the rule is traversed by a metal slide, designed to be secured at any point and adapted to perform the ordinary functions of a square. The slide is supplied with a projecting point which is used in making the circle in conjunction with the lead or pencil point, as shown in the illustration.

NORTH HONAN MISSIONS

Very Few Lepers Now, Says Mrs. McClure

Mrs. McClure, who has been for 25 years engaged in mission work in North Honan under the Presbyterian board, said that owing to the coldness of the climate, there were very few lepers in North Honan, and during her whole 25 years there had only seen two lepers. But in the southern part of Canton there are lepers by the thousands and one is in the midst of them with a spirit of dread. There are beggars there in large numbers, lepers, insane and others, thronging the streets and market places. In Canton there is a leper settlement and children's home under the American Presbyterian Mission and is aided by the Mission to Lepers.

What "Horsepower" Means

To many people, the engineering term "horsepower" does not convey any very definite idea. When, for example, it is said that the immense Curtis steam turbine which drives an electric generator in the Waterside station, New York, develops 30,000 horsepower the meaning is very vague and incomprehensible. Imagine this term reduced to man's power, and almost everyone can grasp its full meaning. It takes 12 men to equal 1 h.p.; then this mammoth turbine engine develops twelve times 30,000, or the whole working energy of 360,000 men. If these men worked in eight-hour shifts each day, it would require the services of 1,080,000 men every twenty-four hours to produce the working energy of this single turbine unit.

OSTRICHES THAT WALTZ

Curious Sights on the Plains of South Africa

One of the many strange sights on the plains of Southern Africa is a party of waltzing ostriches. When there are a number of them they will start off in the morning, and after running a few hundred yards will stop and with raised wings whirl rapidly round till they are stupefied or perhaps break a leg. The males pose also before fighting, and to make their court. They kneel on their ankles, opening their wings and balancing themselves alternately forward and backward or to one side or the other, while the neck is stretched on a level with the back and the head strikes the sides, now on the right, now on the left, while the feathers are bristling.

The birds appear at this time so absorbed in their occupation as to forget all that is going on about them, and can be approached and caught. The male alone utters a cry, which sounds much like an effort to speak with the mouth shut tight.

Filmy Tulle Favored for Summer Gowns

By Madge Marvel.

SUMMER evening wear perplexes the mind of the woman who is planning her wardrobe with the idea of spending the next three months at some vacation resort either in the mountains or by the sea. At either place there is sure to be need for light semi-dress frocks, that need not be elaborate but should be a bit different from the daytime dresses, for there is an increasing tendency to "dress for dinner" in even unpretentious resorts and there is always some evening gaiety, such as bridge or dancing which creates a demand for informal evening gowns.

Dancing shortens the life of a gown and the woman who contrives to combine becomingness and daintiness in her semi-dress attire can reap the reward of having more changes of costume.

Tulle the Favorite.

Unless one has liberal dress allowance it is foolish to have elaborate or expensive evening gowns for the summer except for the few very formal entertainments which are included in the program of the average woman.

The exclusive shops talk tulle whenever one asks for evening gowns. No one will deny the charm of tulle and it is the fabric of choice by the fashionables, but it is as perishable as it is lovely. Perhaps that accounts for its popularity, for who would want it if it were like plain cotton? But for wear, the gossamer-web plucked from the grass is hardly more transitory.

The tulle gown is an extravagance for the woman of limited income.

But there are so many tulle accessories that even those who have to figure closely to keep within monetary bounds can have the delight of the note of tulle in their costumes.

Tulle butterflies are worn on the backs of evening bodices with fascinating effect, a half-dozen of them in the ballroom giving a delightful charm to the scene.

The [illegible] is tied in a butterfly bow with the upper edge of the loops caught to the shoulders and the lower loops reaching below the waist and the centre pulled out in true butterfly shape.

Sometimes two shades are combined, as pale pink and yellow or pale green and rose, one layer over the other.

The butterfly motif still appears on many of the summer frocks, notwithstanding the length of time it has been used. One of the most attractive tulle gowns made for a young matron is in black, with the butterfly at the back of the waist in gold lace.

Sashes and Scarfs.

Tulle bretelles on gowns of taffeta or crepe or lace are much used and are edged in narrow ruching of the same material, which gives them a "body" that keeps them in place.

For those who like the neck band of black, which is becoming to all women with slender throats and white skin, tulle with rhinestone slides is used and adds a certain note of distinction to light gowns.

Sashes of tulle on summer dresses are charming and afford the opportunity for the introduction of some bright bit of color. On a gown of white taffeta, with the much draped skirt in bustle effect, there was a tulle sash of bright green drawn through a jade and gold buckle.

A frock of brown ninon combined with deep cream lace had a sash of burnt orange tulle.

There is a fascinating scarf offered as one of the novelties of the season which will appeal to all women. It can be made by one who is skilled in sewing and as a gift is delightful.

It is of chiffon, in any chosen shade, and combines the usefulness of a scarf with that of a theatre hood. The portion that goes about the shoulders is doubled and shaped somewhat on the order of a fichu and edged with tiny ruffles. Where this ruffled portion ends there are chiffon rosettes so arranged that they will slide on the scarf and may be adjusted. From them the ends of the scarf fall free and full to any desired length. When it is worn as a hood the ruffled portion will be found just long enough to fit over the head with the ruffles framing the face, the rosettes will come under the chin, and the ends may be arranged to suit the wearer. Could anything be more appealing for the woman who motors?

Sleeves in the formal evening gown are either of distinct importance or they are nil. While the sleeveless frock is much worn it does call for a perfection of arm and shoulder that not all women possess. The floating sleeve, which is like the old "angel" sleeve we used to wear, is always becoming and creates another use for tulle.

IS YOUR MIND IN PERFECT WORKING ORDER?

Favorite Poses of Georgie Remy.

"Concentration the Secret of Power," Says Well Known Actress.

By ELEANOR AMES

"HER Mind in Order" is the text Georgie Remy offers for the working out of a practical human drama in which all women can have a leading role.

To the best knowledge and belief of Miss Remy, based upon her experience as a busy, ambitious and wide-awake woman, with associates among society, professional and business women, the average member of her sex suffers from a disordered mind.

Not that she would have it understood that she considers the average woman crazy—not for a minute, unless, as she laughingly admits, "she may be crazy like a fox," but she thinks she needs to set her mind in order.

"The average woman's mind is so full of non-essentials that there is an overcrowding and confusion, and a mental cleaning out, elimination of the useless and cataloguing of the useful, would be a grand good plan for most of us to follow," said Miss Remy to me recently.

"We suffer from a sense of disorder which comes from trying to house too much in a small space.

"We scatter our mind over too much territory. We have yet to learn the true and best application of concentration.

"We have too many criss-cross mental paths.

"When we have our mind in order, we shall begin to accomplish more and better work. If you will look into the lives of the most successful women you will find that they are comparatively simple. They have arranged the routine of their existence according to some system which gives them a chance to drive the machinery of their brains with least loss of energy. There is no danger of flying off at a tangent when the necessity comes for 'speeding up.' The secret is that they have learned to keep their minds in orderly condition.

"You know the nervous confusion which comes from dwelling in the midst of a clutter of ill-assorted, useless and disarranged furniture? You know the waste of time that results from hunting through a muddled desk for a missing address or an important and mislaid paper? And we all have suffered the annoyance and delay of seeking some needed personal possession in littered and topsy-turvy bureaus. Yet we have our minds full of a medley of thoughts and facts, useful and important, trivial and irritating, which keep us in a mental whirlwind much of the time. Then we wonder why we don't accomplish more and why we get so tired 'doing nothing.'

"I know what I am talking about, for I have been through it all and have had to solve the problem of setting my own mind in order.

"I began by purposely forgetting everything which was light or unessential, and adding the mental energy thus saved to remembering some other things which were of distinct importance and help to me.

"Don't imagine it was easy. It is just as hard to break mental habits as it is habits of the body. And every little while I had to pull myself up short when I found my mind running wild.

"But it has been worth the effort. I am seldom tired, and I never did half as much or as good work under the old mental regime.

"The mind astray and the mind in a muddle are both to be deplored.

"Set your mind in order and know the joy of accomplishment without weariness. Dwelling upon what is past and gone or on errors that can't be helped is all part of the mental confusion. Also it saps our mental strength. Do with all your mind the work of the day. Then turn to the work of tomorrow. Forget the mistakes of yesterday except as they serve to make repetition less probable.

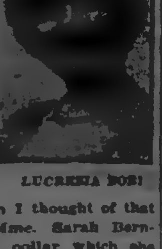
"There is a homely old saying about making one's head save one's heels. It is full of good sense. There might be another saying about making one's head save itself. It would have just as much sense and be more helpful, for only the very stupid will purposely waste steps. But many of us waste mind energy by taking mental journeys around 'Robin Hood's barn' when we have no need to."

How to Keep the Neck Beautiful

By LUCREZIA BORI

Famous Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York.

Special arrangements have been made with Senorita Lucrezia Bori, the famous prima donna soprano, who has created a wonderful impression in Europe and New York on account of her remarkable beauty and artistic attainment, to write for this paper a series of articles on beauty. There is probably no authority her equal in giving the newest and most approved methods of attaining and preserving "the divine right of woman."



LUCREZIA BORI

SPEAKING of beauty made me think of white necks and necks made me think of collars, and collars made me think of fashion and what slaves we are to her vagaries and how we wear low collars because they are the style when high collars would be so much more becoming. Then I thought of that wonderful woman, Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, and the high collar which she always has worn through all the changes of fashions.

And what a splendid example she is to every other woman in the world. For the "divine Sarah" has always made the styles her own. Do you recall the high collar? She has never laid it aside because fashion has dictated that high collars were not at all the proper thing.

And she is probably a very wise woman in her loyalty to it. To begin, it has always made her individual. Besides, she has a long and thin neck. Such necks never are alluring in the low collar—though they may be very charming and graceful in the decollete costume.

Again, whatever of youth there is in the great woman's work and in her spirit the flesh has begun in some degree to show the passing of years.

The neck is the first victim of what is generally known as age.

So the collar high up under the ears and fitted close with usually a ruche at the top.

Of course, it would be quite impossible for some of us, but the idea I want to convey is that we should all be fashionable to the proper limit of becomingness—and no further.

Also I want to talk about necks and throats.

The summer is almost here, and the summer frocks have a cool brevity of collar. That will display the charm of rounded, snowy throats, and likewise the defects of those that are not so attractive.

To begin with, it is easier to keep the neck and throat beautiful than to make it so.

The tight, high, thick collar is ruinous to the skin of the throat unless constant care is taken to keep it nourished and cleansed.

The high collar of lace, or some thin material, if it is not worn too tight, is not harmful. And whatever the material of the collar, the lining which comes next the skin should be of soft fabric and white.

Soap and water is the first requisite of neck culture. After scrubbing with a brush and pure soap and hot water, use cold water or rub with a piece of ice held in a piece of cheesecloth. This strengthens the muscles and tones the skin.

Cold cream and skin food will help greatly in repairing the ravages of time or neglect. In using either forget the word massage and pat the oils into the skin, using the slightest bit of sweep in the stroke backwards from the chin. Remove all surplus cream with absorbent cotton, and you will find there is more grime in the skin than you would like to acknowledge.

For the flabby throat there must be some astringent treatment. Here is a simple and harmless lotion of this nature:

Six ounces of rose water.
Two ounces of elderflower water.
Half an ounce tincture of benzoin.
Ten grains of tannic acid.

Another excellent astringent is made of a mixture of alcohol, white iodi and spirits of camphor, and your druggist will be able to give you the correct proportions and to mix it for you.

Exercise the throat unless you want it to become atrophied.

If there is the annoyance of a double chin to deal with, it can be remedied by stretching the chin forward as far as possible and then backward 10 times night and morning. Bend the head slowly forward till the chin almost rests on the chest, and then with the same slow motion bring it to the erect position. Rest and breathe deeply, and then bend it backward. Rest and then incline the head first to one side and then to the other. Breathing and whistling will help fill out the hollows at the base of the throat. Whistling and blowing also plumps out hollow cheeks.

If the throat is white and free from wrinkles and round the collarless neck is delightful.

If your face shows premature wrinkles try this lotion:

Sixty grains of powdered alum.
An ounce and a half of thick almond milk.
Six ounces of rosewater.

You can buy the milk of almonds as easily as to make it. Dissolve the alum in the rosewater. Pour the mixture into the almond milk, meanwhile stirring all the time, till it is well assimilated.

Useful Hints for the Housewife

By Ann Marie Lloyd

THE small afternoon tea, preceded by bridge or music or some informal program, is still the most popular means of entertaining, especially where there is somewhat limited room in the house. The menu for such affairs is simple and may be served by the maid while the hostess prepares the tea at a daintily arranged tea-table or the dining room may be the scene of the service, everything being placed on the attractively arranged table and passed by the maid, while the hostess and one of her close friends preside, one at each end of the table, and serve the tea or coffee or whatever is chosen for beverage.

But for the woman who has but one maid and that a maid-of-all-work, or who does her own work, the tea wagon is a positive joy. And not only for some social entertainment but for everyday use it proves one of her greatest helps. These little wagons come in a variety of styles and the simpler ones are not expensive. The entire meal may be placed on the glass covered top and wheeled into the dining room, saving the endless steps back and forth between stove and table that weary the already tired worker. And when the table is to be cleared, one trip of the wagon does the work of a dozen ordinary journeys.

To get back to the subject of the afternoon tea, the first requisite of success in such entertainment is that the china shall be of neat design, the silver shining, the linen fine and immaculate and the viands just as dainty and attractive as they are edible.

The tea also must be of the best quality and freshly brewed, neither too weak nor too strong and of that delicious fragrance which means so much to the tea drinker.

It should be remembered by the hostess that "afternoon tea" is the most informal of functions and should not be treated with elaboration. The moment one begins to hedge it about with ceremony it becomes a formal afternoon reception.

The term "light refreshments" exactly expresses what should be served at a tea. The English custom of serving toasted muffins and some marmalade with tea is being widely copied in America.

There are dozens of kinds of dainty and delicious sandwiches that are easily prepared at home.

Whole wheat bread should be used as well as white bread, for the combination of the sandwiches adds to the appearance of the table.

Also two or three fancy cutters are useful at many times and are not expensive to purchase.

The butter for sandwiches should be creamed before it is spread. Also the spreading should be done on the loaf before the slice is cut.

The crusts should always be trimmed and the sandwiches should be kept moist till they are served.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

History Proves Propriety of Modern Bathing Dress

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

AT the thought of seashore, sunshine and the far-from sad sea waves, splashes of memory come to mind of Oliver Goldsmith's "Elegy on the Death of a Mad Dog." You may recall the verse:

"A kind and gentle heart he had
To comfort friends and foes:
The naked everyday he clad
When he put on his clothes."

Thomas Carlyle, who wrote "Sartor Resartus," the great Tailor Retailed, was more interested in the unclad, human form than in bathing costumes.

Lives the man, he begs, that can figure a naked Duke of Windlestraw addressing a naked House of Lords? The Old Testament, too, in Genesis, second chapter, 25th verse, explains why Adam and Eve, once they had partaken of the forbidden fruit of the Tree of Life, were naked and not ashamed.

The human form divine, whether in the contour of an Apollo Belvedere or a Venus de Milo, is the beauteous mark which God has set on human health and virtue.

All but naked tramps wherever they are in summer or winter, biding the pelting pebbles of pinching poverty or the wealth of the noonday sun, need have little fear of divine or earthly punishment. The badge of stamina is in their nude flesh and vibrating muscles. Theirs is the glory and the inheritance of the earth.

The civilized fiction to shift and bedeck and bedrape is hypocritical, artificial and sinful. The modest habit of the shy and ashamed heathen in the forest is the frank, open, unsuggestive nudity of purity and virtue.

When heaven and fools combined o'er all prevail,
When justice halts, and right begins to fail,
E'en then the boldest start from public sneers,
Afraid of shame-unknown to other fears,
More darkly sin, by satire kept in awe,
And shrink from ridicule, though not from law.

There should be no sin or shame in the nobility of the human figure. The mad mullahs of swooping morality who howl down the bathing costumes along the seashore, the fine statuary and art of the great human creators, pervert religion and ethics. These militants convert clothing into cloaks of hypocrisy and deceit.

What shame forbids you to speak, virtue and honesty bid you do. In shame and mock modesty there is no comfort.

I will be brief, nor have I heart to dwell,
On crimes they almost share who blush too well.

Answers to Health Questions

J. H. E., Seymour, Ind.—I have sugar diabetes. Am 40. Sugar foods make it show after eating. Bread and potatoes do not. Is there any permanent cure for it?

Children and young people are killed by diabetes. Those above 30 need only exert sane care and they may live to the new standard of five score and ten.

As long as you are free of sugar signs when you partake sparingly of starches and sweets there is no need to punish yourself too severely.

Nowadays we allow a slightly more liberal diet than we did up to five years ago. There is no way of getting rid of it altogether.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

Dear Miss Laurie:

I am a young girl of 18 and have been going with a young man of my own age for about a year and a half. We went to school together and have always been good friends. He has a very peculiar disposition, and sometimes, when he meets me on the street, he speaks and sometimes he does not.

About two weeks ago we had a misunderstanding, and I treated him rather cool. He left and has not been back since. I saw him the other evening, and he spoke to me. I answered him and walked on. Yesterday he met my chum and talked as if he would like to go with me again.

Please tell me what to do.

ANXIOUS.

WELL, Anxious, I don't think I'd be anxious about that young man for very long. He's "peculiar," is he, and proud of it very likely. Farewell to peculiar people, as far as I'm concerned, thank you. If I were a girl I should not want to marry a "peculiar" man. I've seen too many "peculiar persons" in jail and in insane asylums to have much interest in them myself.

Sometimes he speaks and sometimes he does not when you meet him on the street?

Well, he'd never have a chance to speak to me after the first "sometimes" when he looked straight at me and didn't even nod. Where in the world was the man brought up?

He's the spoiled son of some indulgent mother I'll warrant.

And the spoiled son makes the worst husband in the world. What on earth do you want to have anything to do with the rude, ill-bred, selfish, conceited creature for?

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care this office.

:: Historical Facts About Words ::

Equivocation, a word now applied to any evasion, was once understood to mean the calling of diverse things by the same name.

Peck at first meant a basket or receptacle for grain or other substances. The expression at first had no reference to size.

Starve was once to die any manner of death. Wycliffe's sermons tell how "Christ starved on the cross for the redemption of men."

Tariff was the name of the Moorish chieftain, Abou al Tarifa, who had a fortress near the Straits of Gibraltar, and levied toll on ships and merchandise passing through.

Corpse once meant a body, whether living or dead. Many old writs are extant in which the sheriff or his deputy is commanded to bring the corpse of such a man into court.

Saturnine is an astrological term. It was once used to describe the character of an individual born under the influence of the planet Saturn, a malevolent deity.

To prose once signified to write in prose rather than in verse, and a proser was one who preferred to clothe his ideas in prosaic rather than in metrical form.

A sycophant was once a person who watched the frontiers of Attica to see that no figs were brought in or carried out without the payment of the proper duty.

Prejudice was originally nothing more than a judgment formed beforehand, the character of such judgments being best indicated by the present meaning of the word.

A saunterer is believed by some etymologists to have originally signified a man without lands, such a person naturally wandering to and fro in search of employment.

The Blackbird

HE sang to them all the summer
In his cage on the whitewashed wall;
The noonday sun beat on it,
He had no shelter at all.
He must have longed for the meadows
And woodlands green and dim,
But the joys of flight and freedom
Were never again for him.

He sang to them all the summer,
Sang all the songs he knew;
The air was blithe with their cadence,
Perhaps they cheered him, too.
Penned in his wicker prison,
He could only sit and sing
Till the long day waned and twilight
Brought sleep under folded wing.

'Twas a busy time in autumn
From dawn till the late sundown—
There were jaunts among country neighbors,
A fair in the market town,
And so much fruit to gather,
Such work for the village feast,
They even forgot to notice
When that sweet singing ceased.

The days of yearly harvest,
The merriest time of all,
But none took thought for the blackbird
In his cage on the whitewashed wall.
Bountiful fare for many,
But he had not been fed—
Starved in the house of plenty,
The poor little guest lay dead.

How People Feel
When They Have
Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ¼ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4830, or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

In Nature's Kitchen

The Maoris of northern New Zealand, while more fond of cooked food than other of the natives, are not obliged to bother with fires, for they build their huts on the edge of geysers, and cook in nature's kitchen.

A traveler, describing the ways of these primitive people, says that the huts of the Maoris, to the number of a couple of hundred, will be scattered around a boiling pond. In this the women will put their water kettles to boil, or hang wide-meshed flax bags, filled with potatoes and wait until they they are cooked.

True, the potatoes cooked in their skins taste a little of sulphur, but that is the right flavor for a Maori palate—the haut goat for the brown gourmet.

For the cooking of meats the fumaroles, or holes through which steam escapes from the ground, are used. A box with a wooden grating for a bottom is placed on the ground over the hole. In this the Maori woman places the meat, well covered with tin or iron pots. An old sugar bag is then spread over the box, and the crude apparatus is left until the imprisoned steam has completely cooked the joint.

FIANCE'S NAME ON STOCKINGS

This freak of fashion reached this country from London via the vaudeville stage. The fad is for young women to have the name of their fiance or husband done in bright colored embroidery on their white silk stockings. Louis Josephine was one of the first to try to popularize the innovation.

Two sections of the Trent canal system between Lake Simcoe and Georgian Bay are already under construction and during the present summer work will be pushed forward upon these rapidly. It is anticipated that about 900 men will be engaged upon this work during the present summer, and during the following year this number will be greatly increased in order, if possible, to have the work completed some time in 1906.

Peterborough Cheese Board.

The first meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held yesterday morning in the Bank of Montreal Chambers. There were five buyers, Messrs. Gillespie, Watkins, Johnston, Thompson and Morton. The amount boarded was 575 as compared with 930 last year. The reason given is the fact that the profit is very small, and it pays the factory better to make butter. Some have made nothing but butter since opening.

Prices reached 11½ cents.

Who Knows This Man ?

The local police have received word from the chief of police of Montreal to be on the lookout for a desperado bearing the following description, who is wanted for highway robbery and attempted murder: "Man about 5 feet 6 to 8 inches in height, weight about 160 pounds, age 20 to 23 years, clean shaven, heavy fair hair; Persian or French Canadian, speaks good English with a slightly French accent; dressed in a yellowish brown suit, black laced boots, pretty much worn. Local Man Makes Good.

Our readers will remember that a recent issue of the Times gave a report of a factory started, with the trade name of the "Canada Turbine Co." at Toronto, by Mr. P. H. F. Spies of 132 Park street. Yesterday a deal was put through in Toronto whereby four Toronto capitalists take over Mr. Spies factory and have organized a company with a chartered capital of $250,000 to handle Mr. Spies patents and purchased patents. Mr. Spies will be a shareholder and manager. The new company has purchased a number of patents controlled by Mr. Spies including the latter's automatic starter.

Peterborough Judgment Quashed.

Toronto Empire: Mr. Justice Hodgins, at Osgoode Hall yesterday, made an order for the quashing of the conviction of Charles Fitzgerald, of Peterborough, recently fined $100 and costs by the Police Magistrate of that city for having supplied liquor to a minor. The Attorney-General's Department consented to the quashing of the conviction, as there was some doubt in the case. The judge's order provides for the refund of the money paid by Fitzgerald and protects the magistrate from a civil action for damages.

The case was tried by a Norwood Magistrate at Norwood.

KELLY-SPRINGFIELD TIRES

PRICE !

I know no joy or pleasure,
My life is full of pain,
No sooner do I pump my tires
Than flat they go again.
My fabric's cracked to pieces,
The tread is worn to naught,
I haven't gone a hundred miles,
With these punk tires I've bought.
A glib young man approached me
And talked to me of price.
The money which he said I'd save,
Has gone like last year's ice.
If cheapness was their virtue,
Then prate it not to me,
I'll pay the price for KELLY'S
And from trouble I'll be free.

DISGUSTING SLUMS OF DUBLIN PRODTCT OF NATIONALIST RULE

Ulstermen Have Cause to Fear Extension of Such Government Corporators Lack Business Ability

Dublin, Ireland, May 21.—It was a member of the Irish aristocracy who first called this city "dear, dirty Dublin." Certainly to the casual visitor the place possesses considerable charm. The main thoroughfares, squares and parks have an engaging spaciousness. Such noble buildings as the old Parliament House, Trinity College, National Museum, Customs House, General Post Office, and the two Cathedrals lend dignity to the streets, while such monuments as those of Nelson, Wellington, Parnell, O'Connell, Grattan, Burke, and Oliver Goldsmith, all worthy of a capital city. But, as a local police official said to me: "Dublin is a shell of respectability." Get behind the fine public edifices and business blocks, which flank Grafton street, Grenville street and other main highways, and one is shortly in the midst of probably the most hideous slums of the world. The misery existing in these quarters had much to do with the labor uprising of a few months ago, under the leadership of the picturesque "Jim Larkin." For decades the municipal administration has been in the hands of the Nationalists, and this fact is naturally employed as an argument against turning the whole country over to that party.

Co-Operation to Blame.

An official on the civic pay roll said to me: "Sure it would be a crime at all to cut Ireland off from the richest country in the world. How would the country be run then? The Nationalists would make a pretty mess of it. Look at Dublin under their rule. Look at our slums and at our local rates—eleven shillings in the pound. The corporation is to blame. Bad management and high taxes long since checked private enterprise in the way of house building, and consequently we have ten and eleven families living in one house never intended for tenement purposes. The conditions are unspeakable, and in the case of the feeble attempts made by Nationalist corporation at re-housing, heavy losses have resulted to the city, and the taxpayers have been called upon to make good the deficits." In one part of the town Lord Iveagh has spent large sums of money in cleaning up a slum and in replacing it with great blocks of modern, sanitary tenements. In addition he has donated a park to the poor and erected a truly magnificent amusement and recreation hall for their benefit.

THE RUMOR INCORRECT

A rumor was in circulation yesterday that Mr. E. A. Peck, M.L.A., had signified his intention of not again being a candidate for the Ontario Legislature. The Times called Mr. Peck up by phone and learned that there was no truth whatever in the report.

MR. BURNHAM SUPPORTS C.N.R. SCHEME AS BEST WAY OUT OF THE SITUATION

Government Will Eventually Own All Railways, But in Meantime Road Should be Put on Sound Basis. "Put Screws on Mackenzie and Mann."

Ottawa, May 21.—The debate on the C.N.R. resolution was resumed by Mr. J. H. Burnham, of Peterborough, in the Commons.

He said there was room in the Conservative party for every man to state his reasons. Both Mr. Nickle and Mr. Bennett had given the best that was in them to the service of the State, but they would agree that for the purposes of party government it was necessary to fall into line sometime or other. The opposition had made things very clear for anyone who was in doubt. The utmost that they could do was to suggest that aid be put off for six months. If that were so, it was surely clear that the government should go ahead.

"A LITTLE MORE HOPE

"It has been decided," proceeded Mr. Burnham, "to give Mackenzie & Mann a little more rope. There was a great danger that they would be given a little more for the express purpose of hanging themselves. And," he added, "there would have been no general regret." (Laughter).

ANOTHER MEANS REVOLUTION

"If they come back next year," he went on, "if they are not given a foreclosure, there will not be a riot, there will be a revolution in this country."

He referred to the titles carried by Sir William and Sir Daniel, and asked whether they were included in these resolutions. "Are they any security," he asked. "No, for they do not indicate the facts of the case and should never have been bestowed."

BEST OF A BAD JOB

He said that some day the government would own all the railways but for the present the question was whether by skilful financing we could not put the enterprise on a sound footing, not for the sake of these men, but for our own sake. It was the Liberal party which had started these men on their career, and it was the Liberal party that must take the responsibility. The only thing to do now was to go ahead and "when the time comes, to put the screws on them and put them on right." (Laughter).

Mr. Lapointe of Kamouraska moved the adjournment of the debate till afternoon and the House rose for luncheon.

DID THE WORK.
Grew Strong on Right Food.

You can't grow strong by merely exercising. You must have food—the kind you can digest and assimilate.

Unless the food you eat is digested it adds to the burden the digestive organs have naturally to carry. This often means a nervous breakdown.

"About a year ago," writes an Eastern lady, "I had quite a serious nervous breakdown caused, as I believed, by overwork and worry. I also suffered untold misery from dyspepsia.

"First I gave up my position, then I tried to find a remedy for my troubles, something that would make me well and strong, something to rest my tired stomach and build up my worn-out nerves and brain.

"I tried one kind of medicine after another, but nothing seemed to help me.

"Finally a friend suggested change of food and recommended Grape-Nuts. With little or no faith in it, I tried a package. That was eight months ago and I have never been without it since.

"Grape-Nuts did the work. It helped me grow strong and well. Grape-Nuts put new life in me, built up my whole system and made another woman of me!"

GREAT UPROAR CREATED IN BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS

Opposition Eorces Adjournment During Home Rule Discussion--Fiercely Assail Premier

London, May 21.—The sitting of the House of Commons was suspended to-day, in consequence of the persistent disorderliness of the Opposition members, who succeeded in forcing an adjournmentl the motion for which had just been defeated by a vote of 286 to 176.

Immediately after the vote had been taken the Unionists started the refrain, "Adjourn," "Adjourn." The uproar was long and loud. The speaker finally rose and asked Mr. Bonar Law, the leader of the Opposition, whether he assented in the demonstration.

Amid shouts from his supporters of "Don't answer," Mr. Law refused to reply, and the Speaker declared the sitting closed, saying there was nothing else he could do, as Mr. Law declined to assist him in maintaining order.

Premier Asquith and his colleagues in the Cabinet, who remained in their seats, were fiercely assailed with abusive epthets by the Opposition, to which the Ministerialists replied with handkerchie.

Cheers From King John.

The scene in the House had followed on a series of bitter speeches by Andrew Bonar Law and other Unionists, in which they denounced Premier Asquith for his refusal to acquaint the House of Commons with the terms of his amending bill to the Irish Home Rule Bill. They declared that the whole proceeding of asking the House of Commons to read the Home Rule Bill a third time before members knew the Government's intentions was so plain that it would serve no good purpose to participate further in the debate.

As the members filed out of the chamber Henry Page Croft, a Unionist, raised the shout: "Three cheers for King Tohn," the reference being to John Redmond, the Nationalist leader.

LONDON POLICE FOIL RAID AGAINST BUCKINGHAM PALACE

London, May 21.—The police to-day broke up a large column of militant suffragette raiders, who were attempting to march on Buckingham Palace for the purpose of handing a petition to King George. When the women reached the top of Constitution Hill, leading to the palace, the police dispersed them and arrested Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and several other leaders.

The police formed a complete ring around the palace and its grounds, as the women had threatened to scale the high walls enclosing the gardens. All the detectives from the police headquarters at Scotland Yard were on duty, and a body of 1,000 more patrolmen were held in reserve in case of emergency.

The skirmish between the police and the suffragettes outside the gates of Green Park, was very lively while it lasted.

Mrs. Pankhurst surrounded by a body guard of several hundred suffragettes, suddenly appeared from the portal of a residence opposite the Park, crossed the road to the gates and attempted to march down the drive leading to the palace.

Mounted police then barred their progress, and the women who were armed with sticks, attempted to cut their way through the lines of patrolmen. They fought with vigor, using their sticks with such force that the police charged. Several women were injured in the struggle, and the raiders were finally driven back, but left Mrs. Pankhurst and a number of her lieutenants in the clutches of the police, while on the ground was a considerable collection of remnants of garments which had been torn off the women in the hand to hand fighting.

The police also suffered some casualties during the fierce onslaught made on them by the women.

King George himself was an interested spectator of the earlier movements of his protection, which he watched from a window of the Buckinham Palace.

PETES LOSE TO LONDONERS, 1-0

The Petes again went down to defeat yesterday at London, but this time a real battle took place first. The boys were in good trim after their holiday and went into the game with a little of the old life, and, but for the fact that the hits were scarce would have came out on top. As it was, the Londoners were victors by the small score of 1—0.

Bob Sterling did the twirling for the Petes and pitched whirlwind ball.

(Beauty Culture.)

Progressive beauty specialists are rapidly adopting the new, painless method for removing superflous hairs and the result is that the costly and painful electric needle treatment is fast being discarded. The treatment is inexpensive and very simple— just make a paste with a little of the powdered delatone and water and apply to hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes rub off and with it comes every trace of hair. Washing leaves the skin firm and spotless. Be sure, however, that you get the real delatone.

TWO LAZY ANIMALS

Sloth and Anteater Exchanged Four Blows in Five Days

Of all the animals mentioned in books on natural history, the sloth is given the palm for sheer unadulterated laziness. As a runner-up for secondary honors the anteater has no serious rival.

The passengers and crew of the steamer Caracas, which plies between South America and England, had a chance to study the inactive peculiarities of these two tropical beasts at close range and their report of the five-day battle that raged between the two strange creatures only goes to bear out the natural historians.

As part of the collection of strange birds and beasts being taken to London the sloth and anteater occupied the same roomy cage on the trip from Venezuela. No trouble was expected, as the sloth immediately hung himself, head down, from a crossbar at the top of the cage and the anteater

HO! HUM! – I'LL FIX YOU FOR THAT WHEN I WAKE UP!
TAKE THAT!
AS THE FIGHT WAS - retired to a lower corner, both passing into deep, dreamless slumber.

One Sunday, however, the anteater awoke hungry. Disgusted with his failure to find food, the anteater decided to blame the sloth for the emptiness of the larder. Carefully picking a soft spot on the sloth's peculiar visage, the anteater raised a claw-armed forepaw and smote the sleeping monstrosity on its nose.

Reluctantly the sloth opened one eye and looked upon his assailant. According to one of the officers, the two beasts sat looking at one another all Sunday afternoon without moving an eyelash. Then the sloth, with great effort and an expression of bored resignation, loosened one paw from its clutch on the cross beam and reached out toward the anteater, which had by this time fallen asleep again. With utmost deliberation the sloth aimed a blow at the anteater's ear, hooked it smartly with his long, curved claw and immediately lapsed into profound sleep.

All day Monday both animals remained totally oblivious to their surroundings. Tuesday morning the sloth awakened and, seeing the anteater just below him, reached down and hooked his enemy under the chin. The claw caught a firm hold and for the rest of the day the sloth retained its grip.

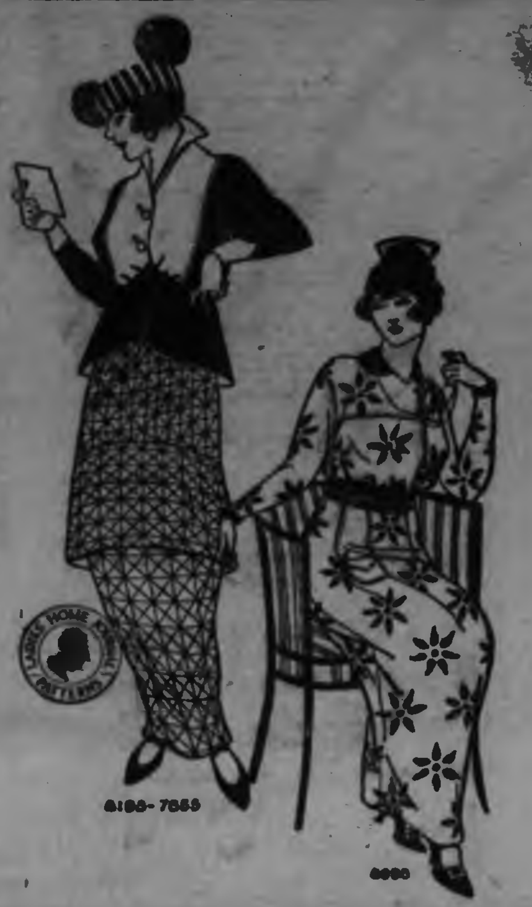
On Wednesday the anteater awoke, lifted its head off the hook and took another wallop at the sloth's nose. The effort proved too tiring and the anteater immediately returned to its dreams. The sloth was now thoroughly awakened, but all day Wednesday, all Wednesday night and until the ship docked this most deliberate of beasts failed to make good the exchange of blows. Just before the two were separated at the landing, the sloth made a third aimless swipe at its enemy, but fanned, leaving the score of the five-day battle two blows for each—and no bloodshed.

Animal Courtships

It seems fairly certain that animals, in many cases, have a set of definite conclusions in regard to the married state. These vary from the highest to the lowest forms, just as they do amongst different races of human beings.

Among wolves is found the state most like that believed in by the more civilized races of man. For wolves marry for life, for better or for worse, and only by the death of one is the other at liberty to marry again. Chivalry still lives among wolves, and deep affection exists between the mates.

Another and possibly a more advanced type of marriage is found amongst wild geese, wild pigeons and parrots. With these, as with wolves, the marriage is for life, but with this difference. In the event of the death of one of the pair the other does not marry again, but mourns for its mate during the remainder of its life.



ONE OF THE QUAINT LITTLE COATS NOW SO MODISH

These odd little coats with their flaring bottoms and high pointed collars are among the most practical modes that have been brought out for many a day. They can be worn with almost any skirt or dress appropriately, providing the colors harmonize. It is smart to have this little coat of plaid for use with plain skirts and vice versa.

On many of these coats, the yoke effect in back extends over the shoulders and the sleeves are attached; some are in kimono effect, others have the regular set-in sleeve.

No. 8199-7855 shows a coat of duvetyn and a skirt of plaid novelty goods. The novelty fabrics may be had in several widths and average in price from 75 cents a yard and up.

This costume may be made in size 36 with 2¼ yards of 42 inch material for the coat (8199) and for the skirt (7855) 3¼ yards of 36 inch material. In 8096, a very chic little one-piece dress is shown; it has the peg-top skirt, the yoke blouse with drop shoulder and although the main decorative effect is obtained from the design of the flowered crepe, yet two convenient patch pockets on each side of the skirt add to the result.

In size 36 this dress requires 4⅝ yards of 42 inch material.

No. 8199—sizes 34 to 42.
No. 7855—sizes 22 to 30.
No. 8096—sizes 34 to 42.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

NEW TENNIS STAR

Girl of Fifteen Who Plays a Remarkable Game

A new star has risen in the lawn tennis firmament, in the person of Mlle. Susanne Lenglen, a fair-haired girl of fifteen, who has had remarkable success against older players in recent International Tournaments on the Riviera. Mlle. Lenglen won the Singles and the Doubles Provincial Championships of Picardy. Soon afterwards she took the Lille International Cup. She was the first French lady player to win the Le Touquet Cup, and this year she has already won the Singles and Mixed Doubles Championships of the Nice Lawn Tennis Club and of the Carlton Club, with Mr. Wilding, the British amateur champion, as her partner; and also the Beau Site Cup at Cannes. She is described as a strong player with a sound return. Her volleying is well timed; her smash is first class; she excels at the net; her endurance is remarkable, as when she won a match which lasted 3½ hours against Mrs Colston, lady champion of Wales, at Wimereux.

MAKING SHIRTWAISTS

The Home Dressmaker Can Find Many Aids in the Stores

The home maker of shirtwaists could gain good results if she only knows how to go to work to gain them. The woman who is teaching herself to sew, or who has never been able to teach herself to give the right finishing touches to the dressmaking she does, should rely on the tulle and net frilling sold in the shops to make the shirtwaists she evolves look finished.

There are many good ways of finishing the neck line. The slightly pointed V line in the front is a good one to follow, because it is easy to manage—and, incidentally, becoming to most faces. And it is this neck line that is most easily finished with some sort of frill or ruche.

The home maker of shirtwaists should always avoid a tight appearance where the V-necked shirtwaist closes. Nothing is more ugly than a V-neck that pulls tightly about the neck and makes the neck bulge.

There should always be some sort of ruching or bow to finish the neck in the front. These finishes cover up any defects at the neck.

Never use a ball and socket fastener at the neck, or at any other point where there is a strain on the opening. A hook and eye is much better, because it holds securely.

If you are making a silk or crepe de chine or chiffon waist, you can gain time and style by buying a little net or lace vest or guimpe ready made. Little undersleeves can also be bought to fasten in silk or chiffon waists. Net, chiffon, and tulle shirred suitably for sleeves can also be bought by the yard. This net sleeve material simplifies the task of waist making, for next to the neck the sleeves come in importance.

NEW LUTHERAN BIBLE

Result of Seven Years' Work But Has Few Real Changes

A new edition of the revised Lutheran Bible of 1892 has now been published. It is the result of seven years' work and was undertaken at the suggestion of the German Bible Societies, which held a conference at Halle in 1908.

The difference between the new edition and the revised version is in the main purely literary, but a few alterations of sense have been made in unimportant passages.

After consultations between the Bible societies and the Evangelical Church committee the principal work was done by an expert committee of six, including Prof. Kaweran, the well known church historian of Berlin, and the German scholar, Prof. Bremer, of Halle, which was appointed by the church committee in 1908 and worked under the supervision of Dr. Ackermann, the chief court chaplain of Dresden.

The experts' task, as prescribed by the Eisenach Church conference in 1906, was simply to modernise the spelling and punctuation and to remove "confusing archaisms." The revisers were recommended to be tender in their treatment of archaisms, many of which, it was considered, "could not be removed without damage being done to the peculiar power and sanctity of Luther's Bible."

Subsequently more systematic revision was suggested, so that they considered it their task also to pay regard to rhythm and euphony, and in particular to the distinction between plain narrative style and the elevated diction of poetry.

FORESTS OF BRITISH GUIANA

Supply Many Varieties of Wood to Lumbermen

The forests of British Guiana cover about 80,000 square miles of country. The workable area is confined to 11,000 square miles in the more accessible parts. Though the variety of valuable trees found in these forests is large, at present there are a few only within reach of the lumbermen and of sufficient commercial value to command a market. Of these greenheart is the most important and is rated as a first-class wood at Lloyd's. Logs of greenheart can be obtained which will square 25 inches and have a length of 65 feet. There are two varieties, yellow and black, the black possessing greater hardness but being more difficult to obtain. A large quantity of both varieties still remains in the interior waiting the advent of the lumberman.

Crabwood has within the last few years attracted the attention of lumbermen. Though not properly a hardwood like greenheart or mora, it is nevertheless, easily worked, and takes a finish that resembles mahogany. It will no doubt have a large export when better known.

Wallaba occurs more frequently throughout the colony than any other tree. Several varieties exist and all have a resinous nature and an unpleasant odor that disappears after sufficient exposure. The wood splits easily into shingles, palings and staves, and is made use of for building purposes and for firewood. A considerable quantity is exported.

Mora and bullet tree are dark and close-grained woods of firm texture. Both are heavy and durable. The bullet tree, however, is furnishing a valuable product—balata—and is hardly to be considered therefore as lumber, but the mora tree, which is larger in size, is useful for many purposes, for wharfs, steamship building and railway sleepers. It is among the best woods of the colony.

In addition to these woods there are a large number of other varieties suitable for furniture, cabinet work and general building purposes, which up to the present are only obtained for local use.

APARTMENTS IN WINNIPEG

Winnipeg is a city of apartment houses. The devotees of a life free from coal bills fill every new block erected there, and new ones are going up all the time. In this respect Winnipeg partakes more of the characteristics of the typical American city than of its eastern sisters, and it may be that the presence of large numbers of Americans there has something to do with it—or it may be the weather. There are approximately three hundred and fifty apartment buildings in Winnipeg, some big, some little, some—a few—solidly constructed, others with walls and floors which keep out the noises from adjoining suites about as well as would paper partitions. It is safe to assume that these structures would average twelve suites to the building, which would give 4,200 self contained apartments, and the assumption of five members to the family means that something like 21,000 Winnipegites are "cliff-dwellers." There are, in addition to the real apartment houses, hundreds of private dwellings with separate quarters for families to let, and one is probably not far wrong in estimating that not far from thirty thousand people in Winnipeg live in suites. If their rent averages, as it easily will, $35 each a month, they are paying something like two and a half million dollars each year to the landlords.

Coals in Baths

At an inquiry into the housing conditions in the Holytown, New Stevenston, Carfin, and Newarthill districts, there was a difference of opinion as to whether baths should be provided. Mr. Hall Nicol, builder, declared that he had provided some of his properties with baths, but he found that they were not made proper use of. In one case he found coals in the bath, and in another bath the feathers of a bed were stored.

The Last of the Friedmann Cure

The Health Department of New York has pronounced the Friedmann "cure" of tuberculosis a failure. Of the forty-seven cases observed twelve have resulted in death, twenty-two are still in hospitals, seven are attending clinics, one is under private treatment and five have returned to their homes. Of the latter none are pronounced definitely cured, although the improvement is evidently real.

In other words, the turtle serum discovered by Dr. Friedmann and announced to the world by him as a "cure" shows no greater efficacy than other methods of the medical profession in treating tuberculosis. As a matter of fact it may be doubted if the proportion of "cures" under the Friedmann method is as great as those achieved by the less spectacular treatment in vogue before the introduction of turtle serum.

The figures published by the New York Health Department show the cruelty of the campaign conducted by Dr. Friedmann, of hopes created among the afflicted only to be dispelled in the most cruel manner. The responsibility for the pangs of disappointment among thousands of tubercular victims must be borne by Dr. Friedmann and the press agencies that heralded his "cure."

Those who looked dispassionately as such an epoch-creating discovery were dubious from the first, because the announcements savored of quackery. Now the whole world knows that unlike the medical profession Dr. Friedmann had nothing to give to mankind. He merely had something to sell at a good price.

Every Stiff Joint Limbered, Rheumatism Cured!

That Old Family Remedy "Nerviline" Is Guaranteed for the Worst Cases.

CURES NEURALGIA, BACKACHE, AND LUMBAGO

Rheumatism to-day is unnecessary. It is so well understood and so readily curable that every day we have reports of old chronics being freed of their tormenter.

"I can speak confidently of the Nerviline treatment, for the simple reason that it cured me," writes Albert B. Cornelius from Kingston. "You can't imagine how stiff and lame and sore I was. Nights at a time I couldn't sleep well. I followed the Nerviline directions carefully—had it rubbed into the sore regions four or five times every day. Every rubbing helped to reduced the pain. The swelling went down. I got a fair measure of relief in a week. I also took two Ferrozone Tablets with my meals. They increased my appetite and spirits, purified my blood and toned up my system generally.

"I am as well today as a man could be—in perfect good health. I give Nerviline all the credit."

A large family size bottle of Nerviline costs only 50c., and is useful in a hundred ills in the family. Whether it's toothache, earache, headache neuralgia, lame back or a cold, Nerviline will cure just as readily as it will cure rheumatism. For family use nothing equals Nerviline.

A Valuable Pearl

The most valuable pearl ever found on the American continent was discovered by Dr. Jesse Carr, on the banks of the Fox River. It weighed sixty-two grains and was a perfect specimen. The finder named it "Queen of America" and presented it to his wife. On his first opportunity he took it to Chicago to have it appraised and was astonished when he was told that it was worth over $10,000.

ADVERTISING A NATION

How Canada Is Made Known Across the Waters

In the course of a lecture made by J. Obed Smith, immigration commissioner of Canada he said: "Because there is very little red tape in this department a great deal of responsibility rests upon the officials. While Ottawa controls the policy, the details including expenditures, are worked on in London. Outside the British Isles we have agencies at work in Paris Belgium and in the Scandinavian countries. There is a good deal of work required in advising and planning discipline for 4,000 booking agents who can be made into good advertising agents for Canada.

"In advertising Canada, the department of the Interior offers no apology particularly in the old land, where there are fewer opportunities for farm laborers.

"Correspondence also plays a big part in the propaganda, for while it indicates publicity work, it is becoming most productive. So much information has been diffused about Canada that those writing are not content with one or two questions, but sel ou voluminous inquiries. This indicates that the enquirers have been reached by advertising, and they in their turn have led others to also seek information. Our department, while primarily concerned with advertising Canada alone, is also obliged to set out the advantages of each province. The policy of the department is set along such lines as to make advertising pay a government as well as a business firm.

"Our work is largely carried on by bringing before the public the advantage of farming in Canada. Our agents attend every show or fair, and distribute literature and also give advice to those requiring it. These results are most satisfactory, but perhaps our most effective work consists of carrying information to every town and village by means of motor and horse wagons. These are in charge of experienced Canadian officials, who stop outside schools, and having obtained permission from the teachers, address the children on Canada, although nothing is said about immigration. Later on we get good results from this campaign.

"Another important phase in advertising is that of giving illustrated lectures. Hundreds are given each season, principally in the winter, and afford us the means of getting into closer touch with the intending emigrant. The most valuable adjunct is the after meeting, when the people gather round and ask questions. We also endeavor to supply news items to the reading public.

"There are good and bad advertisements. The latter consist of derogatory letters and complaints from those who have not succeeded. However, Canada does not want the immigrant to fail, but, on the other hand likes to point to the successful settler as illustration of what can be done out here."

The Whirligig of Time

In place of the hitching post and the carriage stepping stone has come the gasoline filling station. In place of the livery stable has come the modern garage, and the old-fashioned roadside smithy has been turned into a modern automobile repair shop.

The motor car has brought many changes, but with the changes has come prosperity. The foundry that once turned out ornamental hitching posts with a horse's head, or a little iron negro jockey patiently waiting to hold old Dobbin's reins, is manufacturing automobile parts.

The gasoline motor has played its part in making the automobile the popular method of transportation, but without the pneumatic tire the motor car would be limited to improved city streets and boulevards.

Many Centenarians

According to official statistics compiled in Germany, the number of centenarians in Europe is far greater than is generally imagined. Spain possesses 410; France, [illegible]; Italy, 197; Great Britain, 92; Russia, 89; Germany, 76; Norway, 23; Sweden, 10; Belgium, 5 and Denmark 2. Switzerland has none. The Balkan States hold the record. In Bulgaria alone there are no fewer than 3,883 centenarians, and there are another 1,074 in Roumania and 573 in Servia.

A Share of the Catch

In the French fisheries on the Newfoundland banks the fishermen do not work for wages, but for a share in the catch. Before they leave France they receive an advance payment, varying from $75 to $150, to be deducted from their future earnings. If, as not infrequently happens, a man's share at the end of the season is not sufficient to cover the amount advanced to him, the owner of the vessel loses the difference, and the man himself comes home with empty pockets. The fisherman's total earnings in seven months of hard labor and exposure probably do not average more than $150. Strangely enough, the men appear to be content with their lot, and all the reforms that have been effected toward improving their wages and the conditions under which they labor have been initiated by naval officers, administrative officials and enlightened ship-owners.

NATURAL BASIN NEAR CALGARY

Immense Water Supply is Only Thirty-five Miles Away

That the citizens of Calgary have a natural basin with an estimated storage capacity of 603,000,000 gallons of water, enough to supply the city for an entire winter, only 35 miles up the Elbow river, was an interesting report made by Mr. A. W. Ellison Fawkes.

For some months Mr. Fawkes had a crew of surveyors and assistant engineers working out the data on a pipe line scheme and also a proposed filtration and pumping scheme as an alternative.

On a trip up the Elbow Mr. Fawkes inspected three feasible sites for the location of an impounding dam. The nearest of these for a pipe line is about 35 miles distant, and here the Elbow widens into a big basin with the immense storage capacity mentioned. It would be necessary to have a dam at this point 400 feet long. Five miles farther up the river and again three miles above this point there are other suitable sites. But, of course, the closer site, 35 miles up, has the advantage, when the cost of constructing a pipe line is considered. The upper sites would on the other hand be narrower and would not require as long a dam.

FARMING IN MANITOBA

The Industry in the Province is Yet in its Infancy

Although the Province of Manitoba is the oldest settled of the prairie provinces, it is well within the truth to state that farming is as yet in its infancy. The area now under cultivation is an amazingly small percentage of the total area available for the production of crops.

The following summary of yields per acre of principal grain crops in Manitoba, shows the situation in a nutshell and will convince the most skeptical that this province is one of the richest districts on the American continent.

Wheat, average for 27 years, 19.39 bushels per acre.

Oats, average for 27 years, 35.60 bushels per acre.

Barley, average for 27 years, 29.97 bushels per acre.

Flax, average for 10 years, 13.16 bushels per acre.

Newest Foulard Patterns Rival Chiffons in Favor

By MADGE MARVEL

SOME of the best shops are showing new and attractive foulards, which prove that in spite of all the new and gorgeous silks and crepes and chiffons and other materials that have caused us fairly to live in a succession of gasps at their sheer loveliness, the time-honored and respected silk has not finished its term of usefulness.

I know this will be gladsome news to many women to whom there is no fabric which quite takes the place of this soft and unassuming silk. The newest patterns are inclined to be small and cover the ground closely. One snuff brown silk has tiny nosegays of yellow and blue thickly sprinkled over it. A dark blue ground is patterned in single yellow roses with green leaves. One of the new lighter and brighter blues has pale violet and rose figures.

Dark green silk is strewn with pale yellow. A white background throws into relief tiny red rosebuds and stiff little dark green leaves. This could be used with good effect over a white silk or crepe skirt for the Dolly Varden style of drapery.

Colors Are Wonderful.

Colors are quite wonderful, and there are quantities of yellow in all the summer fabrics. Yellow linen will be liked for wear in the country, and comes in the most delightful soft shades, which are known under the general classification of tango.

With white mulle blouses yellow linen made with a peplum skirt and a belted coat fastened with white pearl buttons makes a charming costume if it is worn by one to whom the color is becoming. Not all persons can wear yellow any more than they can purple.

The fine checks promise to appear more and more as the summer advances. There is nothing more practical for a gown for all manner of wear than the combination of plain and checked taffeta.

There are many times when the business woman likes to wear a street gown without a coat. A smart model which would suit her purpose is of blue taffeta in the shade known as "grape blue," the skirt made with a long tunic and the bodice of pin-checked taffeta in the same shade of blue changing with green. There is a pleated coat effect in the back of the bodice which extends half-way to the knees and has a strap belt at the waist line. White muslin collar and cuffs give a neat finish.

Another similar model, except that the skirt is draped, has the coatee in blue and brown checks and the skirt in brown. There is great favor shown the combination of blue and brown in suits, gowns and millinery.

Stripe Effect Popular.

The shades of both the blue and brown must be exactly right or the effect is completely lost. The blue is the clear, soft blue, and the brown a soft shade a little deeper than tan. An afternoon gown of blue taffeta was veiled in chiffon in the brown. A brown silk suit had the blue for the lining. A blue hemp tri-corne hat was swathed in brown maline and had a bunch of wheat at the side in that peculiar metallic finish known as "brass."

For seaside and mountain wear women are buying challies for informal morning wear, and the shops tell me this material is displacing the fine light flannels. I have seen several tennis frocks made of this material and they are most attractive. It is said that challies will withstand tubbing perfectly.

One of the most exclusive shops is illustrating the various use of stripes in one costume. I saw such a gown made for a Newport hostess. The material was black and white striped satin in almost the awning width. The bodice with its kimono sleeves was bias, there was full hip drapery of the stripes running around the figure, and the skirt was close fitting and the stripes were perpendicular. There was a girdle of Nattier blue velvet and a shaded orange rose to wear with it.

Of course such a striped effect would only be possible for wear by a very slender and smart woman. The hat which accompanied the costume was a Watteau of white straw with the back filled in with cornflowers and buttercups and yellow and blue ribbons crossing the crown.

This same woman who will wear this zebra gown ordered from the same house an afternoon frock in Pompadour silk with a buff yellow ground flowered in dull blue and faded red. There was a velvet sash of the red and a hat in the same shade trimmed with maline and dull blue roses.

Color combinations were never so interesting. On a deep purple chiffon evening wrap there are triangular revers and cuff adornment of cerise velvet. A light brown ninon has a green velvet rose at the girdle.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am from the country and visiting a wealthy aunt in the city. Everything is so strange, especially so many pieces of silverware at the table. When I am invited out in the presence of young men I become embarrassed.

Please advise me what to do. I am 16.

LUCILE.

NOW, Lucile, don't you fret about the spoons and the forks and the teaspoon and the soup spoon and the ice cream ladle and the salad fork and all the rest of the fancy silver which is used on some tables.

Look at your aunt and see what spoon she takes first; watch your cousin and observe which fork he takes for fish and which for birds. Then follow suit.

If you should make a mistake the heavens won't fall, and neither will the dining room floor open and swallow you up.

Cleverer people than you have eaten with the wrong fork time and time again and have lived to tell the tale.

It isn't even important enough to be funny.

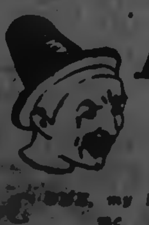
Don't worry about what your aunt will think or how she will feel if her niece should suddenly put the wrong spoon into her coffee cup. Was aunty always so rich, and did she always know the proper thing—or did she have to go visiting to learn?

Have a plain talk with her some day when you're all alone. Tell her you are anxious to learn, and she will be just as happy as a lark to teach you. One of the things she loves in you is your girlish inexperience; she drinks a draught of deep delight every time she gives you something you have never had before.

Don't be stiff and self-opinionated; let her have the joy of your real self; let her help to teach you something, and see how happy it will make her and you.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care this office.



As a Clown Sees Us

By Harry La Pearl

Premier Clown of the New York Hippodrome.

[illegible], my Love, and trip with me
The light fantastic in the sea!
We'll maxixe out with the waves' retreat,
And top the swells with twinkling feet.

We'll coax Neptune to hesitate
With Venus for a dancing mate.
We'll teach the mermaids Gaby's Glide,
The tango dip in ebbing tide.

Old Davy Jones shall leave his locker,
And Mother Cary park her rocker.
We'll make them one-step o'er the sea—
A dance on land's too dry for me!

Not so bad for a clown, is it? This dance thing evidently has gotten into my head as well as my feet—oh, yes, I [illegible]. I had to learn in order to keep my job.

Speaking of war, how is this one?

A corporal in an Irish regiment when on a march in India went to the quartermaster to borrow a camel to carry a spare tent. The quartermaster refused. "I have only the one, and this spare camel I am keeping for a case of emergency."

"Well," said the corporal, "can't you put the case of emergency on the cart and let me have the camel?"

A certain dramatist who was much annoyed at an adverse notice the critic of a daily paper gave to his latest play—which, by the way, afterward turned out a gruesome failure—happening to meet the critic, remarked, irritably, that, although the said critic was an adept in picking faults in other people's plays, yet he was quite incapable of writing a play himself.

"You're quite right, I am," the critic replied; "neither can I manufacture mutton, and yet I am a better judge of mutton than any sheep in the world."

The village orchestra was rehearsing. The passage was marked "pp," but the cornet player was blowing away as if his life depended on it. The new conductor, after an ear-splitting blast which effectually drowned the sound of all the other instruments, leaned over to see whether the cornet part was properly marked. Yes, it was.

"My good man," said he, approaching the subject diplomatically, "what do you understand 'f' to mean?"

"Full force!" answered the rustic.

This was unexpected, but it might pass.

"Then what does 'pp' stand for?"

"Plenty of power!" was the illuminating reply.

BEING A REAL "SILENT PARTNER"

Irene Fenwick, of the "Along Came Ruth" Company.

"Women Should Share Husbands' Secrets," Says Actress

By ELEANOR AMES

HOW much do you know about hubby's business?

That is the question germ which Irene Fenwick would set working in every wife's brain. For, in her opinion, it is the wife's duty to know the essential details of her husband's business life. Otherwise she is working in the dark and is apt to make a fatal financial blunder at a critical time.

"I believe every wife should be admitted to the business secrets of the partnership in which she enjoys a profit," said Miss Fenwick to me. "I think it is the duty as well as the right of every wife to know how the money which she spends is earned. When women are kept in the dark regarding their husband's affairs they are done an injustice instead of a kindness. When they are purposely uninformed about the manner the money is earned which they spend carelessly, they are shirking responsibility. That is where the wife of the laboring man has the advantage of her sister who is better off in a financial sense.

"The wife of the day laborer knows all about her husband's money affairs. She knows what 'her man' earns each working day, and the chances are that she has it all handed to her and doles him out his carfare and tobacco money.

"When the man is able to earn more money and advances in the working world, he assumes the responsibility of handling his own money and the wife is told to go ahead and he will pay the bills. If she is content literally to do this with never a thought of the source of supply, she is not doing her duty.

"I would have every wife make her husband feel that it is only justice for him to tell her how his business is progressing and talk over his plans with her.

"There are many times when the wage earner of the family is going through the greatest of battles to keep his head above water. He passes sleepless nights and nervous days. But he carries none of his burdens home to let his wife share them. On the contrary he keeps all worries carefully away from her. Whatever happens, she must not feel the pinch of economy.

"And in this way many matrimonial ships are wrecked.

"I do not believe the average woman would be unwilling to listen to a plain statement of facts about her husband's business, if he made it clear that he considered her a part of the general business scheme.

"And I believe she would be only too willing to help run it on a profit. Some of the greatest financiers have relied upon their wives for business aid. Mrs. E. H. Harriman is a shrewd business woman and always had understanding of her husband's various 'deals.'

"When the crisis comes in business life, the wife who is a real partner is often the force that stems the tide of disaster.

"A little sympathy, a little understanding, a little keen judgment and planning will often turn aside some threatened trouble. And husband and wife should work together. I would not have the wife take upon her shoulders all the petty business details, for that would be too much of a nervous strain for both, but I would have her ready and capable to help in practical ways, because she has the necessary understanding to be of real help.

"The few pennies which wife has saved have often kept husband from failure and loss. And she will be able to save with more enthusiasm if she feels that she is a genuine partner in good faith. The modern woman has outgrown the pretty doll stage where she lives to be protected. She is ready to be an economic force, even if only as a silent partner."

When the Cherries Are Ripe at Home

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

CHERRIES are ripe in California. To be sure, they are $25 a box, and not such a frightfully big box at that, but they're ripe—and the first box was sold before it had been in the market quite five minutes.

And, whisper, sisters—it was a woman who raised those cherries.

So much of the fruit in California is raised and picked and marketed by the women that it makes you feel like selling out your interest in the typewriting business and going out there and being a fruit raiser.

Do you remember when cherries used to get ripe where you lived—when you really lived and it made a difference to you whether things were right at home or not?

I do. There were lots and lots of cherry trees in the place where I lived when I wore my hair shingled and striped stockings.

There was one particular tree where the cherries always ripened first. It was an Early Richmond. My mother was a gentle woman of shy and modest ways. She didn't know what it was to brag—but, little as I was, I used to notice that my mother always had occasion to say something about the cherry pie we had for dinner when the cherries came off that particular tree and were the first ones ripe in town.

It was a little, old, spready tree, this particular one, and there was a knothole in the trunk, and every spring the bluebirds built their nest in that knothole. We children would have it that it was the same pair of birds every year, and we called them Mr. and Mrs. Bluebell and watched for their coming as if they were old and valued friends.

And, oh, the white, white blossoms on that tree; and, oh, the sweet, sweet fragrance of them; and when the wind blew and the sun shone, oh, the dancing shadows on the spring grass.

I used to sit under that tree for hours at a time and think I was thinking—and I was only being happy, just as happy as the brown puppy who rolled over and over in the grass beside me.

Once when I sat all night in a dismantled city and saw the smoke rise from the dreadful fires where they were burning the dead, to avoid the pestilence, I shut my eyes and saw the old cherry tree, all a-blossom, and watched the shadow of the boughs playing hide and seek on the green grass beneath. In the morning when it was time to go to work in the awful place of desolation, the people who came for me said: "How fresh you look; did you manage to sleep in this awful place?"

There were two tall poplar trees just beyond the cherry orchard, and in those trees was a swing—not the grand affairs with high backs and cushioned seats that they call a swing nowadays—but a real swing made of rough rope and a board with two notches in it.

Talk about your flying machines—up, up, up—why, when your grown-up cousin was there he ran under four or five times in succession and you flew almost to the very tops of the trees—up, up, up—whoosh—wasn't it scarey when you started down!

It was just before you got to the orchard that you came to the haystacks. I remember the house we dug out in the very middle of one of them. And it was my delightful habit to get everybody started through the dark passage that led into the room in the haystack and then suddenly find that it was too dark entirely and that I wanted to get out.

How good the apples were we hid away there in the haystack room when they were green. We were always going to wait till they got good and ripe before we ate them—but somehow we never did.

And the dreadful day we found that some tramp had been there and had slept in our secret room, way in the middle of the haystack!

We never went there again—somehow we couldn't; and it was days before we could get the old dog to pass the haystack without stopping to growl.

There was a tangle of blackberry vines along the edge of the cherry orchard—and, oh, the day we found the meadow lark's nest in the grass by the orchard fence!

And the little spotted eggs in the nest—no pearls from the caverns of the sea, no diamonds that ever sparkled, can ever look to me as beautiful as that little nest full of eggs in the green grass at the edge of the old cherry orchard.

Cherries are ripe in California.

Soon they will be ripe in the old place where I used to play, but I shall not pick any of them there.

I hope some little girl will. Here's looking at you, little stranger, across the miles and across the weary years. May the cherries always be ripe in due season wherever you are, and may you have those you love with you to help you pick and eat them.

Successful.

"So her marriage was a failure?"

"No, indeed. She was engaged to a multi-millionaire within a year."

The Cause of Publicity.

"So their marriage was a secret?"

"Yes, indeed. No one knew about it until the court fight over alimony."

Naturally.

"She is a mighty curious woman."

"How?"

"She's not a bit curious."

Secrets of Health and Happiness

How Your Blood Pressure Shows Need of New Habits

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

DO you know how a pump works? Does it pull or push the water? Physicists now teach that there is no such thing as "pull," despite the convictions in the minds of many.

When a log of wood, an iron safe, a railroad car, or anything else, is ostensibly "pulled," actually it is pushed by the rope, coupling, chain or what not which passes to the back of the thing "pulled."

Even the excellence of muscular strength in all its tyranny comes from the pushing power or pumping power, which is the same thing, of the heart and arteries.

A hydraulic pump yields water from the push of the air behind the water, which sends it into the vacated space. Streams of water push and pursue the track of sinuous or straight paths. They may be rapid or they may be slow, soft murmuring brooks or roaring cascades, yet they push themselves forward.

The scarlet flood of your animal texture is pushed forward through the elastic channels of artery and tissue in the same way. Most of the push is due to the inherent irritability of the muscles of the heart and the elastic tissues of the arteries.

This is a simple enough matter today, yet when Harvey, the English doctor who discovered this in 1616, was blackballed by medical societies and called a quack, the very fact that he had a large number of followers, and had Sir Francis Bacon, the lord chancellor, as a patient, made his announcement of the discovery of the circulation of the blood all the more obnoxious to the medical organizations.

The drop of blood which leaves your heart at any moment returns to it three times in an hour and four seconds. Between 22 and 23 minutes the blood makes a whole round-trip with stop-over privileges through the body.

Aeroplanes now rise to heights of 12,000 and 15,000 feet high. The push pressure from your sound heart in a day's work will lift your body one-third as high.

To measure the push or pressure of your blood nowadays there are several different kinds of instruments. Most of these measure the push of the pulse, the "open" or "diastolic" push of the heart, and the squeeze or full force of the heart beat at its maximum. This last is called the "systolic" pressure.

Your heart, you may recall, is a doubled-chambered, two-story, muscular cavity. The left chamber of the lower story squeezes the fresh blood into the whole body, except the lungs. The first floor back—the right chamber—sends the waste and used blood back to the lungs for refreshments and reinforcements.

In healthful middle life, your "full force" blood pressure may average somewhere around 130—this means that a thin tube of mercury rises this much in millimeters, much as a thermometer rises when heated—or less for women and more for those above 45.

The relaxed pressure, or the "diastolic" minimum, is that force of the blood, when the arteries are collapsed, and the pulse pressure is the difference between the two.

Muscular exertion, excessive exercise, food, habits, the time of day, sleeplessness, and ill health all raise or lower the normal blood pressure. The "pulse pressure" should never be above 35 or below 20 without arousing suspicion.

M. M., Boston—Have sour water brash after eating. I eat little.

Avoid hot drinks, coffee, soups, gravies, seasoned diet and sweets. You may eat and drink little, but certainly you are not discreet in your pabulum. Whey, cream cheese—cottage cheese—milk with lime water in it, ices, zwiebak, simple cereals, stewed fruits in moderation, carrots, creamed and cold tender meats with careful exercise will help you. Plenty of charcoal aids also.

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN MATRIMONY

No. 81

Fanatical Housekeeping.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

OUR quarrel merely served to exaggerate Mary's notions of housewifely duty, which is, incidentally, a very different thing from wifely duty. Housewifely duty is, of course, to see that the house is dustless and immaculate at any expense, disregarding one's husband entirely. Wifely duty is seeing that one's husband is quite comfortable at any expense, if the house does suffer to the extent of a crushed cushion or so and some slight suggestion of tobacco ashes where they ought not to be.

I've developed a positive and contrary passion for disorder lately. I want to leave things about; I want to strew papers on the dining room table; I long insanely to upset the cushions, and I have the wildest desires to scoff at every decent principle of neatness. And I was the very neatest of boys! It's chiefly, I think, because I detest sudden and persistent manias of any sort, and Mary's new penchant for neatness at any cost is nothing short of absolute and uncontrollable mania. Our quarrels have had one startling result.

Last night I spilled considerable ashes on a little mahogany table, and instantly I glanced at Mary with a feeling of intense guilt, for all I was prepared to be antagonistic and even argumentative if she said anything. She didn't. She merely stared straight ahead. I was pretty sure she had furtively witnessed my ash catastrophe, so I spoke.

"I'm sorry, dear," I conceded.

"What for?" inquired Mary elaborately.

"Why," I finished lamely, "I did spill ashes again." Here my paper fluttered to the floor and lay sprawling there in tantalizing disorder. I hurriedly gathered it up.

"It's all right, Peter," exclaimed Mary with the air of a martyr. "Leave it there by all means. I don't mind in the least."

I stared.

"Of course you mind," I stammered. "You hate things lying around in disorder—you say so."

"I know," said Mary, "but we've taken it up in our Domestic Club, and now I know just what to do——"

"Taken what up in the Domestic Club?" I demanded aghast.

"The way you leave ashes and papers around," said Mary.

"Great heavens!" I burst forth, "do you women actually dangle your husbands' petty faults before a club court of inquiry?"

"I don't see anything so very terrible in that," defended Mary. "All men have some conspicuous faults at home, and we're merely making a study of how to remedy those faults for the good of everybody. It's really a very good idea."

Imagine a crowd of men meeting to discuss the faults of their wives and how to modify them!

"Mary," I exclaimed heatedly, "I positively will not have you getting up in your fool club and stating that I leave cigar ashes around. It's the most preposterous thing I ever heard of. If it should ever get out to any of my men friends I'd be the laughing stock of the town."

Mary's eyes flashed indignantly.

"Well, I don't see why!" she exclaimed. "Just when we've figured out the way you'd be most comfortable, Mrs. Wayne said just let you do as you please and never let you see how bothersome it is even if I feel like screaming—the ashes and papers, I mean. Then when you get out of the house it's very simple to straighten things out, the house will be perfectly neat, and you won't be uncomfortable. I—I thought it was an awfully good idea, and I don't see why you want to quarrel with me."

I said nothing. I see my way with terrible clearness. In order that I may not be haled up before the Domestic Club again I shall have to walk a chalk line, never depart from the precepts of neatness, never forget a cigar or a paper, never crush a cushion! I must do all this for my self-respect. Mary and I have quarrelled more over this fanatical housekeeping of hers than I imagined possible.

How People Feel

When They Have

Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ½ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4830, or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

In Doing Up Fruit

It is well to look at all canned fruit a week or so after it is put away. By that time air bubbles will have arisen if they are to appear. When these are evident, cook the fruit again.

In making marmalades or preserving it is well to put the fruit and sugar into the kettle in alternate layers. The fruit, of course, is put in first. Stir occasionally to prevent the mixture catching.

It is always a good plan to rinse the preserving kettle with cold water. The moisture on the bottom and side is a factor in preventing the fruit burning.

CIVIC GOVERNMENT

Dr. Horace L. Britain, a native of New Brunswick and an authority on municipal questions says his experience in the United States had shown him that civic officials and the public were anxious to co-operate in an effort to secure efficiency in the control of municipal business. In only one or two cases had he encountered mulish officials who planted their feet and refused to leave the old beaten track. Cities did not lose much by graft. The major part of the waste was incurred by honest inefficiency. Nine-tenths of the loss in New York City had been due to inefficiency, although there was an idea that the place had been one large hot bed of graft. People became interested in municipal affairs at election time, and then let the subject go to sleep.

Headlight on Horse

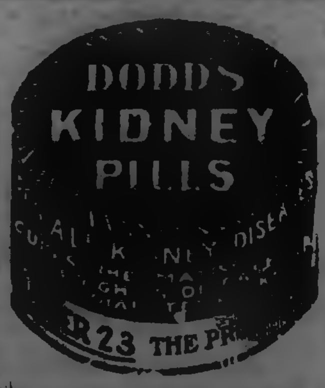
A lover of horses has adopted a novel method of protecting his driving animals from automobiles. An electric light is fitted to the bridle between the ears, being fed by a storage battery carried in the harness saddle.

By this means the horse warns an approaching automobile of danger and also enables his master to pick his way with more certainty on dark roads.

AN IRONING DAY HINT

How to Heat Irons Without Crowding the Stove

When it's "ironing day" there isn't much room on the kitchen stove for anything but irons, is there? Why not make room by taking the irons off the stove? A simple little attachment to the grate will do it and the irons will keep just as hot. Get a length of extra heavy steel wire or very small iron rod. Bend it in shape to form a hanger like that shown in the sketch. You can have two of these, one for the front and one for the side of the grate. The bottoms of the irons placed in them will be held tightly against the fire and be just as hot as though they were on the top of the stove.



DUEL WITHOUT DANGER

Missile Flung Back If Marksman Makes Bulls-eye

That a duelling toy should originate in France is not strange, for France has ever been the home of the duel (even in its bloodless form of the present time.)

The player uses a small spring pistol which fires a soft-headed dart, and has, attached to its muzzle, a wire basket for catching the returning ball.

The target is a regulation target, behind which is a spring arm, released when the player hits center, throwing the ball held in a cup at the player who endeavors to catch it in the basket attached to the muzzle of the pistol.

Paint Pantry Shelves

Better paint the pantry shelves with white enamel. It is cleaner and more lasting than paper, and it is very attractive.

Shake fringed articles well after dampening. When ironing have a new small 5-cent scrub brush to brush out the fringe.

A Lindsay Inquest.

Lindsay Post: On Tuesday afternoon a coroner's jury was empanelled to inquire into the death of Allan Fountain, who died in the Ross Memorial Hospital at 1.30 o'clock as a result of an attempt to cut his throat at Coboconk Monday night.

Trinity College News.

The many local graduates of Trinity College will be interested to learn that that University has issued a circular, concerning the College's 60th Anniversary. The circular states that the portrait of the late Mr. James Henderson was unveiled on June 8th. The committee however, is asking for further contributions.

Recommended for the Whip.

Fred Cassam, a sixteen year old boy was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison by Magistrate Dumble on the charge of vagrancy, yesterday. The sentence was also accompanied by a recommendation for a whipping.

Lindsay Jail Housecleaning.

Governor Balfour, of the Victoria County jail, Lindsay, released five prisoners on Wednesday morning, two having ferved their terms, while two others were removed to Mimico Asylum for treatment, and a third (McEachern, the man guilty of bigamy), goes to Central Prison for a term. With the completion of a term next Sunday of another inmate, the jail will be free entirely. the housecleaning being wide in its scope.

A Salvation Army Wedding.

Last night the Salvation Army Temple was crowded to its big capacity—there was a wedding on. Where there is a wedding on, show us a woman who will not travel through mud' snow, sleet, rain or weather hotter than Death Valley to take a the scene. Well, last night, by the kindly co-operation of Adjt. McElheney, Miss Annie Smith, a member of the local Army, became the charming bride of Mr. Reuben Moore, of Coboconk.

When the Cop Joked.

In the "Pirates of Penzance" is a line which says "A policeman's lot is not a happy one." However some cops extract some fun out of life. A few days ago a young couple were married here. As the wedding party were celebrating the marriage, seated on the verandah, a local policeman, who was passing, recognized the groom. He went on the verandah and placed the groom under arrest. When asked what the charge was he replied "Bigamy." This man has another wife in Rochester. Then the cop grinned. He and the groom had once worked side by side in a local factory.

Old Hanging Incident Recalled.

Yesterday Mr. "Dad" Garbutt, of the Snowden House was in a reminiscent mood. He told how, many years ago, Harvey was hanged at Guelph for the murder of his (Harvey's) daughters, the former was running a hotel in the Royal City. Ratcliff, hangman, depisited his portable gallows, tope, etc, at the rear of the hotel yard. Mr. Garbutt saw Radcliff standing by the deposit. He asked "Are you Radcliffe the hangman ?" Radcliffe replied "Yes." "Well," Mr. Garbutt said, "You have just got three minutes to remove that stuff or I'll set it afire." As the hanging for next morning could have been handicapped for lack of gallows. the stuff was removed in 2 minutes and 17 seconds.

Lindsay Police Methods.

Lindsay has neither handcuffs, nippers or batons, according to the Post of that town. It is to be inferred, from the Post's statement, that when the Chief of Police or his assistant, arrests a burglar, for instance, the officer, placing a hand mysteriously before his lips, whispers "Come along with me. I know where there is some wet stuff." If the burglar is a local optionist, the Lindsay 'soo, "sotto voc," says "Well come al' c anyhow, I'll show you where Kent street may be seen across by the naked eye." If this appeal does not go the Lindsay officer gets hostile a exclaims, "if you don't come to the station, I'll send a special train to Peterborough and have Detective Newhall run you in!" The culprit then relents. Clubs have been ordered for the Lindsay force with a stipulation that each baton must be bound in moire antique silk padded with moss.

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE.

Robinson's circus comes here on June 10th.

Burn the caterpillar nests out of your trees and save trouble later.

Why did you go? Oh! Why did you go Davie?

No inquest will be held on the body of George Wellington who was killed at Lindsay by the G.T.R. flyer.

Mr. John Sinclair of Lindsay fell off a roof and is now nursing a broken leg.

Millbrook has had a fire in its foundry blacksmith shop. The brigade subdued the incipient conflagration.

The canning season is about due. The first crop to be canned may be seen at Riverside Park and its a most abundant one.

The many friends of Mr. Fred Mitchell, who formerly was engaged in the liquor business, will regret to hear that he is seriously ill.

The pickling season would seem to be open. At least a gentleman was seen on George Street last night well pickled.

Yesterday a young man was in trouble with the local police. The young man did not know that it is illegal to let a female dog run at large.

A local man had a narrow escape yesterday from being run over by an auto. He was confined to the house by illness.

Hon. I.B. Lucas, of the Whitney Cabinet will speak at Lindsay, on Saturday before the South Victoria Conservative Convention.

Millbrook Reporter: A forty-dollar license has shut off practically all the small dealers in cigarettes at Peterborough.

Since going out to pasture, Sunny Jim Wilson's mule, under control of its new owner, has gained 2 15-16 oz. in weight.

KELLY-SPRINGFIELD TIRES

PRICE !

I know no joy or pleasure,
My life is full of pain,
No sooner do I pump my tires
Than flat they go again.
My fabric's cracked to pieces,
The tread is worn to naught,
I haven't gone a hundred miles,
With these punk tires I've bought.
A glib young man approached me
And talked to me of price.
The money which he said I'd save,
Has gone like last year's ice.
If cheapness was their virtue,
Then prate it not to me,
I'll pay the price for KELLY'S
And from trouble I'll be free.

400 HINDUS QUARANTINED AT VANCOUVER--WOULD TEST IMMIGRATION LAW

GENERAL CARRANZA CLOSING ON FEDERAL MEXICO'S ARMY

Over Thirty Thousand Rebel Troops Approaching Huerta Capital

Washington, May 22.—Carranza's reported consent to a plan for sending a representative to the Niagara Falls conference, and Secretary of State Bryan's renewed efforts to learn the fate of John R. Silliman, American Vice-Consul who had been held by Huerta soldiers at Saltillo were absorbing features in the Mexican situation here to-day.

Despatches from Niagara Falls stating that it was not generally believed that a Constitutional representative would be admitted to the negotiations at this stage excited little comment here. It was pointed out that if Carranza did send an emissary, he would go to inform the mediators of the northern faction's general aims; he would not commit the Constitutionalists to any specific plan for Mexico's pacification that the envoys might suggest.

Announcement of the Constitutionalist's plans, however, was received with satisfaction in official and diplomatic circles as opening an avenue ultimately for a general discussion of proposals to settle the entire Mexican problem.

Constitutionalist officials to-day jubilantly predicted that there remained only one more battle to bring their long campaign to an end. They believe the final desperate struggle of the revolution, the place of Huerta's last stand, will be at Queretaro. That place, they point out, is more adaptible for fortification than San Luis Potosi where a Federal garrison still remains.

METHODIST PARSONS WILL DISCRIMINATE

Conference Decides to Boycott Magazines Accepting Liquor Advertisements

Kingston, May 22.—The Methodist district conference, held here yesterday, passed a resolution to the effect that no minister of the district would buy magazines that contained advertisements of intoxicating liquors. A resolution was also passed for presentation to the Montreal Methodist Conference, asking that rules be changed so that a minister might be appointed to charge for second term.

FAMILY HISTORY OF ROYALTY QUESTIONED

Toronto, May 22.—Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia thoroughly enjoyed the joke when Colonel G. Ryerson suggested at the United Empire Loyalists' luncheon yesterday that the family history of proposed new members be thoroughly inquired into. Colonel Shaw had just proposed Their Royal Highnesses as honorary members. Even Colonel Ryerson had to laugh at his own "bull."

MURDERER RUTTAN VISITED HIS HOME AGAIN ONCE MORE

He is Said to Have Been in the House at Ten O'clock Last Night

Gravenhurst, May 22.—Persons who came into town to-day from the Hoomy Rapids district, state that William Ruttan, the double murderer, is still at large in the bush, while an armed posse of special police headed by Inspector Greer of the Ontario Department of Criminal Investigation continues the search.

Henry Cook, a neighbor of Ruttan's, whose barns were burned along with two others, presumably by Ruttan since the murders, came here to-day to consult with the insurance agents. Notwithstanding the fact that Greer's men are guarding the house, Mr. Cook stated that he believed Ruttan was there again between nine and ten o'clock last night.

A Matter of Time.

The general belief here is that Ruttan will kill himself when he is cornered. Coroner Dr. McLeay said to-day that it was only a matter of time before the fugitive is rounded up. Chief Sloan is expected back in Gravenhurst this afternoon.

SUM SMALL, BUT THE PRINCIPLE BIG

Judgement Reserved in Appeal of Consumers Gas Company

Toronto, May 22.—Judgment was reserved by the Appellate Division at Osgoode Hall yesterday in the appeal of the Consumers' Gas Company from a decision of Judge Winchester, ordering the company to pay the city $222.22, the cost of moving gas mains on the corner of Carlaw avenue and Eastern Avenue to provide room for a new sewer.

The amount involved is small, but the principle underlying the appeal is important. The city moved the mains to make way for a sewer, the Gas Company doing the work and charging the cost to the city. The latter paid under protest and then sued for return of the money.

TRY SKIN ABSORPTION INSTEAD OF COSMETICS

The constant use of rouge and powder invites a scorched, roughened condition of the skin, eruptions, enlarged pores and wrinkles. If you've learned this from experience, suppose you quit cosmetics and try the following:

Ask your druggist for an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax and begin using this tonight. Apply like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. Keep this up for a week or two. The wax will literally absorb the coarse, colorless or blemished top skin, but so gradually as not to discommode you at all. Just as gradually the clear, velvety, naturally-tinted under-skin comes to the surface. And mercolized wax becomes your everlasting friend.

For those wrinkles and large pores, make a face bath by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This has remarkable astringent and tonic properties, and beneficial results come quickly.

BRITISH OFFICERS PLEAD GUILTY TO BRIBERY

London, May 22.—A plea of guilty was handed in by seven of the nine British army officers and all the eight civilians, charged in January last, with receiving and giving illicit commissions in order to influence allotment of contracts for supplying army canteens.

All the officers except Lieut.-Col. Whittaker, were connected with the Quartermaster's Department of the army, and had risen from the ranks. The civilians accused were employes of the firm of Lipton's Limited.

The bribery had been going on for years.

Sentence was deferred by the judge until May 25.

TOWN DESTROYED BY FOREST FIRES

Seattle, May 22.—A special to the Post Intelligencer from South Bend, Wa., says the town of Lebam, with one thousand population near South Bend, is being destroyed by a forest fire. The late report received at South Bend was from the operator in Northern Pacific station, who said he was leaving because the depot was on fire.

At that time the loss was estimated at $100,000.

PETES LOSE ANOTHER TO LONDON BY 7-0

A fine exhibition of ball was put up again yesterday when the London team took another game from the Petes and at the same time held them down to one hit. The score was 7—0 in favor of the London aggregation.

It is reported that several new men will report here on Monday and it is hoped that they are experts with the willow.

OFFICIAL REFEREE, MR. KAPPELE, DEAD

Prominent Barrister Succumbed To-day at Wellesley Hospital

Toronto, May 22.—After a brief illness during which operation was necessary, Mr. George Kappele, official referee, died this morning at Wellesley Hospital. He was a son of the late Rev. Stephen Kappele, Methodist minister, and was born near Ottawa in 1861. Deceased stood high in the legal profession in Toronto. He was admitted to the bar here in 1883, having won the gold medal of Upper Canada Law Society. He studied in Hamilton in the office of the late John Crerar, K.C., and commenced practice in Toronto with the firm of Bain, Laidlaw, Kappele and Bicknell. He was created King's Counsel in 1908.

Mr. Kappele became official referee in 1906 and of late years was associated with his brother and son in the law firm of Kappele and Kappele.

MUSICAL TREAT IN ST ANDREW'S CHURCH

Splendid Recital by Vocal and Organ Talent

The choir Concert given in St. Andrew's church last night offered a delightful evening's entertainment of song and organ recital to all present. The attendance was fairly large and intensely enthusiastic. The program was pleasingly varied, but high class in every particular, and reflects great credit upon all participating therein. Unstinted praise is due Mr. Herbert C. Treneer, the church's talented organist and choir master, who was responsible for the evening's production. St. Andrew's church has every reason to be proud of its organist and choir, its talented soprano and tenor, Miss Olive Howell and Mr. Edward Jones, respectively.

Mr. Frank Oldfield, the thrilling bass soloist of Toronto, who won the hearts of Peterborough vocal critics in "Judas Maccabaeus," was again heard to splendid advantage in five beautiful numbers. The fifth number was an encore to "Arm, Arm, Ye Brave," which his demonstratively appreciative audience would not be denied.

Miss Olive Howell is to be congratulated upon her charming rendition of "Dreams of Home," in Italian. She is gifted with a pleasing soprano voice of considerable range, and last night's audience would have been keenly disappointed had she not responded to their demand for a repeat.

Mr. E. Jones in his tenor solo, "My Hope is Everlasting," won a full measure of appreciation, and came back a second time to splendid effect.

Mr. Herbert C. Treneer, the exceptionally talented organist, carried the audience with him during his superbly rendered solo numbers on the magnificent organ under his capable charge. His performances last night undeniably demonstrated his masterly knowledge of the varied capacity of a twentieth century church instrument. His solos were of an intricate nature and called for an encore from a delighted gathering, to many of whom his demonstration of the possibilities of an organ came as a revelation. Mr. Herbert C. Treneer is undoubtedly a big man in a small place.

The choir's work was of a very acceptable nature. This vocal aggregation is admirably balanced and of considerable volume.

The concert given last night was a musical treat in every way.

BOATLOAD OF HINDUS ARRIVE WILL TEST IMMIGRATION LAWS

Dominion Official Order Vessel Placed in Quarantine and Will Dispute Right to Land

Victoria, May 23.—The steamer Komogata Maru, with over 400 Hindus on board, arrived here last night and was at once placed in quarantine. This is the vessel, which had been specially chartered to bring several hundred Hindus over to Canada to test immigration laws in regard to which an order has been received from Ottawa to prevent their landing on Canadian soil. It is stated that every effort will be made by the Hindus to effect entry to this country, but all precautions have been taken to deal with the situation should the necessity arise.

Malcolm Reid, the Dominion Immigration Officer, has arrived here to take charge.

Apropos of the trouble threatened over the landing of Hindus, The Pall Mall Gazette, in to-day's issue points out that the yellow races are not wanted, and cannot be introduced without endangering the white settlers' livelihood. If Canada has taken forcible measures to defend her shores, continues The Gazette, it must be remembered that she has given ample warning.

SUFFRAGETTES DESTROY TREASURES IN THE NATIONAL ART GALLERY

Armed Militant Suffragettes Invade National Art Gallery --Fine Pictures Destroyed

London, May 22.—The "Will Women" of the Women's Social and Political Union, the militant suffragette organization to-day continued their terrorizing tactics by making two separate attacks on the National Art Treasures.

The turmoil of the battle in the vicinity of Buckingham Palace, where a column of determined women yesterday attempted to reach the King with a petition and came into violent conflict with the police, had barely subsided when early this morning a woman armed with a loaded cane slashed five masterpieces in the National Gallery.

Almost simultaneously another woman damaged a picture hanging in the Royal Academy of Art. Both women were arrested.

A little later the Magistrate, before whom were brought the 57 women arrested in connection with yesterday's disturbances, was compelled to suspend the proceedings because the accused created so much din in the police court that nothing could be heard.

Valuable Pictures.

The pictures damaged at the National Gallery were a "Madonna and Child with infant saints," a "Portrait of Girolamo Malatini," "Saint John and Christopher and the Doge" a "Landscape with the Death of St. Peter" and "Christ's Agony in the Garden." Apparently they were not irreparably injured.

The painting gashed at the Royal Academy was entitled "Primavera" by George Clausen, a Royal Academician.

Rooms Were Thronged.

As Friday is a students' day at the National Gallery all the rooms were thronged with young artists engaged in copying masterpieces.

DESPONDENT WOMAN COMMITS SUICIDE

The body of Mrs. Daniel Dwyer of Norwood, was found early yesterday in the Roman Catholic cemetery, lying across the grave of her husband, who died several years ago. It is thought she committed suicide during the night, as a bottle containing carbolic acid and a paper cup was found only a few steps from where the body lay. The body was discovered about six o'clock by Mr. Geo. Powell, who lives next to the cemetery. She was lying with her face upturned under a parasol, and had every appearance of having merely reclined on the mound of her husband's grave for a rest

As the parasol was not overturned, the woman could not have had a severe death struggle. Her purse is said to have contained over $100, so that pecuniary trouble did not lead to her rash act. No inquest will be held as it was clearly a case of suicide.

ELECTORATE MUST DECIDE THE ISSUE, SAYS MR. BONAR LAW

House Should Know Amending Bill Before Asked to Vote --Discuss Alterations

——Electorate must decide —— ——

London, May 22.—Replying to Premier Asquith, following the clash with speaker Lowther yesterday, Bonar Law to-day declared that if the House had any doubts as to the necessity for the adjournment, that doubt must have been set at rest by the speech of the Prime Minister, who had completely forgotten that not the present majority of House of Commons, but the electorate, was the tribunal which would settle this question.

In asking the Government to disclose their proposals, they were simply asking for what had never before been refused. He did not doubt that the Prime Minister desired a peaceful settlement, but from first to last, whenever he had made proposals in that direction that moment he came up against his Parliamentary majority. If he really wanted settlement, would not the reasonable and obvious course be to let the House of Commons know and discuss and decide upon what alterations were to be made in the bill? Why did he not take that course? Because the Nationalists would not permit him. The course which the Prime Minister had adopted was an absolute insult to the House.

Everyone knew that the only interest in the discussion, that day was not the Home Rule Bill, but the situation that had arisen, and which depended not on the bill, but on the amending proposals which the Government intended to introduce.

HANDBOOK KEEPERS OUT ON $1,000 BAIL

Alleged Men Had Business on Corner of Richmond and Victoria

Toronto, May 22.—Edward Gleeson and Lorence Munro, charged with keeping a betting place, appeared in the police court to-day and were adjourned till the 29th on $1,000 bail each. It is alleged that for some time the pair, by a trickey device, have been carrying on an extensive betting business at the corner of Richmond and Victoria streets right under the noses of the police.

The methods employed by the two it is believed, provide that confederates in an automobile or motor cycle pass from time to time and relieve the man stationed at the corner of the money placed as bets with him.

EYES OF AZURE REALLY COLORLESS

Why Some Eyes Appear Blue and the Sky Seems the Same Shade

Are your eyes beautiful, heavenly blue? Yes? Then the scientific fact is that they have no color—beautiful or otherwise—at all! The very same thing is true of the clear sky over us, which is, in fact, absolutely colorless, despite its apparent turquoise hue! But a girl's pretty pink cheeks, for instance, really are pink. There is true red color in them.

For a long time scientists have been puzzled by these startling color contradictions. The explanation, however, has proved most simple—it's the explanation of the logic of the spectrum of the rainbow.

Perhaps, as you know, we can see an object only when sunlight or some artificial light strikes it and is thrown back from it to our eyes. These "rays of light" as we call them, which come to our eyes from the object we see, are, of course, really trains of ether-waves which vibrate rapidly through the air. In each "ray" of light there are several kinds of waves—some short, some long.

The shortest of these have a length of only one-thirty-ninth of the thousandth part of an inch! When these short waves strike our eyes, we see blue. Waves a little bit longer give us the sensation of green. And the longest ether-waves which the nerves of our eyes are "tuned" to pick up make us see red. Now, we all know that when blue rays come to us from a flower, the flower is really blue. How is it then that the beautiful blue eye is really an eye without color?

Because, scientists have found, the iris of the eye—the colored part—is full of myriads of minute particles of matter which act just like tiny mirrors and reflect rays of light. But these mirrors are so small that the longer light waves pass around them. Only the very shortest of the light waves, which are blue waves, are intercepted by them. These waves are thrown back to our optic nerves by the little mirrors. And so the eye we are looking at seems blue. If the minute mirrors weren't there, we wouldn't see the eye at all, because there would not be any rays of light thrown back from it.

So it is with the azure dome of the sky. The air is full of millions of tiny dust-like particles which catch the short blue light waves, and reflect them in a thousand different directions. So, from the vast expanse of the sky above we receive an almost infinite number of blue light waves, and the heavens seem to our eyes a beautiful azure, while in fact they are without color at all, being full of nothing but transparent air.

WHERE TO MARRY

Quebec the Most Expensive of the Provinces

The Province of Quebec is the most expensive place there is in which to be married by license. This is because the Province puts a tax on marriage by license. Six dollars is drawn down every time a license is issued by the Government. The total cost is eight dollars. Two of these go to the issuer of the document. This money does not go into the general fund of the Province, but is devoted to the higher Protestant educational institutions, and is placed at the disposal of the Educational Board. It is given in this way because Roman Catholics do not marry by license.

The tax amounts to many thousands of dollars every year. In one office alone in 1913 no less than 800 licenses were issued. Undoubtedly the total would be in the neighborhood of $100,000.

In Ontario the Government charges nothing for the privilege of getting married. The license costs two dollars, but that goes to the official who issues the document. This, it is understood, is the usual method.

Another curious feature, and one, it is maintained, should not be struck from the code, is the fact that the happy couple must be bonded. The bridegroom going to the issuer of licenses is astounded, if he has not learned of the law, to find that he must bring two householders who will go bond for him for $800 each, to show that there is no reason why the marriage should not take place. It is to prove that neither of the parties have previously been wedded, that they are of age, or if not, that the consent of the parents has been obtained. It is merely a matter of form. There are no records known of any bondsmen being sued for the amount of the bond by the Province or by an irate parent. Nevertheless, the bond must be given.

MIXED FARMING POPULAR

West No Longer Devoted to Growing Wheat

"Western Canada is turning to mixed farming instead of exclusively raising wheat," said Geo. Bury, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific.

"I have seen no evidence for a long time that is more encouraging for the future of the West. The farmers are not pinning their faith to any one crop, and, what is more, they are not draining the fertility of their land by lack of rotation of crops from year to year.

It is nearly certain that there will be about 2,000,000 acres more under cultivation this year than ever before, and although the effects of the money stringency have certainly been felt in the West as elsewhere, there is a solid foundation for the prosperity of the Western farmer that cannot be disturbed by the flutters of the stock market."

AN ATTRACTIVE DESIGN FOR PLAIN AND FIGURED MATERIAL

Tunics of brocade or moire over skirts of plain satin or silk are being worn by the very young girl as well as her older sister. For the younger girl these tunics are often colored and the foundation skirt of black. It is very effective to have the predominating color in the figured material repeat the color of the skirt; this is perhaps more often done than to have them contrast so decidedly.

Number 7903 is developed in rose taffetas; the tunic is of rose taffeta with a dark harmonious figure woven in. The skirt is in peg-top design and there is a gracefully arranged velvet girdle that lends a distinctive touch to the frock.

In size 36 this design requires 4½ yards of 42 inch material.

Taffetas range from 33 to 45 inches in width and may be purchased from $1.25 and up.

Number 7506 is a dainty frock for a little maid. It is developed in white cotton voile trimmed with a bit of embroidery and a few buttons. This apron effect is very modish for small girls just now.

For a child of ten this pattern requires 3½ yards of 36 inch material with 1½ yards of net for the separate guimpe.

These cottons may be purchased from 45 cents per yard up.

Number 7903—sizes 34 to 44.
Number 7506—sizes 8, 10 and 12.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

34 YEARS IN MINE

Chinaman Make Pile and Becomes Citizen

Out of the Omineca after 34 years spent in gold mines, Ah Luk, a Chinese, has returned north to his Siwash wife and young son. For the first time in his life he traveled on a railway train, got his first sight of an automobile, street cars, electric lights and all the conveniences of the modern city.

In Vancouver Ah Luk made application to become a Canadian citizen as he never intends to return to China. He plans to send his young son to Vancouver to school.

Ah Luk went into the Cariboo mining district when he was 17 years old. Later he travelled into the Omineca, where he has been placer mining ever since. He is settled on Germansen Creek where his summers are spent in washing the golden gravel, his winters in trapping. On Vital Creek in the early days he took out $11,000 in one season. His gains from mining are now more modest.

Twelve years ago, the lonely Chinese miner fell a victim to the charms of Josephine, a belle of the Babine Indians and they were married by a missionary priest of that country. This marriage forms an effective bond to keep him in British Columbia and he has given up all hope of ever seeing China again.

From Hazelton, Ah Luk marched to his cabin, a distance of 187 miles, with supplies for the trip carried on his back.

The Province of Alberta has a coal area of 16,218 miles, with an estimated quantity available for consumption of 90,000,000,000 tons.

Feigned Dumbness

The Kirkintilloch Police are on the track of a man who has been perpetrating an ingenious fraud upon the public. Feigning dumbness and by using the deaf-mute alphabet, he succeeded in disposing of a number of prize-drawing tickets at sixpence each, the drawing to take place at a number in Kelvinhaugh street which does not exist.

Wife Fond of Novelettes

In a divorce action at Edinburgh James Wilson, thirty, a laborer, said not long after his marriage he came home frequently from his work on the night shift, and found no breakfast ready for him. His wife was fond of lying in bed in the morning reading novelettes, and she practically took no interest in the house. Divorce was granted.

HAPPINESS IN A HOME

How a Housewife May Help to Avoid a Spirit of Discord

Here are some ways for the new housewife to please the new husband —or for the older housewife, either, for the matter of that, but, if she didn't begin when she was new the chances are she won't reform:

Always serve hot foods in hot dishes and cold things in cold dishes.

Serve meals on time.

Keep the table linen clean.

Don't wear old street clothes for house gowns. A seven-cent print or lawn looks much better than a half-worn-out silk or broadcloth in the kitchen.

Learn to make good coffee, broil a steak and mix French dressing at once.

Spend some of your spare time studying cook books, menus and food principles.

Learn at least one new dish every week and introduce it into your menus.

If you never have gone or can't go now to a school of domestic science ask your mother, aunt and grand mother to teach you their favorite dishes.

Form a housekeepers' organization and meet once a week to exchange housekeeping ideas and recipes. Such a club affords more real pleasure and profit than any of the so-called amusement clubs. Take turns meeting at the different homes. The woman who entertains demonstrates and serves her favorite dish.

Make it a point to have order and cleanliness reigning supreme when your husband returns from his day's work.

It is the duty and privilege of every wife to convert into happiness and a home such conditions and materials as are at hand.

His "One-Hoss Shay"

When the history of London street traffic is written, it will probably be recorded that Lord Rothschild was the last person to ride daily through the City in a brougham. Motor omnibuses are all careful to give the blue brougham plenty of elbow room, for every driver on the road knows Lord Rothschild's carriage, and thinks kindly of the generous donor of pheasants who rides inside. Although he is now in his seventy-fourth year, Lord Rothschild is regular as a clock in his attendance in the City. About four o'clock in the afternoon the blue brougham takes him home again to Piccadilly.

IN LOVING MEMORY

Anne Hinderd, and all missionary pioneers.

Margaret Godolphin and all who have kept themselves unspotted in a corrupt world.

Elizabeth Fry, and all pitiful women

Agnes Jones, and all devoted nurses.

Queen Victoria, and all noble queens

SKATING MADE EASY

No Falls and no Feeling of Insecurity For Beginners

Learning to skate either on ice or rollers is a difficult job—and yet it can be done if the beginner will take the trouble to make himself a device like that shown in the sketch. It is made of ¾-inch gas piping with a furniture caster fitted at the bottom of each leg. One end is left open for the skater to enter. The work of learning to maintain one's balance on skates is then easy, as the frame will keep the learner from falling and yet it moves about as easily as the skates

Wool Wastes Dangerous

Because of the danger of explosion Hamburg forbids manufacturers to keep much wool waste on hand unless they have special buildings for it, requiring them to keep it in a municipal storehouse.

Japs Never Swear

A lecturer in the Edinburgh Philosophical Institute recently said that there were no "swear words" in the Japanese language, and that one seldom heard angry words, and never cursing or swearing in a Japanese crowd.

British Money

"If Britain had not sent us the money we would not have had three transcontinental railways," said E. R. Wood, in an address. "Instead of carving out new provinces we would have had the mounted police still watching cattle thieves and keeping whiskey traders away from Indians. Instead of Niagara propelling our street cars and turning the wheels of industry in Toronto we would have had the Falls in their original wasteful grandeur and a small city here with antiquated services."

OUR POINT OF VIEW

Some married men know so well what home rule is that they are taking no interest in what is going on in Ulster.

In China the prohibitionists are rather stern people. In one province it has been made lawful to shoot any man under 40 who is caught using opium.

It is only fair to say that the new tribe of savage Indians in Brazil discovered the Hon. Ted Roosevelt at the same time he discovered them, but they are not boasting about it.

It is the part of wisdom to exercise care in wording an advertisement. The Manitoba store keeper whose notice in the newspaper read: "Anybody who wears our shoes will have a fit," was puzzled by the decline of his business.

Not Taken Seriously

Hon. H. R. Emmerson, the Liberal Member for Westmoreland, B.C., is evidently a diligent seeker after notoriety. His latest public utterance is an attack upon the appointment of Prince Alexander of Teck as successor to the Duke of Connaught, the present Governor-General.

The public is not ignorant of Emmerson's anti-British sentiments.

This is the man who read the United States Declaration of Independence in the House of Commons last session during the Naval Aid debate.

This is also the man who now declares he is an out-and-out Free Trader, though for years he held an office in the late Laurier administration and never a breath of free trade doctrine passed his lips.

His next outbreak will be awaited with curiosity.

An Innovation in England

The city of Leeds, Eng., has been having such trouble with its civic administration that it has decided to adopt the general manager plan. This will be the first city in England to embark upon the experiment. What Leeds has decided to have is an efficient administration, not only of the public utilities but also of the various departments and offices. It is the internal administration that the city finds the most dissatisfaction with and it is to be probed into and put upon a satisfactory footing. The corporation employees became such a powerful factor that they were enabled to order a strike of such magnitude that all the public works were held up for a considerable time. The employes, it is true, lost in the end, but this was directly due to public indignation. Citizens actually turned out, took over the cleaning of the streets, running of cars and a dozen other functions. It has now been decided by the people of Leeds that the way to save money and improve administration is to concentrate responsibility and authority. The adoption of the manager system is expected to attain this desirable end.

WHEN A YOUNG MAN BUILDS A HOUSE

Text: "When thou buildest a new house, then thou shalt make a battlement for thy roof, that thou bring not blood upon thine house, if any man fall from thence."—Deut. 22:8.

A new house is being built! The man bought the lot three years ago just after his marriage, and he has been making weekly visits to it ever since. He has been seen stepping it off, marking the boundaries of the prospective house, planting a tree, grading a lawn. His wife and he have been drawing plans and debating the size of parlor and dining room. She has been insisting on having enough closets. Now the house is going up. It might be said that it is being built by saying "No." You might stamp "No" on every brick. Every dollar going into that home has meant a refusal. Did there arise a suggestion to indulge appetite, to buy luxuries, to go to high-priced amusements, to take expensive vacations? "No, we must save our money for the house."

Now the house is going up. The roof will on by Saturday. The plasterers will soon be busy. The plumbers and the painters will soon do their work. Ah, there is a thrill in the phrase, "when thou buildest a new house."

There is a bit of sociology in it too. These Jews were just entering Canaan. This was a law for a new nation. The first thing to do was to build homes. A temple and a palace would come in due time, but homes came first. Happy homes make great nations. If only France had had more kings like Henry IV! He gave the kingdom prosperity by looking after the condition of the common people. Asked what was his greatest wish for France, he replied: "That every peasant might have a chicken in the pot every Sunday." Wise king! How unlike the hapless days just before the revolution, when Queen Marie Antoinette, on being told that the people were crying for bread, asked, "If they have no bread, why don't they eat cake?"

Homes will make Canada great. I do not rejoice so much in the building of another great hostelry or another immense apartment house. Many married folks are in hotels who ought to be in homes. Hotels are poor places in which to bring up children. And not to want to have babies is a crime against God and against Canada. Divorces come out of hotels and apartment houses. But the snug little homes that are going up will make Toronto great. The sod houses of Alberta will make Canada great. I bade good-bye to two young giants who were going up to Saskatchewan with their widowed mother last month. A sod house, twelve by fourteen, with one door and two windows, is to be their home. All right. Hang up the motto, "God Bless Our Home." The wheat fields will soon be bringing them enough to build a little palace. Meanwhile, that mud house is a frontier headquarters of civilization and Christian culture.

A new house ought to mean a new start. It is a time to take stock, a time to improve manners, to leave bad habits behind, and set up a new standard of conduct. "Wife, I promise never to come into this house staggering!" That was the vow of a man who had disgraced his family in the eyes of the community. They moved to another part of the city to start afresh. He has been as good as his word. "Husband, in our new home I will never be petulant and fretful." The wife, also, has been as good as her word. Their moving day has been a blessing.

"Then shalt thou make a battlement for thy roof." This Mosaic law is a wonder. It goes into the most minute details. It has the definiteness of a Twentieth-Century list of city by-laws. What to do when you find a bird's nest is important enough for two verses. They had to build a railing, a parapet, about the edges of their flat roofs. As they spent much time on top of their houses, the railing was important as a precaution against accident. Do you see that little gate at the entrance of you verandah? That means that there is a little toddler in the home, just able to venture out on all fours. The gate is to fence him in. Somebody said, "Better a wall on the top of the precipice than an ambulance at the bottom."

Put up your railings, then, in the new home, for there is danger. Somebody may fall overboard. The possibility is lessened by your precautions, and if the battlement is there, the blood of the injured will not be on your head.

Build Reverence as a parapet for the north wall. I mean by that, respect for authority, submission to God, to parents, to coutry. Children have rights. Somewhere I saw a sermon on "Children' Rights." It went on to say that we have been talking enough about "Woman's Rights," the rights of labor," "The rights of corporations," but no one has mentioned children's rights. It proceeded to say that children have a right to healthy birth, to early correction, to necessary punishment, to fresh air, to good books, to salutary surroundings. What a wise preacher was he who preached that sermon. Children have a right to be taught that God sees and protects and rewards. Teach them a prayer and a hymn of praise. Have them meditate upon God, and let the fact of a personal Providence be the basis of their religion.

Respect for parents goes hand-in-hand with reverence to the Heavenly Father. "What have I done to have such a rebellious son?" lamented a mother when her twelve-year-old lad ignored her commands and left the room, giving the door a slam as a parting challenge. Well, I could have told her what she had not done. She had not impressed Charlie, earlier in his childhood, that her will was law. When she said, "Now, Charlie, stop that noise, please," and Charlie continued the irritation, she did not take decisive steps to impress upon the young lord that one telling was sufficient. Instead she repeated and repeated her feeble plea, finally capitulating before his sovereign will. All this because she had made a foolish resolution never to chastise her children. Charlie knew of the resolution, and took advantage of it. Therefore, he did not honor his mother, and the keystone fell out of the arch of home authority and home happiness. Your will, parent, must be law! But your will must be good will. It must not be whimsical. When the child knows that your refusals are for his good, he will respect your authority.

How glorious it is when children honor their parents. I was called upon to go to a hospital and pray with a young man who was dying. He had fallen down an elevator shaft and had broken his back. He knew he was dying. "Say, parson, I'm a goner," he said, in his crude vocabulary, "an' you'll git the job of putting me under ground. Don't waste many words on me, but tell 'em about my mudder. She brought up us four boys. She went out washin' to git our grub. Say a good word for her." It turned out that he had been a hero, taking care of his mother and younger brothers. When she entered the room, the scene was one that made even the stout-hearted policeman, who had come in to enquire after the lad, break into tears. The lad was so tender, even in his dying gasps. "Dinnis," he faltered, reaching out for his brother's hand, "I'll give ye me watch if ye'll take care of mudder. Is it a go?" Dennis promised, and the loyal son died in peace.

Put up Honesty on the east side. Some folks think they have taught their children to be honest when they really haven't. They have simply told them not to steal. And stealing they define, by inference, to mean leaving cash drawers untouched. The conductor went through the street car to collect fares. He didn't notice the woman and her child who had just entered, and he didn't put out the box to receive the tickets she held in her hand. When he had disappeared, the woman quietly put back the fares into her hand-bag. The little girl snuggled up close to whisper: "Mother, you didn't have to pay, did you?" That was all. At least it was all that any of the passengers noticed. But the child emerged from the car with an unconscious dishonesty, probably for life, handed her by her dishonest mother. If in ten years that daughter should be arrested for shoplifting, her mother would probably lament over her ill-rewarded efforts to teach her children to be honest.

With honesty must go unselfishness. Better far to have your children err on the side of liberality than to allow them to be grasping and unreciprocating. From a verandah a young father and mother were watching their little boy marching across the lawn in the glory of his first pair of trousers. He took an occasional nibble from a plate of sliced oranges which he had placed on a little table. The tiny maiden of two summers, living next door, came toddling over just as he was helping himself to another mouthful. Do you suppose he offered her a slice? On the contrary, he stood guard over his property, munching hard all the time. The parents looked on without the least thought of correcting his fault. Finally, when the little girl made a faint effort to help herself, he seized the plate and carried it to his mother who held it while her young glutton stowed away the remaining pieces. Now, that boy will develop a selfishness which will be a terrible handicap to his whole career. How easy it would have been to induce him to give little Marjory a piece of his orange. And how soon he would discover that there is a holy pleasure in sharing his dainties with others.

Put Sobriety on the south wall. "What, another temperance sermon, Mr. Stauffer! Don't you think you're playing on that string overtime?" I sometimes imagine, by the way that some men turn over, tired-like, in their pews, when this subject is mentioned, that such is their unspoken word to the preacher up in the pulpit. Yes, another temperance sermon! It is a necessity. With all our talk and our voting, it does not seem possible to get the fool to listen. While I am writing this sermon, into my office comes a man to enlist the pastor's help. Help to do what? To get back his wife! Three such cases have I had this week. A parson's work is manifold. He must be lawyer, doctor, public letter-writer, policeman. Where is the man's wife? Gone back to her father's farm. What has arisen between them? A bottle of whiskey. The bottle of whiskey has knocked the beefsteak out of the home. The bottle of whiskey has bared the parlor of the piano. It has done more than that. It has, on occasion, smashed the chairs, hurled oaths across the room, broken a woman's heart. All this in two short years of married life. Too many temperance sermons? Let me preach another. It shall be short. It shall be to young women. Young woman, there is no use starting a home unless it is a sober home. Otherwise you will not have a home, but a hovel. Young woman, before you say "Yes," will you use your sense of smell? Find out what he drinks. You won't sober him by marrying him. You owe something to yourself, to your pedigree, to your unborn children. Don't marry him if he likes whiskey. Don't for the sake of your whole life, start by marrying a whiskey bottle with a young fellow tied to it. That is my temperance sermon.

Put Love on the west side, the sunset side. Get love in your own soul, man of the new home, and it will be get love. Cultivate the soft tones. "Be gentle and keep your voice low." Be sympathetic, and don't scold. Teach the children to love something outside of their own selves. To love self eats out the soul. I bought a galvanic battery, one of those electric cure-alls that you imagine will do away with doctor and drug bills forever. Among the directions was the caution: "Never put the two handles of the battery together, for that makes a short circuit and consumes the power." That is what self-love does. When a man is consumed with selfishness he creates a short circuit. Your love must pass through something outside of yourself. Then it will come back to you a hundredfold. To get the children to love a cat or a dog is a gain. To teach 'em to love men is all-important. To curb their criticisms of people, to put the best construction on the acts of others, to see the good in men and ignore the evil, to dwell on noble qualities and watch for them, all this is to give your children an inheritance far beyond and above estates of land and bank deposits.

COMES A TRIBUTE TO DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

William Nash, Well-Known Farmer, Tells How They Cured Him After Two Year's Suffering.

Marchbank, Kings Co., N.B., May 23.—(Special.)—After two year's suffering from Kidney Disease, William Nash, a well-known farmer here, is a well man and like many another in this neighborhood, he is shouting the praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"My trouble started from a strain" Mr. Nash says, "and for two years it gradually grew worse. My appetite was fitful, I had dark circles around my eyes and my skin had a harsh dry feeling and itched and burned at night. I was troubled with headaches, cramps, in the muscles and stiffness of the joints. Rheumatism finally developed and I was a sick man generally, when I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. They helped me almost from the start, and two boxes cured me."

Dodd's Kidney Pills simply cure sick Kidneys. They cured Mr. Nash because everyone of his ailments is a symptom of Kidney disease. Anybody who has any two of these symptoms needs a Kidney remedy, and the greatest of all Kidney remedies is Dodd's Kidney Pills.

THAT EXAMINER OFFER

Editor Morning Times.

Sir.—I saw in Thursday's Examiner a big display splurge whereby that organ offered a reward of $5 for the best decorated premises for the coming visit of the Duke of Connaught, Canada's Governor-General. Surely the Reform paper must be hard pressed for want of publicity when it has to offer five big dollars to reward a citizen who will and, would gratuitously show his patriotism without such a puny tribe.

What To Do For Sore Throat

SOME GOOD ADVICE BY A SPECIALIST.

As there seems to be a regular epidemic of Sore Throats this winter, the following valuable recipe will be welcomed by many. A sore throat is a dangerous complaint to trifle with, as the bronchial tubes lead directly to the lungs and the disease often travels along these tubes into the lungs and there sets up an inflammation that invariably results in a serious lung trouble.

At the first sign of soreness in the throat or around the tonsils you should secure from your chemist 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength) and take this home and add to it ¼-pint of hot water and 4 oz. of moist sugar. Stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will give instant relief and will usually cure the worst throat within 48 hours. The healing and soothing qualities of this formula are unequalled, and every person suffering with a bad throat should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.

Important—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want Double Strength: your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c. to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, P.Q., who make a specialty of it.

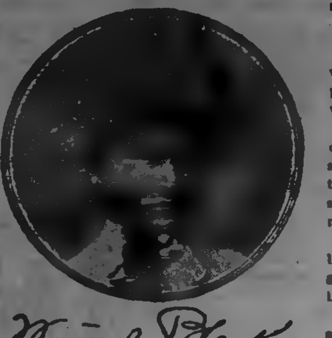
Is Real Happiness Possible When Social Extremes Wed?

By WINIFRED BLACK

(Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)



Winifred Black

THE good woman has married the bad man, and everybody's wondering about it. What in the world made her do it; and why has he picked out this particular kind of woman?

Does she see something in him no one else can even guess at, and is she going to sacrifice her life trying to bring that something out and make something worth while out of the bad man?

Is the man really not so dreadfully bad after all; has he wanted to be good all the time, and wouldn't anybody let him?

The woman he married first wasn't such a very high type of woman. She was just suited to the bad man—so every one thought—and the bad man grew worse and worse, until even the woman who seemed to be just suited to him couldn't stand him any longer.

She divorced him—and now he's found this good woman to take his hand and walk out into the world with him. How will it turn out?

What do you guess?

How close they come together, the good motives and the bad ones! Who was it who first said that extremes meet? How true it was when he said it—and how true it has been ever since.

How the Second Wife Acts.

The worst man I ever knew married a warm-hearted, generous, high-minded, faithful little soul—and broke her heart within a year. He did worse than that. He broke her character, too, and she ran away from him with a fool who fell in love with her.

And the man married again—a little, scheming, mercenary, selfish, cold-blooded creature without a drop of warmth in her whole character. She was pious because it was the proper thing to go to church. She belonged to various boards and charity committees because it is "smart" to be charitable.

She was and is evil-minded, cruel and slanderous—but she has made the man she married completely over.

She married him for his money, but he thinks she married him to reform him. She has alienated him from his own father; turned him away from his own mother; induced him to send his own little boy away to boarding school—when he really is too little to be away from home a minute. She's taken the only decent quality the bad man ever had, a kind of reckless courage, and turned it into cowardice—and she's made a "model husband" of him.

He was cruel to the woman who really loved him. He's kind to this creature. He was selfish to the most unselfish creature who ever breathed. To this green-eyed, grasping, penurious woman that he's married he is generous to a fau...

Oh, he's made over, completely made over, and it isn't love that has done it—it is indifference. I wonder if he was worth the making over?

"I Told You So," THEY Said.

What became of the first wife? She died, poor foolish little thing, in an attic somewhere in some foreign city where she had gone to hide her misery—and they buried her, they say, in an unmarked grave in the potter's field.

The fool who fell in love with her died, too—by his own hand, as such fools so often do.

And everybody said, "I told you so," except those who said, "There, what could you expect?"

And the man whose cruelty and whose selfishness and whose bitter meanness were the real cause of all this misery didn't say a word.

I suppose he hadn't a word to say. Perhaps he doesn't know the truth at all. We so seldom do know the truth when we are a vital part of it.

How interesting life is and what a world of strange affairs we live in. It would be rather dull if we were all angels, wouldn't it?

The good woman who has married the bad man—I wonder if she really knows why she really did it—and if she could have helped it if she had really tried. The bad man—I wonder what he thinks about his real motive for marrying the good woman.

It will be interesting to see how it all turns out, won't it?

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE.

Dear Annie Laurie:

There is a friend of mine who is a good girl in almost every way, but there is one thing about her which I do not like. She is what I call a "flirt." She has been going with one boy now for some time, and while there is no engagement, she acts as if there was. She even kisses him in public. Because I do not like her to act like this when she is with me she thinks I am old-fashioned. Do you think I am?

OLD-FASHIONED

WELL, what if you are old-fashioned, there's no crime in that, is there? The next time your friend tells you that you are old-fashioned because you don't like to see her make a fool of herself, just tell her that there's nothing new-fashioned in folly, or in disgrace, or in sorrow, and just as sure as she goes on as she is doing now she is going to meet both sorrow and disgrace somewhere not so very far down the road.

Can't you girls ever get it into your heads that boys are the most inconsistent creatures in the world, except men?

A boy will do everything he can think of to make a girl give him a kiss, and if he really loves her he's all the time hoping in his heart of hearts that she won't do it.

Your poor little friend is making a poor little goose of herself. Be her friend, anyway—it won't be long before she will need some one like you to help to comfort her when the boy who is making such a fool of her now falls in love with some girl who is not so easily cajoled.

Useful Hints for the Housewife

By Ann Marie Lloyd

SAUSAGES can be prevented from bursting by rolling them in flour before frying.

When rinsing children's clothes, add a little alum to the water, as this renders them less liable to catch fire.

It is difficult sometimes, when using essences for cakes or sweets, etc., to measure correctly the number of drops required. If a finger is dipped in water and the rim of the bottle wetted in one place, the essence will be found to drop quite easily.

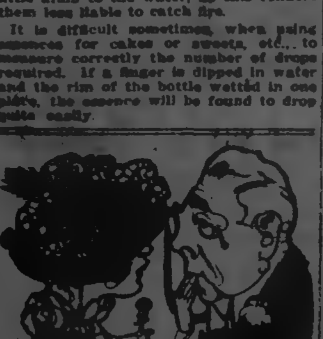
To clean decanters, mix half a gill of vinegar with a handful of salt. Put a little in each decanter and shake well. Rinse in clear water.

An egg that has been too lightly boiled may be put into the saucepan again, even after the top has been taken off, if an ordinary pin be dropped into it in a conspicuous place, when it will be found that none of the egg has been lost.

To improve the flavor of currants and sultanas which are to be used for cakes, place them in a bowl, pour boiling water over them, and leave to soak all night. The fruit swells to twice its former size, but should be drained from the water and dried in the oven before being added to the other ingredients.

When threading a needle take a white envelope, stick the needle through, and draw it down until the eye is visible and you will thread the needle like magic. The white surface of the paper sets the eye into relief, as if it were magnified.

Where screws are driven into soft wood and subjected to considerable strain, they are very likely to work loose, and it is often very difficult to make them hold. In such cases, the use of glue is profitable. Make the glue thick. Immerse a stick about half the size of the screw, and put it into the hole, then put in the screw and drive it home as quickly as possible.



Amused.

"Did she smile when you told her you loved her?"

"Well, er, not exactly. She laughed."

VANITY :: :: :: By Michelson

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved

WHEN the Scriptures say "All is vanity," it isn't fair to leave out the question of degrees. All things and all men and women are not equally vain. Oh, no!

Leave some latitude for the peacock with his pompous strut and his air of superiority when his tail feathers are not spread.

Leave some latitude for the girl who is perfectly SURE that she is IT. How satisfied she is that nature and the milliner and the dressmaker and the hairdresser and the manicurist have ALL done well—done BETTER than they ever combined to do before. It is fun to feel that way—to be absolutely satisfied. Really it's hard to pluck up courage to rebuke some kinds of vanity, since it brings such great content.

Unfortunately time and circumstances get busy. Sooner or later it gets a JOLT. Even the peacock must moult—and there comes a last time when its feathers fade and its beauty goes.

NO. 82

LEONA DALRYMPLE

ON the 19th of August I departed for the lake with considerable misgivings. To spend my vacation there was not particularly desirable, I must admit, but Mary had ordained it thus, and therefore it was up to me to be gallant and self-sacrificing and please her if possible.

Mary met me at the station. She was, I thought, a little constrained in her greeting.

"Well," I inquired after a while, when our commonplace chat had gotten on my nerves, "you're not yourself. What's the trouble?"

When a woman—and particularly a wife—grows polite and distant with her family and begins to make smooth, platitudinous conversation, watch out for squalls.

"What is the trouble?" I insisted. "Have the rocking chair brigade gotten on your nerves?"

"Peter!" exclaimed Mary disdainfully. "That sort of remark is awfully bad taste and you know it!"

"Has the grouchy old gentleman with the toe been telling you what he thinks of women who go away for the summer and leave their husbands at home?"

"He's a frightful old pest!" said Mary, shrugging. "Nobody pays any attention to him. He thumps his cane dreadfully at the children and sticks out his chin if you happen to go near him."

"Well, what is the trouble then?" I repeated. "There's something on your mind."

"Oh, no," said Mary, arching her pretty brows listlessly. "Nothing at all."

There was a beautiful pensiveness in Mary's voice, hearing which I was more persuaded than ever that there was something wrong, and I was the guilty cause of it.

"Oh, come, Mary!" I exclaimed impatiently. "Don't let's begin my vacation this way. We've two weeks ahead."

"It's your own fault," said Mary, flushing.

"In heaven's name," I exclaimed, "what have I done?"

"Well," said Mary indignantly, "it was that last letter you wrote, if you must know."

"There wasn't enough of that," said I, "to fuss anybody."

"That's just it," said Mary tragically. "And everybody waiting to find out what you'd say."

"My goodness!" I exclaimed in dismay. "Was I writing to the whole brigade?"

"Another girl and—and I were talking of how careless men are in their attentions, and an old lady said that you couldn't always blame the boys, that sometimes the wives grew indifferent and careless first. Then she said: 'Each one of you write your husbands a good old-fashioned love letter, such as you would have written to him in sweetheart days, and see if you don't get an answer that will bring the color to your cheeks!' And I—I wrote, Peter, I wrote you the most wonderful letter——"

"Yes?"

"And look at the answer you sent. 'It's pretty hot here. I'm well. How are you?' That's every word there was in it."

"Hum!" said I with a horrible sense of guilt. It was a clear bill, and I knew it. I'd been tired and headachy from the heat that night, but there was still another extenuation which I promptly offered.

"You might remember the postscript of that letter of yours," I suggested. "It shadowed all the rest of it."

"What was it?" asked Mary defiantly.

"It said: 'Dear Peter, do send me some more money. I'm broke!'"

There was utter silence, then Mary held out her hand.

"Peter," she said with a hint of tears in her voice, "it's a horrid place anyway, and the women are cattish——"

"We'll leave tonight!" said I heartily, "and go on a trip. Dad gave me [illegible] for a birthday present, and we'll use that."

Secrets of Health and Happiness

How Errors in Your Diet Cause So-called "Heartburn"

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

HEARTBURN is so called because it neither burns nor has anything to do with the heart. Actually this phrase, like Topsy, just "grew."

Heartburn has to do with the stomach and not any vital organs. It is not a serious condition by any manner of means, but is often more distressing than actual organic troubles.

Strange to relate, it is not only an excess of hydrochloric acid that may cause these volcanic and inopportune eruptions from the stomach. Nor is it gas plus acid that does so.

Almost any sort of disturbance, such as muscular spasms, irritating seasoning, liquors, fermenting foods, a redundancy of organic acid, herculean quantities of even the plainest, most wholesome food, and anything not wholly in accord with the peculiar weakness and strength of your particular digestive bag, may cause this condition.

The current idiom, "it goes against my stomach," has much philosophy in it, as well as medical knowledge. For as Bobby Burns put it,

Some hae meat and canna eat,
And some would eat that want it.
But we hae meat, and we can eat,
Sae let the Lord be thankit.

Really, Athenaeus, some thousands of years ago, was filled with wisdom when he expressed the truth that every investigation, which is guided by principles of nature, fixes its ultimate aim upon the stomach.

Whenever this misnamed "heartburn" makes itself felt or otherwise apparent, look to it that something is done in the way of correcting errors in diet, muscular activity, habits of rest, bathing and outdoor life.

Never make the mistake to seek comfort in the flowing bowl. Avoid the ways of Gammer Gurton, who could eat but little meat, his stomach was no good, "but sure," he thought, "that he could drink with a man who wears a hood."

Heartburn is not the consequence of eating to live, but the outcome of living to eat. Those who run after strange gods and worship the false idols of good cheer affect this annoying alimentary sign.

Walk but a block along the highways of hotels and restaurants upon any night of summer or winter, and you will find almost a medley of staccato, pianissimo and fortissimo eructations from the dining and wining habitues.

Gastricward the course of empire seems ever to take its way. With leisure, ease and comfort, even the eight-hour laborer has time to sup less wisely than too well.

The fruit of being a civilized and valiant trencherman is much misery, far from satisfaction.

Proper Care of Parakeets

THE Budgerigar or warbling parakeet, which is brought to America in large numbers from Australia, can be bred either in a cage or aviary, the latter for choice, as, being naturally gregarious, it breeds more freely when several pairs are kept together. If a cage is used it should be at least three feet long, two feet high, and 15 inches deep. Budgerigars do well in an outdoor aviary, being unaffected by frost or snow. Some people advocate the purchase of Budgerigars freshly imported from Australia. But these birds usually breed at a time of year corresponding with the summer in their native land. Winter hatched young ones are seldom of any value. Aviary reared Budgerigars will almost invariably keep to the summer for breeding.

The Australian imported wild birds can be known by their legs being deep blue in color, while the aviary bred ones have the legs more flesh-colored. The hen lays from four to six small white eggs on alternate days. They should not be interfered with in any way. Incubation begins when the first egg is laid so the young ones hatch out at different times. The period of incubation is about 20 days.

King Bright Copper's Bride .·. By Vernon Merry

ONCE upon a time King Bright Copper, ruler of the Pennymites, in the land of the Coins, was hunting lolly-pops in the great forests of his kingdom when there came along the coach of the Princess of the Mighty Dollars on the way to her father's castle. When the King saw her he felt his heart give a flutter and he cried:

"How beautiful she is! She must be my queen."

Later, when he told his wise men of this decision, he was advised that the great Dollar Princess would never marry a mere Pennymite. But the King was determined, and commanded that their state prisoner, Counterfeit Dollar, who was very, very bad, be brought before him.

He gave the bad Coin a potato bath so that he looked like a good Dollar, then sent him off to get some special news at the Dollar palace.

By and by Counterfeit returned and said the princess would drive along the same road the next day and would have a Dollar soldier with her as a guard. King Bright Copper was very much worried until he had a grand idea. Again dressing up Counterfeit so that he looked like a good dollar, he had his men take him to a sandbank and change him into four perfectly good Quarters. Then, with 19 of his own soldiers and the Quarters, he lay in wait for the princess.

Along she came finally, and out King Bright Copper and his soldiers sprang, stopped the horses and overpowered the Dollar soldier. (four Quarters and 19 Pennymites are too strong for one Dollar any time, you know). Then the King bowed low before the princess.

Oh, she was beautiful, so large and round and bright: King Bright Copper's heart went pit-a-pat so fast that he couldn't say a word, only keep on bowing.

"Why, you cute little King," said the princess. "I wonder why you have stopped my coach. Oh, I know." She looked down at her side at pretty Lady Cent, one of her maids, who always went with her on her drives. "You are in love with my maid. How romantic! Well, you shall have her, if she is willing."

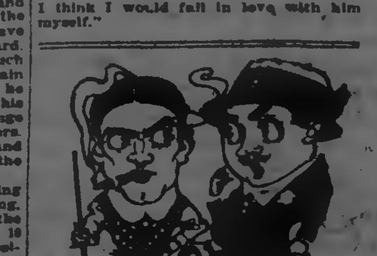
Pretty Lady Cent, who had been away from her native land of the Pennymites for a long time, gazed upon the King of her country and blushed. Not before she had flashed her big copper-colored eyes at him, though.

The King saw the glance and the blush, and all at once his heart began to flutter more than ever.

"It will make me very happy," he said at last, "to wed the Lady Cent."

Whereupon he assisted her from the coach and mounted her upon a white horse while all his soldiers cheered. As they started off for his castle the princess of the Dollars sighed:

"It's too bad he is so small. If he were only about a hundred times larger I think I would fall in love with him myself."



Done Intentionally.

"He seems to lie as a matter of habit."

"No, I think it is a matter of system."

How People Feel
When They Have
Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ½ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4830, or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

STUDY OF FOLKLORE

Songs and Dances of the Past Which Might be Preserved

Mr. Alexander Fraser, president of the Canadian Folklore Society, spoke of the practical work the society could accomplish in a field almost unoccupied by others. He laid emphasis on the fact that the purpose of the society is the serious and earnest collecting and recording of the folklore of the many races mingling in Canada and making it valuable for succeeding generations as well as the present. It is then very plain that there is a [illegible] historian and [illegible] but there is a [illegible] history deals [illegible] than people. [illegible] of rulers and the laws that [illegible] from them, of wars that [illegible] because those laws were broken, of countries conquered by fair means or otherwise, and treats generally of the bigger things that affect the world and its dependencies. Folklore takes in the smaller things, the customs, manners, superstitions, songs, dances, tales, and the like, that enter into the life and homes of the people or "folk" of a country. The reservation of all of these are of much assistance in enlightening us as to the influences at work in the development of a nation. The study of folklore in Canada would bring us into intimate connection with the great tribes of Redmen, and where today we regard them as savages we would see that every head on their wampum belts, every design of their totum, as well as the different dances with which they celebrated defeat or victory, had everyone, a distinct and separate meaning. The folklore of the picturesque habitant could not but prove intensely interesting and illuminating, supplying as it would, the link between the more serious "relations" and the perhaps more colorless life of the present day. Then, too, the Italian, Hungarian, French, Pollock, Ruthenian, and others from Europe, not to speak of our more immediate English, Irish and Scotch, have everyone their folklore, and in every case knowledge arising from research would prove of value. A branch of particular interest is the national music and dancing of a country, that is, of the people before they become modified by intercourse with others. The dances especially are, in many instances, most expressive and beautiful, those of the children imitating in some cases the occupations of the peasantry, such as scattering and sowing the seed, and in other ways throwing light on the ways and customs of the people. These dances show a freedom of movement and a poetry of motion such as are altogether unknown to our tangos and two-steps.—The Toronto World.

Steam For Removing Creases

Steam is an excellent thing for removing creases from gowns or coats that have been packed away. Fix up a line in the bathroom, hang the creased clothes on it close to the window, then let the hot-water tap run until the room is full of steam, leave for an hour or two, then dry the clothes in the open air and press on the wrong side with a warm iron.

To Prevent Dust

Spread damp cloths over each register whenever the furnace is shaken.

Gradation

Heaven is not reached at a single bound,
But we build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,
And we mount to its summit round by round.

I count this thing to be grandly true;
That a noble deed is a step toward God,
Lifting the soul from the common clod
To a purer air and a broader view.

We rise by the things that are under our feet,
By what we have mastered of good and gain;
By the pride deposed and the passion slain,
And the vanquished ills that we hourly meet.

Wings for the angel, but feet for men!
We may borrow the wings to find the way;
We may hope, and resolve, and aspire, and pray,
But our feet must rise or we fall again.

Lemon Foam

Three eggs, whites only; two cups boiling water; the juice of two lemons; one cup sugar; two tablespoons corn starch and a pinch of salt.

Bring the water and sugar to the boil, add the corn starch after blending it in water, and the salt. Boil for five minutes, then add the juice of the lemons. After the mixture cools somewhat add the whites of the eggs, well beaten. Stir occasionally while cooling, and then pour into a mould. Make a boiled custard with the yokes of the eggs and serve with the foam. You can use the rind of the lemons in the custard if you like, but it would require to be strained.

Steamed Pudding

Two eggs; small half cup of sugar; one half cup butter; three-fourths of a cup of flour; one small teaspoon soda. Beat the butter to a cream, add the sugar and soda, then the beaten eggs, afterwards a dessert spoonful of jam of any kind, and lastly the flour. Steam in a buttered mould for two and a half hours. Be sure and mix as directed

Vegetation at the Poles

The rapid growth of vegetation in polar regions, despite the brief summers, is attributed to the strength of the electric currents in the atmosphere.

DON'T HAWK, SPIT, SNEEZE, CURE YOURSELF! BREATHE "CATARRHOZONE!"

Gives Instant Relief, Clears Out Nose, Throat and all Breathing Organs.

In this fickle climate repeated colds very easily drift into Catarrh.

The natural tendency of Catarrh is to extend through the system in every direction.

Exposure to cold or dampness intensifies the trouble and nasal catarrh is the result.

Unless a complete cure is effected, inflammation passes rapidly to the throat, bronchial tubes and then to the lungs.

You can't make new lungs— hence Consumption is practically incurable. But Catarrh can be cured, except in its final and always fatal stage.

Catarrh sufferers, meaning those with colds, sore throatl bronchial trouble, etc., can all be cured right at home by inhaling "Catarrhozone."

In using Catarrhozone you don't take medicine into the stomach— you just breathe a healing piney vapor direct to the lungs and air passages.

The purest balsams and the greatest antiseptics are thus sent to every spot where catarrhal troubles exist, germs are killed, foul secretions are destroyed nature is given a chance and cure comes quickly.

Colds and throat troubles can't last if the pure healing vapor of Catarrhozone is breathed sneezing and coughing cease at once, because irritation is removed.

A Fire At Keene.

Mr. William Kelt of Keene was a heavy loser by fire yesterday. From some unknown cause his barn caught fire. It with its contents of grain, machinery, etc., were entirely destroyed. The loss is placed at $1500 with a small insurance.

Too Much Water.

Merchants along Hunter street were very much annoyed yesterday morning. The fire brigade had flushed the pavement of that thoroughfare. All the filth of the street was washed on the sidewalks thus giving a lot of cleaning to the merchants to look after.

G.T.R. Track to Be Moved.

The "duckett" or little house where from the G.T.R. gates are worked on Simcoe street, has been moved back a few feet. This is to make room for a change of track whilst or before the paving operations are in process.

A Belmont Burglar.

Havelock Standard: Jas. Haughton who resides near Blairton, came home unexpectedly on Saturday forenoon and found the locks smashed on his residence. Entering the building he discovered a thief busily engaged in ransacking the house. Haughton knocked the burglar senseless with a crow-bar, but finding nothing missing, he let the fellow go unmolested.

Nora Medium in Good Shape

Yesterday Messrs. Martin Storey and Alf Switzer gave Mr. Frank Montgomery's mare "Nora Medium" a work out on the track. The gallant little beast did a half mile in 1.09. The mare will be shipped to Colborne today to take part in the races there. She will be entered in 2.50 class, half mile heats.

St. Andrew's Church Concert.

Last night a large and well pleased audience gathered in St. Andrew's church, when one of the best concerts of the season was presented. The chief attraction was Mr. Oldfield who took a leading part in Judas Maccabaeus, presented here recently. The choir assisted materially in making this concert a success.

Vandalism at G.T.R. Station.

The G.T.R. baggage man complains bitterly of the vandalism of boys at the garden beside the station. Boys get over the fence and both pick flowers and destroy shrubs. The baggage man has a spanker, cut from a shingle with which he beats a tatoo on the north side of such boys as he can catch.

Boy Killed in Well.

Lindsay Warder: A sad accident took place at Lotus, a small hamlet in Manvers township, yesterday, when the little two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Kerr was killed by falling into an open well. Few particulars are to hand, but it appears that the young fellow when discovered was quite dead, with a gaping wound in the temple, and it is surmised that in falling he struck his head against the stone wall and was killed almost instantly.

He Would Be an Actor.

Yesterday evening a young local man who had seen and appreciated the colored minstrel show at the Royal Theatre, became enthused. He was what a cowboy would call "lit up." He had been "out with the boys." He determined to join the minstrels. A cork was burned and his face blackened. However, when he looked at his transformed countenance, he got "cold feet" and decided to hold his old job.

Canada's First Copyright

Yesterday a Times representatike had a chat with Mr. J. L. McIntyre, who, as noted in yesterday's issue, has presented a box of S. Davis & Sons "Perfection" cigars to every member of the Petes making a home run at Riverside park. Mr. McIntyre noted that when in Ottawa a few days ago, he had occasion to look over the books of the copyright branch of the Department of Agriculture. He he discovered that the first cigar registered in Canada was one of his own firm's named "Havana Whips." The record was dated 1863.

A False Alarm.

Lindsay Post: Acting Chief of Police Short had a busy time of it looking into reports sent into police headquarters during the day. In the morning a lady on Bond street reported that a man answering the description of the desperate character wanted by the Montreal police, had come to her residence for something to eat. Later on in the morning another message was received from the corner of Lindsay and Durham streets stating that a man answering the description of the individual sought was in that locality, anxiously awaiting the arrival of a freight to take him east. Chief Short and High County Constable Thornbury visited the locality but the man had struck off on foot for the Electric city. Chief Thompson of this city has received a telegram stating that the man wanted there had been arrested at Montreal.

A Recipe for Suicide

Yesterday morning a Times reporter was talking with an old citizen, whose father, in 1850 established the first drug store in Peterborough, on the spot where the Bank of Commerce now stands. The citizen, speaking of suicide, remarked "What a foolish, painful way the carbolic route is for solving "Death's Mystery." If you are fool enough to want to "get out:' here's the easiest, cheapest and least painful way. Get a quart bottle. Set a cork that fits it alight. Place the smouldering end of the cork in the bottle. Hold the bottle upside down. When the latter is full of smoke, recline in an easy position. Pull out the cork and inhale the smoke. This will fill your order for death at once and painlessly."!

It Was Not A Belt.

Last night at 7.11 a young lady stepped off a George Street car.

Dame Nature had been generous in her gifts to this girl. Dame Nature knows that a girl is never happier than when a lover's arm encircles her waist. To make this give doubly happy the old lady of fortune gave her a waist that can fill two arms thus giving her a chance for double the bliss an average girl gets. This girl's bust measure might, but we don't guarantee accuracy, take a tape line stretching from Norwood to Lindsay.

As she daintly placed one little foot on the pavement she suddenly reached half way from that tootsie to her equator and remarked "Its gone!"

Just then a local bank clerk waiting for the car picked up one of those feminine garments that no man knows or should know about. Handing it to the lady, he remarked. I think Madam this is your belt." The young lady, in her confusion, did not hear his remark and said "Thanks very much, I think a lot of them garters!"

Complaints re Engine Whistling.

Local residents living near the G.T.R. tracks are complaining bitterly about the unnecessary and continued whistling of engines. A local citizen asked a Times reporter yesterday "Is there not a by-law prohibiting this nuisance?" He said that some engineers seem to almost go out of their way to make a discordant whistling.

It is possibly but fair to the engineers of that company to add that much of the whistling is caused by a man named "idiot" who persists in running across the track when the gates are down. Should Mr. Idiot be killed and no whistle of warning sounded, the enginee driver would be responsible.

KELLY-SPRINGFIELD TIRES

PRICE!

I know no joy or pleasure,
My life is full of pain,
No sooner do I pump my tires
Than flat they go again.
My fabric's cracked to pieces,
The tread is worn to naught,
I haven't gone a hundred miles,
With these punk tires I've bought.
A glib young man approached me
And talked to me of price.
The money which he said I'd save,
Has gone like last year's ice.
If cheapness was their virtue,
Then prate it not to me,
I'll pay the price for KELLY'S
And from trouble I'll be free.

STORM ABOUT TO BEAK

The storm against Home Rule is about to break. It may involve the whole Empire. Protestants do not fear Catholics as men, but they decline to put themselves under the knife of the Jesuits and under priest rule. Let any Protestant in Peterborough ask himself this question: "Am I prepared to give up my individual independence and place myself under the absolute control of a brother man? To do so I must surrender to fear." Will Ulster do it? Never.

REMEMBERED THE DOG IN WILL

Montreal, May 23.—Strongly attached to his faithful dog, Samuel Cornes in making his last will and testament provided that the dog should not long survive if he were the first to be called.

He wrote therefore, "I do hereby will that, at my death, my faithful dog, Dandy, be painlessly put to death and buried and the sum of five dollars be allowed for that purpose."

In his will, now entered for probate, Mr. Cornes also wrote: "I desire that my funeral be as plain as possible, consistent with economy. I do not consider it right for money to be buried."

An English Miller

a hundred years ago—thought he would gain trade and name if he could give people WHITE BREAD instead f dark, the only kind anybody had ever known before hat.

So he removed the bran from flour! This made the our white and pretty, and people took to WHITE READ.

But what really happened when the miller threw out e bran-coat? The flour was robbed of practically all e MINERAL SALTS of the grain—the particular elements of most vital need for preserving normal balance f nerve and brain.

Scientists now know that this lack in white flour and roducts made from it is responsible to a great degree r a host of present day ills, such as nervous prostration, constipation, kidney trouble, brain fag, and so on.

U. S. EXPECTS CROP OF 880,000,000

Washington, May 23.—Estimates given out to-day by the Department of agriculture on the bumper wheat production show that the total 1914 production of winter and spring wheat combined may reach 880,000,000 bushels.

This is a result of a combination of the largest acreage ever recorded, with the promise of the largest yield per acre in years. There is not a single state in which the winter wheat prospect is unfavorable. The department of agriculture is figuring that the spring wheat crop will be about 250,000,000 bushels.

The amount of spring ploughing was above the average this year, despite the tardiness of spring.

WILD BEASTS ON HUMBER TO POSE FOR MOVIES

Bottle-Fed Lions to Snarl Before Camera in Big Productions

Toronto, May 23.—A real African jungle, with wild beasts of every description especially trained to look fierce at all times, will soon be established on the banks of the Humber River. The A. R. Williams property at Swansea, adjoining the Kingsway has been purchased by a moving picture syndicate who intend to open and operate a fully equipped studio for the production of photo plays. The property comprises four and a half acres and the price paid was $20,000. It is understood that a large number of wild animals will be imported to give a realistic touch to the many tropical scenes that will be enacted on the banks of the once peaceful Humber.

An old hulk which has been lying at the foot of Church street for a long time has been bought by the company and will be transformed into a Titanic for sinking purposes only. Lake Ontario and the surroundings of Toronto are said to offer exceptional advantages for thrilling "movie" settings, and several big productions will be pulled off in Toronto within the next summer.

MR. J. H. BURNHAM M. P. NOT AT CONVENTION

Mr. Burnham, M.P., will not return from the Convention on June 1st. It had been his intention to join in welcoming the Governor-General, but as the Convention is now called for that day he will remain at Ottawa. This statement is made in view of rumors that have got in circulation.

TRENT CANAL TO BE MADE DEEPER

$1,500,000 to be Spent in Dredging Between Peterborough and Lake Simcoe

It will be good news to the people of Peterborough and district contiguous to the Trent Waterway to learn that the canal is to be deepened and enlarged between Peterborough and Lake Simcoe in order to correspond with the remainder which is of later date. The estimated cost of the enlargement is $1,500,000.

The Minister announced in the House on Friday night that the entire canal would be finally completed at the increased depth within four years.

The present contracts are all under way and it is now a matter of time and not money. The lower sections between Hastings and the Bay of Quinte will be opened for traffic this autumn.

ELECTION JULY 6

The Times has received information to the effect that the Ontario Legislature will be dissolved at once, the elections have been fixed to take place on Monday July 6. While the above is not official, it comes from a source that may be regarded as fairly authentic.

A whirlwind campaign is therefore assured, with Sir James Whitney as Conservative leader.

CANDIDATES ARE ARRANGED FOR TWO DOUBLE RIDINGS

Excitement in Conservative Circles Dying Down--Constituencies Nearly All Settled

Toronto, May 23.—The redistribution, which caused quite a commotion in city Conservative circles, shows signs of abatement and expected strenuous competition for the various seats is not so likely to occur. It was learned on Saturday that two of the double-barreled constitutiencies have been arranged. These are now known as S. E. and S.W. Toronto. For the former, the members slated to come before the convention are E.W.J. Owens, M.L.A. and Thomas Hook, and for the S.W. J.J. Foy, M.L.A., and George Gooderham, M.L.A.

For the N.E. and N.W. double rings a fight is expected.

For the N. W., W. D. Macpherson and Thomas Crawford are in as running mates but Trustee Conboy is regared as likely to break up the combination.

In the N.E. Dr. Pyne and W.K. McNaught will be put up, but Mark Irish has indicted his intention of having his name go to the convention.

The two wing ridings Riverdale and Parkdale, are still unsettled as to candidates. As a final compromise W.H. Price may take Parkdale while the many aspirants in Riverdale will be left to fight out the matter at the convention on Tuesday.

ENTIRE FEDERAL GARRISON OF 300 PUT TO DEATH

Washington, May 23.—Mexico City despatches to diplomatic sources here to-day reported that when Constitutionalist troops captured Tepica several days ago, they put to death the entire Federal garrison of 300 Officers and men. These despatches also confirmed reports that Gen. Obregons forces were hastening on to Guadalajara and there was great apprehension among foreigners in that city. Bandits from the mountains were reported to be menacing the city.

FINE LINER MAKES HER MAIDEN TRIP

Capt. Rostrum Brings Alaunia Into Port of Montreal.

Montreal, May 23. A spic and span new liner, the Cunard liner, Alaunia, came into port tonight on the first voyage of her career. She is a sister ship of the Andania, which made her maiden trip here late last summer. On the bridge of this fine ship was Captain Rostrum—the hero of the Carpathia, who raced his ship through the ice of the North Atlantic when the stricken Titanic was calling for aid.

The Alaunia is a splendid ship of 13,400 tons and will sail on the London and Southampton service of the company.

SHOT AT WHILE DRAGGING BABES' BODIES FROM RUINS

Wives of Colorado Miners Make Charges of Fendish Cruelty Against State Militiamen

Washington, May 23.—With her three children burned up through the fendish destruction of the miners' tent camp by men believed to be militia. Mrs. Holland wife of the Colorado miner, told several senators informally to-day how, while she was dragging the bodies of her babies out of the ruins, militiamen shot around her feet possibly to make her dance.

This was one of the details unfolded to Senators Kern, Kenyon and Martin to-day by three wives of miners who waited upon them.

Mrs. Pearl Jollie declared that she had seen men in uniform, the inference being that they were members of the State militia, dip a broom in buckets and wash something on the tents, she added I think it was oil. Mrs. M. P. Thomas, also the wife of a miner, said: I did not see the men put oil on the tents but I did see men in uniform touch fire to the tents.

DIED FROM A BAD ACCIDENT

A peculiar and very sad accident occurred at the Grand Hotel, George street, on Saturday evening about 7 o'clock.

Mr. S. P. Batty, a lineman of 266 Romaine street, was sitting on the stairway rail on the first floor talking with a young lady. In some way he lost his balance and fell over to the foot of the stairs, fracturing his skull. "First aid" was given and Ranger started to walk home. However, his injuries were so serious that he was taken in the ambulance to St. Joseph's hospital. Here he died at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The deceased was imployed at Messrs Mathew's Pork Packing establishment. Funeral announcement later.

WIFE'S PLEA WINS THE DAY AND RUTTAN HAS SURRENDERED

Weary and Hungry, Murderer Gives Himself to Police, Who Had Waited All Night for His Return

Bracebridge, May 23.—William Ruttan, starving and in tatters, gave himself up to the police at his home about 9 o'clock this morning. All night long he had watched the two men who stood guard waiting for his return. When they, chilled and tired, had gone to a neighboring farm house to get warm, he slipped into his own house. Excepting for two or three hours after he had been shot at last night, he had never been more than a mile away from the scene of the double tragedy, his home where he had taken the lives of George Coutermanche and Mrs. Alfred Coutermanche last Wednesday.

Ruttan's wife was waiting for him when he slid into the house at 6 a.m.. The day before she had been told in a long talk with Rev. Findlay Crowther, who presided at the victims' funeral services, that she should persuade her husband to give himself up and let justice take its course. At 8 a.m. she had succeeded in getting him to offer himself to the officers, and as Detective Greer, of the Provincial police and Constable Fieding of Bracebridge were returning to their vigil. She came out of the house and told them. She said her husband didn't want to hurt anyone. He had not the strength to put up a fight if it would have availed him anything. On the verge of collapsing to the ground, he came to the doorway and officers took him in charge. They brought him to Bracebridge Jail, arriving at 6.30 p.m. The arm cuffs were not needed on the trip.

When Ruttan came home the last time he was without his gun, but his pockets were crammed with ammunition. Somewhere in the woods he had left his gun, he had no idea where. He said he had come home, to get something to eat, but through famishing, had waited for hours for the police to leave their watch

BELLEVILLE REGIMENT ARRIVED PRESENTED FINE APPEARANCE

Arrived Very Early Sunday Morning and Camped at Central Park

Belleville has cause to be proud of her gallant 15th Regiment. The boys marched well and looked well. They are for the most part a sturdy lot of soldiers. The 15th arrived here shortly after midnight and marched direct to Central Park where tents had been placed in readiness.

Yesterday morning a church parade was held to St. John's church, the 57th leading the way. Here the Chaplain of the 57th, Rev. Canon Davidson made a few patriotic remarks. After church the return parade was led to the Central Park by the 15th Regiment, headed by its fine band, and its picturesque looking fifers. The Belleville boys marched in fours; then came the 57th headed by its brass and bugle bands. The local boys marched like seasoned veterans.

Belleville Officers.

Captain Carman and his mushroom helmet, attracted much favorable comment among the ladies yesterday. Captain B. L. Hyman, paymaster, is rumored to have lost $8,000 on the grounds. "But what," asked a brother officer, "does father care for a nickle?" This, however, is proven to be a canard, as the gallant captain wore his usual golden smile.

Gigadier-Bandle Barrows asks Peterborough people to kindly refrain from calling him "Steve." The B.L. is some warbler. His speciality is rag time.

Capt. McFee, "Fizzy," is posing as an alderman. It is stated that the city council will tender him a reception on Tuesday. He assisted very materially at Divine service yesterday. Peterborough has never heard a finer barely-a-tone than that of the gallant Corbyville officer.

Captain Cook "Carpenter" was certainly there with the hammer. Capt. Cook, of Belleville, disclaims any relationship to Capt. Cook who didn't find the North Pole, nor did he climb Mount McKinley.

Capt. P. Allen had to use a glove stretcher to get his helmet on after hearing local girls speak of his Company. Percy is always there with the goods.

Capt. Harold Holten starved himself to get his boys their proper count of sandwiches.

Capt. Jimmy Doyle, with his usual poor (?) luck made a success.

Notes.

Many more medals are to be seen among the men of the 57th than in the Belleville Regiment.

The officers of the 15th Regiment wear the Duke of Argyle plaid, the late Duke being Honorary Colonel of that regiment.

Rev. Canon Davidson marched with the 57th Regiment as Chaplain.

The officers of the 15th Regiment, Belleville, are registered at the Oriental Hotel for meals.

LONDON DEFEATED THE PETES BY 2-1

The game on Saturday at London was a fast one, the London team again beating the Petes by one run. The boys played air-tight ball and seem to be getting back into their old form. The score stood 2—1.

NORWAY IN CANADA

Camrose is a fair sized town, situated in Central Alberta on the Canadian Pacific Railway Line, and is, generally speaking, a Norwegian town. Its first name was Bakken, after a Norwegian who first land upon which the town is built. Mr. Bakken came here from the United States like many others to get a farmstead. He looked for a long time, because an old fortune teller had once told him that would get a quarter section of land a river cut off one of the corners, and where he could find plenty of and wood, and that on this quarter a town would be located. After having looked around for a long Bakken came out from Wetaskiwin and found a quarter which in every respect covered the fortune teller's description. He settled down here, and while his friends laughed at him he ed by it as the only settler in that vicinity. When the Canadian Pacific Railway was built the station located on his land, and when the was surveyed he became a very man. He is now dead. To-day as above mentioned, is the for three railways, but it has its Norwegian stamp. Looking over the Map of Camrose one will that the streets have Norwegian names, such as Christiania Avenue, vorsen Street, Ibsen Street, Bakken Street, Paulsen Street, Dahl Street, Thomsen Street, Christine Street, and of sub-divisions there are many with Norwegian names, such Bakken addition, Dahl addition, addition, etc. This is not the evidence of the Norwegian influence. In looking over the Voters' List this year's election it is found of the 3?? [illegible] the town of Camrose, 25? were Norwegians, and taking all of the Camrose district it is that out of 1400 votes 975 are Norwegians. As evidence that also of Camrose this town is as a Norwegian centre, it be mentioned that (1) When the Lutheran Churches determined build a college for the education Norwegian boys and girls, was selected as the site, and has the only Norwegian College in the British Empire.

(2) The National Ski Association Canada has its headquarters in Camrose. This Association is composed of Ski Clubs from Winnipeg to the Pacific Coast.

(3) The "Home to Norway Association," working with a view to securing the largest possible number of tourists for the Centennial Celebration in Norway next year, has its headquarters at Camrose.

(4) The Central Committee for Canada's memorial gift to Norway, has also Camrose as its headquarters, from which point the organized work throughout the country is carried on.

There are also many other institutions of special Norwegian interest, consequently a number of prominent Norwegians reside here:

(1) Edward Thomsen from Trondhjem, Norway, now one of the most prominent men in this district, was the one who, together with Mr. Bakken, first settled in that district. He was for a long time Government Land Guide, and later on bought land in this vicinity, and now owns four sections close to Camrose. Since then he has also acquired a large ranch in the Peace River district, in all, 16 sections.

(2) Torstein Hoyne, from Hoyme, Vestre Slidre Valders, was also one of the earliest settlers here. He came from North Dakota and is now a well-to-do man. His homestead was for a long time a well known stopping place on the road to Wetaskiwin. Now he owns several sections of land and has one of the best tilled farms in this district.

(3) Spokklie from Guldrendadalen is also one of the early successful settlers. He has now sold his farm and resides in Camrose.

(4) O. B. Olsen, now town clerk, is also one of the early settlers.

(5) I. Dahl, formerly Mayor of Camrose, is a man who has promoted Norwegian interests in the twelve years he has resided there.

Among the later prominent settlers may be mentioned Professors I. B. Lavick, John P. Tandberg and Odegard, all Professors at the Norwegian college. Among the Norwegian business men may be mentioned: Albert Sanders, druggist; Gulbrand and Ole Hoyme, contractors and builders; E. Scotvold, real estate; N. Gullikson, real estate; Evensen, barber; A. Vassboe, real estate; Moyhre & Murray, merchants; Peter Borud, jeweler; also Thorlief Iverson, who is President of the Ski Association, President "Home to Norway Association," Secretary for the Mindegave Committee, etc., etc.

A good many more could be mentioned, but the above will suffice as a demonstration of what has been accomplished by people who came to the country absolutely empty handed, and who are now in comfortable circumstances. The above is just mentioned as a striking proof of the ability of the Norwegian race to progress, and also as a proof of the wonderful fertility of our adopted country, and I feel safe in saying that all who have settled here have, in these years time, become well to do, and are continually adding to their material welfare.

The 7th of June at Camrose

In the last years the Norwegians in the vicinity of Camrose have gathered in that city on the 5th of June to celebrate the great political change that took place in Norway on the 7th of June, 1905.

The 7th of June celebration in Camrose commences with organ music in the Norwegian Church in the morning. The brass band serenades all arriving trains, and at 10.30 services are held in the Church. After the service the delegates gather to luncheon at the college. In the meantime all places of business have closed their doors. At 2 o'clock the crowd gathers at the college campus where the parade is lined up, from which place it passes through the principle streets of the town, and finally the procession ends at the Exhibition grounds. At this place the speeches are made, and the balance of the day is spent enjoying the different sports.

As a rule it is one of the most prominent Norwegians who delivers the oration of the day and speeches are also delivered by the Mayor of the town. The sports consist of baseball, football, boys' races, horse races, etc. The festivities are in the evening closed with a piano concert.

Picnic on Pretty Hill

Pretty Hill, a Norwegian settlement, 12 miles north east of Camrose is a favorite picnic place. There is always a great gathering there of Norwegians from all over the district. We drive from Camrose in the morning in smiling Sunny Alberta weather and come to Pretty Hill at lunch time. The menu as a rule consists of the following:—

Kalvesteg.
Faar i Kaal.
Lutefisk.
Rommegrod.
Surmelkaringer.
Lefse.
Gammelost.
Mysost.
Fenaknog.
Spegepolse.
Spegesild.

and also a good many more national dishes. During and after the luncheon the band plays, and when the luncheon is over the program commences.

To begin with there are speeches, and singing and then the sports commence. At this time the sport is more of a Norwegian character, with the exception of baseball. In the evening the dinner is served, and then we have the beautiful drive back to Camrose. This is summer sport and our countrymen must be admired for their willingness to participate in everything of that kind. This is also evident in the winter when the ski sport commences. The attendance at the ski sport is so great that one is surprised where all these people come from. Last winter there were 2100 gathered at the ski sports in Camrose and above 4000 in Edmonton, and the interest in the sport is ever increasing. The absence of great hills in our country makes it necessary to build timber scaffolds for ski runners to get a start, and these scaffolds serve as well as the steep hills in Norway. The demand for skis is so great that it has been necessary to establish a ski factory at Camrose and we also have a school where Canadians and others are taught the sport. This year the National Ski Association of Western Canada will have its yearly sports at Edmonton, where ski runners from all parts of Canada will participate, and the competition will be greater than ever. The Edmonton Ski Club have for that reason built a scaffold 92 feet high, and have improved a steep hill so that we have good reasons to believe that jumps as high as 100 or 125 feet will be made. The world's record is now 152 feet.

Asker Settlement

Asker is, as the name indicates, a genuine Norwegian settlement, situated between Ponoka and Bashaw and those who settled there about eighteen years ago, found some of the best land in all of Alberta. Wherever you go in this district, you will find well tilled fields and large substantial buildings. Standing in front of Mr. Henry Krefting's house, you can see for miles around, and you can from this place count 75 Norwegian settlers who all came from Asker in Norway, so it is not surprising that they have given it the name of Asker. In this colony you will find Carl Paulson, born in Gisle agent, near Valder, in Asker, in 1854, and who came to Wisconsin in 1872. He left Norway with the steamship Harold Haarfagre, and had one of those voyages which a man never forgets. Mr. Paulson lived in Wisconsin until 1898 and then came to Wetaskiwin and continued as a blacksmith, and took a homestead in 1898. He is now owner of several sections of land and operates a large stock farm, and has always the largest crops of anyone in that district. His nearest neighbor is Christian Hoibak, from Volden, in Asker, Norway, and these families who were neighbours in the old country are now neighbors in Canada. Hoibak is also one of these industrious men who is prospering in this country. Hoibak this year had oats that went 104 bushels to the acre, and wheat 43 bushels to the acre. From the Hillside of Paulson's living house, one sees the farms belonging to Hoibak, and a large number of other well- these people descend from some of the known farmers, and a good many of best families in Norway.

Old Mrs. Thea Krefting showed me pictures, which date back to the year 1600, of some of her ancestors. These pictures have been kept in the Krefting family ever since that time, and many attempts have been made by relatives in the old country to secure these in connection with the family history, but the old lady and her relatives here treasure them so highly that they have refused to part with them. She has had the paintings photographed and copies sent to Norway.

This colony has also another interesting old lady named Mrs. Aas. She was past 70 when she without company left Asker, Norway, for Asker, Canada. A few weeks ago when I together with Rev. Froiland, came [illegible] her place she came out out to the road and handed a parcel to the preacher, saying then, "Here is a present for you, because you were the first Norwegian I met in Canada." It was a hand-made pair of [illegible]. I asked my friend about it and he told me it was just four years ago that he met her at the station of Ponoka and that she had come all the way from Norway alone, and had asked for directions to the Asker colony. Everything considered, the Asker settlement in Alberta is the largest and best and most Norwegian settlement, with beautiful homes and the best of soil.

THE GREAT LAKES

We all know in a general way that Lake Superior is the largest and Lake Ontario the smallest of the Great Lakes, but the relative facts are scarcely known to the average person. While Lake Michigan ranks second in size, being forty-five miles shorter than Lake Superior, it is twice as deep as its greatest depth, the figures being 900 feet for Lake Superior and 1,800 feet for Lake Michigan, so that in cubical contents the latter far outreaches Superior. Lake Huron's greatest depth also is a hundred feet more than that of Lake Superior, so that the greatest is not superior to everything after all.

Lake Erie and Lake Ontario are comparatively shallow, with maximum depth of 204 feet and 412 feet, and yet we should not like to fall overboard in either of them. In width—maximum figures—Lake Superior comes first with 160 miles, Huron second with 105, Michigan third with 84, Erie fourth with 60, and Ontario last with only 53 miles of greatest breadth.

In comparison with its area, Ontario leads with a drainage of 29,769 square miles for its area of 6,700, the others being Erie, drainage, 33,680, area 23,000 square miles; Michigan, drainage, 70,000, area, 23,400 square miles; and Superior, drainage, 85,000, area, 32,000 square miles. Drop in elevation is very gradual, Lake Superior being 600 feet above sea-level, Michigan 578 feet, Huron 574 feet, Erie 564 feet, and then comes a big drop to 234 feet for Lake Ontario.

How to Grow Old

Don't smile.

Suspect everybody.

Keep your wireless station tuned to rumors, trouble, gossip or misery.

Specialize the grouch habit.

Be afraid of people and things. Imaginary fear is a great producer of wrinkles.

Envy your neighbor.

When you hear of another man's good fortune, feel mean about it.

When you sit down to dinner tell your wife and the children what everything costs.

Never mind the pleasant day. Rain to-morrow.

These are sure and positive rules.

SOME SIMPLE FACTS ABOUT THE MOON

A Lesson in Astronomy About Our Nearest Neighbor in the Realms of Space

Did you ever stop to consider that every bit of light the moon furnishes us, is stolen?

The moon is simply a distributing agent for the sun. And the habit of stealing light has become so firmly fixed with the moon that part of the time when it can't get all it wants from the sun it actually steals a little from the earth!

When the earth was a mass of gas and lava-like liquid whirling through space at a terrific rate, a big drop of the material of which it was made formed on one side and was thrown off into space, according to the best theories. The drop that fell off kept whirling, too, as it went off into the air. It followed the general path of the earth, only revolving a bit slower. As the earth cooled, the big drop cooled, too. And that drop became the moon we know now. It is the nearest thing in the heavens to the earth—being only 238,800 miles away.

A person can learn more about the moon by observing it through a simple pair of opera glasses than can be learned about any other heavenly body, studied in any way. A survey shows that it is completely covered with big bumps and hollows. These are great mountains and valleys. In the early days of astronomy it was believed that there were seas and lakes on the moon. This has since been disproved by closer investigation.

Of course, then, there being no water on the moon, there is no life there. That is the reason there are no changes in the surface, astronomers say, although it was believed for a long time that there were changes.

The mountains, some of which are very high, one at least reaching an altitude of 20,000 feet, are most interesting to study. More than 500 of them have been mapped by astronomers and half of these have been actually named.

The Earth, as it Would Look to an Observer on the Moon.

Besides these mountains there are immense plains. These are mostly given the names of seas and the names are far more poetic than those of the waters of the earth. Thus we find the Sea of Tranquility, the Sea of Showers, the Sea of Serenity, and the Bay of Rainbows.

We see only half of the moon. The other half has never been seen by man. And the reason for this is that the moon moves around the earth in exactly the same time that it takes it to spin once on its axis—27 days, 7 hours, 43 minutes and 11¼ seconds. As the earth turns the same way there is always just one side of the moon turned toward us.

The moon gets its light from the sun.—In other words, it simply throws a reflection of the sun's light. But few persons are aware, however, that it also reflects light from the earth. There are certain times when it does, however.

You see, the entire surface of the moon is not always where the sun's light will be reflected to the earth. This is what gives it the different shapes we see. Suppose, for instance, we observe the moon in what we call the "new moon" shape. The sun, is just shining on one edge of the great moon-ball. But if we look closer we see a rather dark shape that continues the spherical outline of the whole moon. This is sometimes called the "old moon in the arms of the new moon."

But that darker reflection, scientists declare, is really the reflection of the earth's light on the moon. Or rather a reflection of the sun's light reflected from the earth. This is of course, not so bright as the direct reflection of the sun on the moon itself.

The most important influence of the moon on the earth is in the action of the tides. This is caused by gravitation and is the force or pull exerted by the rotation of the moon on the water on the surface of the earth. Both the sun and the moon pull the water up as they near the earth. And the fact that the two are pulling, sometimes together and sometimes in opposite directions, is what makes the higher tides—the spring tides—and the less high tides—the neap tides.

Our Point of View

Sir Wilfrid is reported to have stated that he is still standing on the reciprocity platform, but the way he talks makes people believe that he is up in the air.

The good work of the U. S. gunners at Vera Cruz shows that their navy has improved considerably since the historic bombardment of Matanzas, which resulted in the death of a mule.

According to a recent court decision if a stray hen lays an egg in your yard it's your egg and by the same token we suppose that if she gets into your garden and eats the young lettuce it's her lettuce.

"It was an old Indian custom to make the orator hold up one leg while talking, so that when he became weary and brought down the uplifted foot the speech came to an end automatically." If our Ottawa Parliament could be induced to adopt that custom the country would give three cheers and a tiger.

The Hon. Col. Sam Hughes

The Liberals, who started out with a flourish to overwhelm the Minister of Militia, soon abandoned the encounter as hopeless. Instead of confounding him they were themselves brought to confusion at the outset by the statement that a good deal of the increased expenditure arises from his having to pay off debts to the amount of three or four million dollars contracted by his predecessor, Sir Frederick Borden.

Sir Frederick's former associates were stunned by this discovery, and many of them took no further interest in the debate. Moreover, since he took office Colonel Hughes has been drilling more men than were ever drilled before, although at a reduced cost per man, and in other ways has put new life into the militia. Everything connected with the Department has gone up of late—the pay of the soldiers, the cost of the rifles, ammunition, clothing and general supplies. In other days, too the drill halls, such as they were were built by local enterprise instead of, as now, by the Dominion Government. For the modern rifle a range with plenty of space is requisite, anh the cost of land is therefore a much more serious item than formerly; and so with the big areas, such as that at Pettawawa, now needed for manoeuvres.

Colonel Hughes believes that young men subjected to military drill are strengthened physically, mentally and morally; and his aim is to make the drill and its surroundings as attractive as possible. He is not, as some Liberals allege, seeking to bring about universal conscription, but merely to create a reasonably large and efficient force for the defence of the country and the maintenance of internal peace. The sale of liquor in any form in the camps has been banned because it was found to interfere with the proper training of the soldiers.

The cry of militarism raised against the Minister by opponents of the stamp of Mr. Proulx of Prescott and Mr. Carvell of New Brunswick is a mere yawp. It is echoed by some Liberal newspapers in Quebec, but even in Quebec Colonel Hughes is disarming prejudice by his broad, patriotic, and, all things considered, economical management of the force.

WATER TOWER IN WINTER

There has been erected for the Agricultural College at St. Vital, Man., a water tank with a capacity of 125,000 imperial gallons. The structure is mounted upon a tower, the total height being 160 feet. The weight is somewhat in excess of 100 tons. The cost, including foundations, was approximately $16,000. Where such a means of water supply is resorted to in climates that are subject to severe freezing in winter time the main issue to contend with in the design and construction is to arrive at some feasible means to prevent freezing. To this end a riser pipe has been employed. It is built of steel, 6 feet in diameter, the idea being that the diameter is sufficiently large to permit the formation of a natural frost jacket of ice about 3 inches thick on the interior of the riser pipe, protecting the balance of the cross-section from freezing. As an added precaution a 1½-inch steam coil, to the extent of about 100 feet was placed in the bottom of the tank for the purpose of raising the temperature of the water.

OVER NINETY YEARS

But Canada's First Missionary Still Hale and Hearty

At a meeting of the Women's Foreign and Home Missionary Society, at Charlottetown, P.E.I., Rev. Dr. Scott Whittier of Melbourne, Australia, brought greetings from that distant city from Mrs. John Geddie, wife of Canada's first missionary, who was sent from Prince Edward Island to the New Hebrides. Mr. Whittier was surprised to learn that several Presbyterians in Eastern Canada had died through monotony. Considering Mrs. Geddie's experience and the fact that she is now over ninety years of age, her mental faculties are still wonderfully alert.

The Elephant's Bath

The elephant enjoys a bath in the streams and pools of his native habitat, but his lordly brother in captivity finds no such comfort in the bath that from time to time is given him. A trainer thus describes the expensive operation:

It takes a week to carry out the process in every detail. It requires the services of three men and costs $300. This treatment is necessary for a show elephant and, if the animal is a valuable one, the proprietor of the show does not consider the money wasted.

The first step consists of going over the immense body with the best soap procurable; 150 pounds of soap is used, and the elephant's ears are especially attended to. When the soaping and drying are completed, the elephant is well sandpapered, and after that rubbed all over with the purest Indian oil until the mouse-gray skin is supple and glistening.

This last finishing touch is the most expensive part of the whole bath, as it means the application of about $150 worth of olive oil.

This Woman Saw Life

Mrs. Henry Vaughan, wife of a farmer living near Fort Coulonge, had never ridden on a train, had not seen a city for 40 years, and had never seen an electric car till she made a visit to Ottawa recently. On her way to the Capital she rode for the first time on a railway train, and upon arriving at her destination had her first trolley ride. Later in the day a friend took her for a spin in an automobile, and —wonder of wonders—before her return home she saw an airship flight.

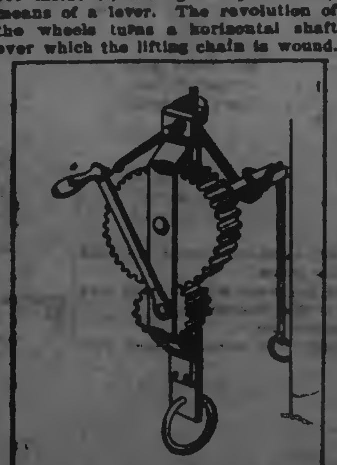
HOISTING APPARATUS

Multiple Gear Revolves the Shaft Which Wraps up Chain

For the hoisting of heavy weights by hand, so to speak, the mechanism pictured here seems to be effective. An iron frame has a multiple gearing set inside it, the gear operated by means of a lever. The revolution of the wheels turns a horizontal shaft over which the lifting chain is wound.



EASY TO LOCK THE WHEELS.

As the shaft revolves and more and more of the chain is wound up the weight on the free end is naturally lifted. A feature of this mechanism is the locking device, which consists of a short chain that can be hooked onto the lever at any time to prevent backward revolution. This is particularly convenient in case the man or men turning the lever should want to stop a moment to rest or for any other purpose.

FAMILIAR PHRASES AND THEIR ORIGIN

"Eating humble pie" is a phrase which really arose from the corruption of the word "umbles" or "numbles," the coarser parts of a deer killed in hunting, which when made into a pie were formerly reserved for the lower hunt servants, while "cooking his goose" is a phrase which originated when the King of Sweden, on approaching a hostile town, excited the contempt of the inhabitants by the smallness of his army. To express this they hung out a goose for him to shoot at, whereupon the King set fire to the town to "cook their goose."

Long ago unscrupulous people used to take a cat in a bag to market, where they tried to sell it for a pig. If, however, a purchaser opened the bag before buying, the cat, of course, jumped out, displaying the fraud. Hence the term "Letting the cat out of the bag."

"Going to the dogs" comes from the East, where dogs are scavengers of the streets, and become so unclean as to be unfit to touch; while the expression, "Tell it to the marines," used to show disbelief in the truth of a story, arose from the fact that when the marines first went afloat they were naturally rather "green" concerning nautical affairs, and someone who related a very tall yarn was told to "tell it to the marines," the idea being that they could be more easily gulled.

It is a curious fact that the phrase "Bald as a badger," owes its origin to authors of the past who had no exact knowledge of natural history, and who, because the forehead of a badger is covered with smooth, white hairs, came to the conclusion that it was bald.

Years ago a theatrical manager of the bogus type had in his company an actor whose strong point was the ghost in "Hamlet." If his salary was not forthcoming on Saturday, this actor would exclaim, "Then the ghost won't walk to-night," a phrase which is still used by actors on payday, and which provides a striking illustration of how a casual remark becomes a common saying.

USES FOR MILKWEED

Science, with practical optimism, tries to find "good in everything," and now points out that we are wasting opportunities by not utilizing our neglected wealth in milkweed. The best fibres of the plant, well known to the birds as nest-weaving materials and to Indians as thread, may readily be separated, however, and when bleached yield a white, silky, textile material, much like flax and even stronger. The woody material of which four-fifths of the plant consists has excellent qualities for paper-making, if treated with a soda solution under pressure. From the seeds may be obtained a large percentage of a drying oil, while the long silky down of the seeds is known to be useful as an upholstering material. It would seem as though it would be well worth while to raise the milkweed as a crop, since it can be grown on land otherwise of little value.

Our worthy city officials and military officers never think of them the men who should be respected as they are in all other cities in the Dominion. a report of the inquiry instituted by the British Government into the cost of living of the working classes in addition to dealing with conditions at home, contained some comparisons of prices in foreign countries and the Overseas Dominions.

The compilers of the report admitted that they had difficulty in bringing together diverse figures and values from all parts of the Empire into a general comparison. Their conclusions, however, if not absolutely reliable, are none the less interesting.

The chief feature of the report was the evidence that the rise in prices is world wide. The rise has been greater in foreign countries, with the exception of France, than in Great Britain. The greatest rise has been in Canada, Austria-Hungary, the United States and Japan. Since 1900 the rise in Austria-Hungary has been 25 per cent.; Belgium, 32 per cent.; Germany, 30 per cent.; Italy, 20 per cent. In the same period the British and French rise has been only 16 per cent. Canada easily topped the list with a rise of 51 per cent. Australia and New Zealand showed comparatively modest rises of 16 per cent.

What To Do For Sore Throat

SOME GOOD ADVICE BY A SPECIALIST.

As there seems to be a regular epidemic of Sore Throats this winter, the following valuable recipe will be welcomed by many. A sore throat is a dangerous complaint to trifle with, as the bronchial tubes lead directly to the lungs and the disease often travels along these tubes into the lungs and there sets up an inflammation that invariably results in a serious lung trouble.

At the first sign of soreness in the throat or around the tonsils you should secure from your chemist 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength) and take this home and add to it ¼-pint of hot water and 4 oz. of moist sugar. Stirr until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will give instant relief and will usually cure the worst throat within 48 hours. The healing and soothing qualities of this formula are unequalled, and every person suffering with a bad throat should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.

Important—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want Double Strength: your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c. to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, P.Q., who make a specialty of it.

You wash dishes about two hours every day. That's one hour wasted!

Dishes get dirty, greasy and sticky and soap will not clean them. Soapy dish water merely cleans the surface, it doesn't dig into the corners and drive out the decayed food particles.

Gold Dust is the sanitary dish washer. It not only cleans the surface, but digs deep after hidden particles of dirt and kills the germs of decayed food which ordinary dish-water overlooks. Gold Dust sterilizes as well as cleanses.

Besides doing the work better than soap or any other cleanser can, Gold Dust will save just half the time you spend in washing dishes.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By Leona Dalrymple

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

No. 83.

Behind the Curtain.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

I SEE more of mother now than I did formerly. It will always annoy Mary I'm afraid to have me stop there on the way home, though her visits to her mother are much more frequent than my visits to mine. It seems to be a characteristic of some young wives to expect the husband to give up his people lightly while she clings more closely to hers.

My evening chats with mother have brought about a great many quarrels with Mary.

"Well, Peter," she will frequently say, "just why are you late tonight?"

I know the tone. It promises trouble long before the trouble is under way.

"Well," I begin, "I did stop to talk with John Hatch—"

"Yes?"

"And after that—since the autumn night was so clear and cold I walked a little toward the sunset. I always like to walk toward a sunset when the winter is just beginning to come—"

Should Men "Explain"?

"Yes?" Still the tone was ominous.

Why must a man account for every belated minute of his time? The very accounting makes him chafe and fret at the chains that bind him. I hate to explain. Most men do. And if Mary wouldn't ask me the minute I appear in the house why I'm late—why, in the course of time, I'd pleasantly volunteer the information without that terrible sense of impatience driving me to a studied self-control. When a man has to force himself to be patient with his wife there's trouble brewing.

Now Mary has several ways of showing her displeasure when I am 15 or 20 minutes late for dinner. One is, not to speak at all, and those tactics nearly drive me crazy. The second is to look martyrish and speak about the food being spoiled. Why is it, I wonder, that whenever I'm late we have some delicacy that must be eaten the minute it's done to preserve its pristine flavor?

Still another is to adopt the lifeless tone of which I have frequently spoken, and which suggests death and funerals and calamities innumerable. It is a very "married" tone of voice. Only a wife may use it to her husband without fear of judgment. When Mary's tone is "married" I feel a cold shiver creep along my spine until it shivers out through my scalp. After that I grow mad and am ready to fight.

"I think your mother's selfish," blamed Mary, the other night. It was a new tactic, and one for which I was not prepared, but I must say I like a clean, robust flash of temper better than a chilly martyrdom that sets my teeth on edge.

A Stubborn Stand.

"Why is mother selfish?" I begged formally.

"She expects you to stop there every night. I've spoken of it before. And you keep me waiting and the dinner spoils—you know very well how it is, Peter!"

"Mary," I said, "we're going to fight this thing out once for all. Just because I have married you doesn't say that I'm going to give up mother and dad. You have all day to visit your mother if you choose, and goodness knows I don't object if you lunch with her every day of the week, but I have only the evenings, and you refuse to go with me then. Therefore, if I am going to see mother at all, I've got to stop there on the way home from business, and that I intend to do.

"I don't want you to speak of it again. I get more genuine optimism out of a half-hour in mother's sitting room by the open fire than I can get anywhere in the world. Mother isn't selfish. She sends me home lots of times before I'm ready to come. And if you'd go with me instead of fostering that curious sense of antagonism you have toward my people you'd never have to wait dinner for I'd only go when you did."

That was my first really stubborn stand since I was married. And, queerly enough, I think Mary respects me now for making it.

Household Hints

By Ann Marie Lloyd

When washing china with gilt upon it never use soda. Rub a little soap on the dishcloth to make a nice lather, then rinse in clear cold water.

A good plan is to keep tablets in glass bottles. A glance tells you exactly what is inside, thus saving time which would be taken up in searching over the contents if put in a box.

Should the inkstand be accidentally upset on the tablecloth or carpet, pour a little cold water on the stain at once. The ink will float on the water, and when the cloth or carpet is rubbed dry no [illegible] will show.

To remove coffee stains, mix equal parts of yolk of egg and glycerine, apply to the stain, and allow to dry on. For a light silk garment the glycerine should be mixed with water instead of yolk of egg.

To make meat cooked in a gas oven juicy, place a jar half-filled with cold water at the bottom of the oven. The steam rising from this [illegible] the air in the oven and prevents the meat from getting [illegible].

To clear a house of beetles, put one pound of powdered borax into a tin with a perforated lid. Dust the house lightly over the floor, on the sinks, and in the cupboards, in fact, every place where the pests are found. They will soon disappear.

THE GARDEN OF LOVE :: By Michelson

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

SHE worked in the garden, planting, pruning, puttering. With a dainty, coaxing touch she nursed the tender shoots, coddling the young leaves, crooning to the baby buds.

The soft spring breeze murmured strange things to her, but never told her the greatest secret of all.

Then all of a sudden all those buds became little Cupids. It was truly amazing. They made her gasp—pleasantly. A delicious thrill stirred her as she had never been stirred before in all her soft life.

Was that a step near by? Surely!—and there HE was on the other side of the wall!

He didn't seem to notice the Cupids. He seemed only to notice her. In fact, it is very difficult to notice anything else when she is about.

What do the Cupids think? You might as well ask plain, ordinary flowers. They never tell. It is the great mystery of the Garden of Love.

When Shall a Woman Leave Her Husband?

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

I HEARD a woman the other day say, "We women should erect a monument to Mrs. Scandee. She showed the proper spirit when she left her husband without a word, as soon as she discovered his affair with that school teacher."

Should we, I wonder?

Don't you remember the time your little cousin made you a visit and was so dimply and clinging and peachy-cheeked that your husband immediately took more than a passing interest in her—had her at lunch down town—sent her notes and flowers—all but lost his head over her?

You thought a lot, but said nothing. Soon the young lady went home and that night husband came to you—his eyes opened—and, on his knees, begged forgiveness.

Little cousin is married now; she married the principal of the high school. She must have shown the principal some of husband's pretty notes, for he glares with jealousy whenever they meet at the church sociable.

Husband always looks terribly embarrassed when the school principal glares.

Never the Same Again.

Now what sort of a goose would you have been to give up your home and your husband and your place in the world for the sake of a sentimental little minx, who didn't know her own mind and who didn't care about any other person's mind?

Happy—of course you were not happy when those things were going on. You were miserable, utterly and absolutely miserable, but they passed, like the baby's croup and little son's bad case of the measles.

You will never be quite the same again as you were when you believed that your husband loved you so deeply that he could never even think seriously of another woman. The world will never be as fair to you again. Something has gone that made your heart sing. But it's a pretty good old world for all that, and your husband—he's just about as good as the average man. Whatever in the world would you do without him after all?

Where would you and your children be today, if you had done what you felt like doing in the first bitterness of your torment and agony?

Drifting, just drifting—a human derelict, marked for every passer-by to see—divorced, deserted, cast out. And your children—what of them?

There's something in marriage besides happiness. There's something in life besides passion.

Who Deserves a Monument?

No man has any right to leave a good woman just because he thinks he's "in love" with some one else; and no decent man will do it—even if his wife is foolish enough to be willing to let him.

There are exceptions to the general rule, just as there always are such exceptions; but they are exceptions—and nothing more.

The general rule is there, and it says that the man who falls in love with one woman after he's married to another is just beginning.

His second love will only be—his second, not his last.

There will be a third and a fourth and a fifth, and nobody knows how many others.

That's the sort of man he is, and by the time he's been through the silly, feather-headed performance three or four times he knows himself for what he is, and does not expect any one to take him seriously.

Don't build a monument to the woman who lets her husband go when he is swept off his feet by a wild fancy of the moment.

Set up a monument, I pray you, to the woman whose clear eyes look beyond the folly of the moment to the real thing that will really endure—a man's real love for the woman who is the mother of his children.

Courage, nobility, breadth of character, a warm heart and a large and loyal soul must such a woman have, and, besides, common sense and reason and the clear-eyed knowledge of things as they really are.

She's the woman who deserves the monument. She doesn't run away when the misery comes, she doesn't let her own tortured heart have its way with the lives of her children and of her husband—and of herself.

She stands firm, true, loyal, honest, holding the family together, keeping the man true to at least some shred of decency in spite of himself.

Let's put up a monument to that woman.

She's the one who deserves the laurel wreath.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Why Pride and Boasting Show Mental Weakness

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

PRIDE is a selfish craving for publicity within the narrow circle of a close coterie. Many malingerers are proud of their descent from Oliver Cromwell, for instance, or some similar great man, who have pathological aversion for newspapers and the public in general.

Indeed, if you "do not move in their set," you are in their ailing thoughts a worm unentitled to honors, knowledge, privilege or anything thereto appertaining.

Pride, like scarlet fever, prevails in two types. These are, to wit, a malignant form and a mild, beneficent one. The former is of the sickly, jaundiced, unhealthful sort, the latter is physiological.

Humility may be, as the wise La Rochefoucauld said, "a feigned submission used to supplant others." It is often a trick adopted by those filled with the most malignant pride in order to raise themselves and lower others.

Pride disguises itself in a legion of ways, and is never so well masked and able most to succeed than when disguised under the form of meekness.

Pathological pride is a state of tissue unbalance which is rarely associated with true, inward modesty, blushing and the shyness of innocence and youth. These are only to be found in that true-hearted pride which is a normal constituent of sound thoughts and a vigorous body.

These professors of virtue, wisdom, strength and justice, who are so proud as gods of their superiority to others, are actually diseased mentally in view of their lack of recognition of their own human infirmities.

How insolent is upstart pride!
Yes, even this with insult vain,
The one attached need not complain
For pride's decay, despite the birth
And makes you of the scum of earth.

Whenever nature denies to a small, narrow, bigoted individual a true worth in accord with his accidental distinction and grandeur, she metes out to the expert (so called) large recruits of needful pride.

For as in bodies, thus in souls, we find,
What wants in blood and spirits, swelled with wind.
Pride, where wit fails, steps in to our defense,
And fills up all the mighty void of sense.

Pride is fundamentally what Nietzsche called the "will to power." It is in no sense a virtue, but a selfish sense of or desire for power.

The jackdaw who is saturated with this sense of super-virtue stalks about in every sphere. He tarries in the churches; he snoops among the hospitals. He is, not to put too fine a point upon it, predominant among so-called social exclusives, college faculties and the politically successful.

Just as one acknowledged instance of smallpox or hydrophobia serves as a horrible example and induces the willful ones to defend themselves by proper precautions, so one proud individual scares many persons into a healthful attitude of conciliatory affability.

Answers to Health Questions

B. A. H.—Please tell me what will help itchy scalp, dandruff and also falling hair?

Try the electric brush and scalp massage, and use this twice a day:

Resorcin	15 grains
Balsam Peru	½ dram
[illegible]	[illegible] drams
Castor oil	½ drams
Oil theobroma	2 [illegible]

M. H.—What can I do for a red nose?

There are many ways to bleach the nose. Ultra violet light, scarification with needles and electric treatment, sunlight and X-rays, and particularly a very plain diet—milk, eggs and fresh, plain food, with massage locally will help.

M. C.—Am troubled with "rheumatism" in the calf of left leg for about four weeks; at times feel it in the hips. I wear short underwear winter and summer. Could that be the cause of it?

The underwear has nothing to do with it. Since "rheumatism" is only a synonym for aches and pains, this may be due to garters, to fallen arches, to varicose veins, to a hundred other things which must be ascertained first.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care this office.

Dear Annie Laurie:

As I am quite young yet I have turned the matter over in my mind many times about keeping company.

I have decided the best thing a young girl can do is never to keep company and go all alone and have a good time by herself. Please tell me if I am right or wrong.

BLOSSOM.

"RIGHT or wrong," Blossom, why how on earth can you ever be anything but wrong with such a foolish idea in your head as that?

Nobody on earth ever had a really good time "all alone"; really, do you think such a thing is possible?

And why do you turn such a simple matter "over in your mind many times"? What do you mean by "keeping company"?

I thought that expression had gone out of date with the warming pans and the quilting bees.

Girls nowadays have friends among the boys, lots of them, not just one "steady company."

How are you going to know what sort of a man you really like if you never see but one, and how is he going to know what sort of a girl he really wants for his sweetheart if he never goes to see anybody but you?

Be a simple, natural, light-hearted girl; laugh and chatter and have a good time as a simple, natural, sweet girl should.

Don't go mooning around looking for some one to "keep company" with.

You'll frighten every sensible man away from you.

You're too young yet to think seriously of marriage, and, of course, you don't want to "keep company" as you call it with a man unless you intend to marry him.

Get a lot of girl friends and boy friends, too; make fudge and divinity, and toast marshmallows and sing and play the banjo or listen to somebody else play it. Let the "keeping company" part of things rest; there's plenty of time for that yet.

Three Minute Journeys

Digging Out an Ancient American Race

By TEMPLE MANNING

FROM the northern border of Mexico to the Panama canal seems but a short trip, to look at the map, and in this day of railroads everywhere it would not appear difficult to traverse this "twisted chord between the continents." But the map is deceitful.

The poles are both discovered; the Dark Continent is revealed; Lhasa is unveiled; few places of hidden romantic history remain on the face of the earth. Of these probably the most picturesque lies in the almost impenetrable jungle lands of Guatemala—but one of the countries in the Central American peninsula through which the prospective traveller imagines an open road.

At Porto Barrios, elbowing through a motley crowd of Spaniards, negroes, Caribs, Maya Indians, Guatemalans and a few Americans, I took the train for Guatemala City, stepping off at the plantation station of Quirigua. A trolley ride of a couple of miles to the jungle edge and then a short walk brought me to a clearing, a circular space hewn out of the sweltering forest.

At each end stood a mammoth monolith of solid sculptured stone, several others, upright and slanting, being lined up between them. The carvings were deep, and in a very good state of preservation. On the front of each monolith was a large, standing figure. The faces varied in expression, evidently representing different personages. Each figure was adorned with an enormous head-dress with drooping plumes, and the dress exposed the thighs, while on the knees and anklets were [illegible] or plates.

The sides were divided into "glyphs," or squares of curved writing. The upper "glyphs" were supposed to be dates—the computation being taken from them by Dr. Hewett of the Archaeological Institute of America that they are at least 1500 years old. At either end of the clearing were sacrificial stones, resembling somewhat that of the old Aztecs in Mexico.

Some day the inscriptions on the stones will be deciphered. Their very mystery now fires the imagination of the traveller. What thrilling chapter in the history of the world will their true tale unfold?

How People Feel
When They Have
Tape Worm

Tape worm is [illegible] parasite. This parasite is [illegible] and [illegible] in one. [illegible] shape, having two, four [illegible]. It [illegible] the size, [illegible] connected together with [illegible]. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them [illegible], enough to fill a quart of solid [illegible], and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ½ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4830, or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

POPULAR SUPERSTITIONS

Some Signs That Most People do Not Disregard

James Russell Lowell, that calm scholarly poet, tells us that "a mythology or superstition broods over us in our cradles and mingles with the lullaby of the nurse; it is in the winter evening legends of the chimney corners and is never entirely eradicated."

From the earliest recollection of the first rehearsal of the "bogie man" down to the day when your sweetheart plucked the petals from the flower, saying "He loves me, he loves me not," there has been a strange, though at times an illogical, sequence to things coupled with superstition.

What politician and candidate would not accept a bunch of four-leaf clovers from a maiden and feel convinced that fortune smiled upon him? We would like his name and we would wish to see his photograph.

What bride, whether of cottage or castle, but would feel slighted if her friends did not shower her with rice as she was helped into carriage or automobile? And what bridegroom, whether of low or high brow, would feel scorned if the old shoe were not flung at him as he drove away with his bride?

Distinguished statesmen, poets painters, orators, inventors, and merchants have attested their consideration of the popular superstitions of marriage, and have paid tribute to the goddess Superstition in their wedding gifts to their brides.

London is the chief human hair market of the world, and deals with something like $1,500,000 worth of hair every year. The hair mostly comes from the heads of peasant girls in Italy Brittany, and the South of France.

Canada's Insurance Departments

There are five provincial insurance departments in Canada, one each in Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. These departments are administered by a superintendent, inspector or commissioner, who has under his care all insurance matters arising in the province, while every insurance company doing business there must report to him regarding their movements and business in the province. Alberta, which passed an insurance act very similar to that of Manitoba, was the latest to inaugurate such a department.

SIMPLIFIED SPELLING

Immigration Commissioner Thinks It May Aid in Naturalization

In an interview with Mr. J. Bruce Walker, Commissioner of Immigration at Winnipeg, the conversation turned on the assimilation of the large foreign immigration.

"For the assimilation of varied nationalities nothing can equal," said Mr. Walker, "the use of a common language. But the English language has to them a strange pronunciation and a freakish method of spelling, so they seek to retain their respective mother tongues. My experience among foreigners has brought this conviction that in the Canadian west, into which natives of Europe are pouring in annually increasing numbers, the need of some rational simplified form of spelling is a necessity."

"What objections do you find to the reform of spelling?"

"Well, the matter is not generally considered. The teacher struggles through the labyrinth of difficulty in teaching the foreign youngster because he is allowed or knows no easier method. I am in hopes that the propaganda of the Simplified Spelling Society will permeate the educationists of our west and awaken them to the need of some reasonable principle of spelling."

Speedy Start for Canada

Thirty seconds was the time occupied by the Birmingham magistrates in hearing a case. A man was charged with being drunk, but it was explained that he had taken his passage to Canada, and had only ten minutes in which to catch his train for Liverpool. In a shade less than half a minute the prisoner had been fined, had paid the money, and had left the court room at a run.

FIRST ELESTRICITY ...ERE.

In the issue of Wednesday, May 28, 1884, or 30 years ago, the Times said in part, "On Friday night last, George, Simcoe, Hunter and Brock streets presented a wonderful appearance. Local Pitcher Praised.

The youthful pitcher, Hammond, of the local Canadian League Club, more than got his head of the water in his baptism before London fans yesterday afternoon, when he shut out Peterboro by the score of 1 to 0, allowing but three widely scattered hits Bdt few opportunities presented themselves to the visitors throughout the whole contest where a base hit would have been disastrous for the big Ohio lad, as each time he emerged unscathed. Outside of the 'opening inning, "Iron Man" Sterling pitched wonderfull ball and held the Tecumsehs intact by making his benders keep the hitters efforts distributed.

He Saved His Face.

On Friday afternoon three charming young ladies from the Business College went into the police station to borrow a glass to get a drink from the fountain. They accidentally left their umbrella behind in the station. Returning for it, one of the cops handed out the lost umbrella. A little later the officer thought that, by mistake, he had given them the Chief's umbrella. He went to the College and after a long chat with the girls he found the right article had been given out on his return to the station, he was asked "Where have you been?" "Oh, I just went up to the post office to mail a letter."

TIRED METALS

Metals get tired with over-working just as much as human beings do And, like human beings, they need a holiday and complete rest in order to recover from the strain and rush of modern life!

It was Lord Kelvin who showed that metals suffer from fatigue. He kept iron wires in constant motion during a week, and watched the way they acted. At the end of the week they had lost a considerable amount of their original elasticity. He gave them a day's rest and they completely recovered. He further experimented and discovered that an iron bar, after a three weeks' rest, gained ten per cent in elasticity. In repeated experiments he found that steel and wrought iron deteriorated very rapidly if they were worked continuously, and, in the long run, break up completely, just as the human being does. Knocking them off work at regular intervals adds years to their powers of resistance.

A good instance of this was shown by Lord Kelvin. A steel rail, which had done service for over twenty years, suddenly broke into half-a-dozen pieces under the weight of a passing train. For the whole of that twenty years it had not had a day's holiday Lord Kelvin pointed out that if the rail had had proper rests it would have done duty for another twenty years. As it was the strain was too great for it.

Coffee From Figs

Ever since coffee has been a popular beverage, apparently, efforts have been made to find substitutes for it, either as mere adulterants, like chicory, or for the sake of greater wholesomeness or cheapness. Rye and other grains, lupine, acorns, beets and carrots have all been thus used, but the fig coffee of Austria is a decided novelty. An excellent coffee it is claimed to be made from dried and roasted figs, which need not be of the first quality.

They are dried in the sun or in evaporating pans, according to climate, and then roasted in ovens till brown or almost black and quite brittle. They are then ground up and the resultant powder is pressed into tablets. When made use of they are merely dissolved in hot water. The beverage is said to be agreeable in color and flavor with a somewhat sweeter taste than that made from chicory.

KELLY-SPRINGFIELD TIRES

PRICE !

I know no joy or pleasure,
My life is full of pain,
No sooner do I pump my tires
Than flat they go again.
My fabric's cracked to pieces,
The tread is worn to naught,
I haven't gone a hundred miles,
With these punk tires I've bought.
A glib young man approached me
And talked to me of price.
The money which he said I'd save,
Has gone like last year's ice.
If cheapness was their virtue,
Then prate it not to me,
I'll pay the price for KELLY'S
And from trouble I'll be free.

HOUSE OF LORDS NOT TO PASS ON HOME RULE BEFORE MIDDLE OF JUNE, SAYS LORD CREWE

Will Give Few Weeks Dreathing Space in the Struggle--Carson Urges Restraint

London, May 26.—Lord Crewe has nnounced that he will not put the cond reading of the Home Rule ill in the House of Lords before une 22, so there will certainly be breathing space for a few weeks, ex- pt for what may happen outside of estminster. Several Unionist writs to-day urged the Ulster Covenanters to preserve their restraint, and ere is no doubt Sir Edward Car- will offer the same advice when returns to Belfast next Friday.

Take Sterner Measures.

On the other hand, five Liberal mbers, directly after yesterday's te, journeyed into Staffordshire, here a public meeting was held, ing dissatisfaction that the Government did not take sterner measures over the recent gun-running siness. The meeting urged Asith to "take any action he thought cessary." One speaker pointed out at Churchill did dot hestitate to ove fifty thousand troops during e railway strike, yet nothing seemed necessary when 25,000 rifles were uggled into Ulster. The following solution has been signed by a large mber of landowners, wealthy merants and manufacturers in Yorkire, signatories daily being added: We, Yorkshiremen of moderate views tting aside all party consideration, sh to record the deep conviction, though a large number of people England may be unaware of its ensity, of the feeling which exists Ulster and other parts of Ireland, garding the present Home Rule Bill ich is such that it cannot be forc. upon Ireland without civil war. We, therefore call upon the members of Parliament to avert this catastrophe by insisting upon settlement by compromise. Latisfactory settlement must, in our opinion, secure Ulster exclusion from the Dublin Parliament, until such time as it shall voluntarily come in, and also include such alterations in the bill as will satisfy moderate opinion with regard to the Government of the rest of Ireland."

ROYAL EDWARD STRIKES ICEBERG

Montreal, May 23.—The steamer Royal Edward, of the C.N.R. line, struck an iceberg, while in the Gulf of St. Lawrence to-day but did herself no harm.

Captain Wooten, in communicating the news of the collision to the C.N.R. offices here to-day, by wireless, said the boat was going dead slow, when a big berg loomed up. The Royal Edward grazed it but suffered no damage.

PROTESTANT FEDERATION MET RECENTLY AT YOUNGS POINT

A delegation from the Protestant Benevolent Federation of Canada, "Peterborough branch," journed to Young's Point Tuesday evening of last week to attend a meeting of the branch at that village. A large gathering of members and adherents met in Charlton's Hall.

Speeches were delivered by Aldermen W.J. Johnston and Geo. Duncan, also R. J. Winch and J. Runnett. Other addresses by local members made the meeting a huge success. The branch at Young,s Point is progressing favorably, the membership increasing at every meeting.

At the close of the meeting a very successful banquet was given after which the usual toast list was run off.

The branch at Halls Bridge is boldport a good time and cannot speak too highly of Young's Point as entertainers hoping in the near future to have another opportunity of visiting the point.

The branch at Hall's Bridge is holding a large gathering in the early part of June at that centre. Delegations from Peterborougg, Youngs Point and Lakefield are expected to be present to help along the work.

Some seem able to get on with tea or coffee for a time. But there are few persons who can use tea or coffee as a routine daily beverage and not sometimes feel its effects—headache, nervousness, indigestion, biliousness, sleeplessness, heart trouble, or some other discomfort.

Thousands have found relief by stopping tea and coffee and using

BELLEVILLE SOLDIERS HAVE BEEN AND GONE

Empire Day was duly celebrated here. Between 10 and 11 in the morning both the 15th Regiment of Belleville and the 57th regiment of this city marched from the Armouries, South on George street to Hunter street headed by the Brass Bands and the Bugle Band of the local Regiment and also by the Bagpipe band of the Bay City soldiers. Both Regiments marched in perfect alignment and step They neither carried rifles. At Hunter they wheeled East to Water street thence to Simcoe street and back to the Armouries.

The march would have been longer but for threatening rain which fell a few minutes after their return to the Armouries.

It may be said that the boys from Belleville ably assisted similarly by members of the splendid local Regiment maintained strictly correct deportment. Not a man of either Regiment demonstrated by his conduct that he knew the difference between a corkscrew and a snow plough. Many of the visiting soldiers took in the ball games.

More Belleville Officers.

Lieut. Fennell said that the only objection he had to the scarlet uniform is that they draw attention of the Peterborough ladies from the classic countenances of the officers wear in said uniform.

Lt. Ponton, who was with the advance party objected strenuously to acting as Officer of the Day on account of his many social engagements

Capt. Beamer Hudson (otherwise known as the Beau Brummel of the regiment) has been officially gazetted as press agent, with power to act. Capt. Hudson is very deserving of the position, as he has an unlimited knowledge of the affairs of the other officers.

Notes.

How those Belleville soldiers did root for the Petes at both yesterdays games.

The Belleville officers were given a trip over the Lift Lock on Monday afternoon.

The entraining of the Belleville troops was affected without a hitch at the G. T. R. on their return home.

Many of the Belleville officers tried to find out which of their officers gave away the illioys-cransies and any life history of their brother officers. Nothing doing!

COLLIE DOG'S ACTION REVEALS SAD VICTORIA DAY TRAGEDY

Family of Four Completely Wiped Out When Canoe Upset --Body of Father Still in Water

North Bay, May 26.--North Bay's Victoria Day was marred by one of the worst drowning accidents which has ever occurred in Lake Nipissing a whole family being wiped out in a terrible tragedy of the waves Early Tuesday morning a young collie dog, came whining to the Government road-making camp near near shore of the lake, a few miles from North Bay, and by its peculiar actions attracted attention to the lake front. Straight to the beach led the dog and there, lying on the sand were the bodies of two children, clasped in the rigid death-grip of their mother who remained with her children in death as in life.

Family of Four.

The bodies were identified as Mrs Arthur Mansbridge, a young woman of twenty-one years of age, who lived with her husband and two children in Lakeview Park, North Bay. The family were out picnicing and fishing on the holiday in a canoe, and in the evening, when they were returning home, the lake blew up rough, and the canoe upset, father, mother and children sinking beneath the waves after an ineffectual attempt to reach shore or attract attention. No one heard their cries, the noise of the waves breaking on the shore and the strong winds that blew up overcoming their feeble cries for assistance. Search is being conducted for the body of the father, which, no doubt, is lying along the shore. In the canoe with the family was the children's playmate, a scotch collie pup, which swam ashore and carried the wordless message of death to the men at the road making camp.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

The funeral of the late Andrew Fawcett took place yesterday to the Little Lake cemetery. The deceased who was an old and respected resident, passed away at Nicholls Hospital after a lingering illness.

Mr. Fawcett was 77 years of age, having spent the best part of his life in this city, coming to Peterborough from Dummer, where he formerly resided. He was an Anglican in religion and had many friends who regret his demise.

—o—

Samuel Roberts Price.

Samuel Robert Price of Otonabee died at his residence about two miles east of the city. Mr. Price was the son of Rev. William Price, rector of Waterford, Ireland. He came to this country in 1866 with a number of other young gentlemen to learn farming and with them served an apprenticeship with the late C. S. Dudman, Esq., on the farm just east of the Curtis Brickyard. He was born in Waterford, Ireland, in the year 1848. He married Amelia, daughter of the late Robert D. Rogers, Esq., in the year 1873. He served many years in the 57th Battalion. He was a cousin of Lord Roberts He was loved and respected by all who knew him and was a fine type of an Irish gentleman. He leaves besides his widow two sons and three daughters to mourn his loss.

The late Mr. Price was well and favorably known in the city, especially by the older generation.

BRITISH MINISTERY MAY NOW BE FORCED TO AN EARLY ELECTION

Many of Government Members Are in Revolt at Prospect of Delay Until Next Autumn and Change in Plans is not Improbable

London, May 26.—A few weeks ago Liberal newspapers predicted that the Government would dissolve Parliament this summer immediately after getting the Home Rule bill on the statute books. More recently Ministerial mouthpieces stated that on reconsideration Mr. Asquith had decided against dissolution until the autumn of 1915. Certain developments may force the Government to return to its earlier programme of a speedy election.

Radical journals,s such as The London Chronicle and The London Daily News, display trepidation as to the ability of the Government to carry through its ambitious programme of financial and other legislation during the present session even with the aid of a "closure system, which would make Ottawa oppositionists froth at the mouth. Many Ministerialists are restless. Some of them actually went into revolt at the prospect of an autumn session and a number of the Government supporters in the House have frankly condemned certain features of Mr. Lloyd-George's new budget as unjust and oppressive to thousands of people none too well off.

Civil War Imminent.

Mr. Redmond, holds himself free to reject the amending bill if it concedes too much. On the other hand, there is the extreme danger, admitted in most quarters,that the forcing of the Irish bill on to the statute books ahead of a satisfactory amending bill may precipitate an outbreak in Ulster. Almost everyone agrees that at the moment civil war may be once more imminent.

BODY IS FOUND ON RAILWAY TRACKS

Lohn Simpson, of Fergus, Discovered With Head and Legs Cut Off.

—Mediators to pay visit —

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 26.—The mediators, delegates from both countries, and the attaches of the party, including a number of newspaper men will leave at 1 o'clock to-morrow afternoon for Toronto, where they will meet his Royal Highness the Tuke of Connaught. The hour set far the meeting is 4.30 o'clock, about the time the party is expected to arrive in Toronto.

SIR JAS. WHITNEY TO LEAD PARTY

Toronto, May 26.—Rumors have been floating around lately to the effect that Dr. McPhedran had said that Sir James Whitney was not fit to take part in the election, or to assume his old duties in the Legislature. The stories are generally credited to Liberal politicans, who are trying to make the province believe that the Government intends to call an election this spring, as they allege Sir James will never lead the House again.

Dr. McPhedran was interviewed to-day, and asked if the statement credited to him that Sir James Whitney was unable to lead his party in an election campaign, was true. He gave the story a flat denial.

"I expressed no opinion in the matter," said Dr. McPhedran "Sir James Whitney's recovery from his illness has been remarkable. His condition has been so far restored that with judicious care he should be able to take a reasonable amount of work in an election campaign."

Dr. McPhedran also expressed the opinion that Sir James would be able to resume his old seat in the House at the next session, if he takes reasonable care of himself in the mean time.

PETES DEFEAT THE YANKEYS 5-1--GOOD HITTING A FEATURE

A fairly large crowd of fans turned out again yesterday to witness the Petes slip another one over on the Erie aggregation. The boys played excellent ball and were not found wanting when it came to the wielding of the willow. The Petes touched Dorbeck up for 11 hits and Tracey allowed the visitors only four. With Welsh in the left gardeni the Petes have a real star, he gets all that comes out his way, and is an artist at running the bases. Fox was in the game again yesterday and played real snappy ball. In fact every man worked hard. With the visitors sat the jinx and at no time were the Petes in danger.

Kelly did the receiving for Tracey and he kept the boys on edge all through.

From the opening of the game the boys just plastered that old pill and piled up five hits making two runs in the first innings.

The visitors only got five men to base all through the game.

Umps Miller was just a little off color yesterday and several very close decisions were handed out. One sainted decision, when Tracey made a pretty three base hit, Mr. Umps called him out, because somebody said that Tracey did not touch the first bag. The fans got real hot and some very nice remarks were past but the bum decisions were still being handed out until the end of the ninth.

The Petes will put up a strong battle to-day and a goodly crowd is expected to root the boys to victory.

The score was 5—1 in favor of the Petes.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Fresh winds, thunderstorms, mostly fair and warm.

THE FIRST MOVIE

Don Roderick Saw Moving Pictures in a Vision

The first suggestion of the cinematograph, or moving pictures of to-day, may be found in the ancient legend of Don Roderick, the last of the Gothic kings of Spain. The king and a gay cavalcade had, against all warnings, entered through magic doors into a vast subterranean chamber. On a table lay a golden casket which the king had been admonished not to open. But curiosity urged him on despite all warnings. He opened the casket. It contained nothing but a piece of linen cloth interposed between two plates of copper. Upon this cloth were painted diminutive figures of men and horses. As Don Roderick gazed these figures became enlarged andd animated. A panoramic vision of a battle displayed itself in which Christians and Moslems were struggling in deadly conflict, while the cries of the combatants, the clash of arms and the roar of battle were distinctly heard. The Christians were seen to retreat, broken and beaten, before the Moslems, and among the figures Don Roderick saw his war-steed galloping riderless over the unlucky field, following which the panic-stricken king and his companions fled from the enchanted chamber. And such was the vision of Don Roderick.

DURABILITY OF TIES

The Supply of Cedar is Becoming Exhausted

The average life of untreated ties as reported by the steam roads is as follows: Cedar, 9 years; tamarack, 8 years; hemlock, 7 years; Douglas fir, 7 years; jack pine, 6 years; spruce, 6 years. As statistics bear evidence, cedar is the species principally used, because of its durability, but the supply of cedar is rapidly becoming exhausted. Unless preservative treatment of ties is introduced, the short-lived species will have to be used untreated, which, on account of the necessary frequent renewal, will increase the cost of mileage maintenance. If treated ties were used, which would cost 30 cents extra per tie for creosoting and equipping with tie-plates, the inferior species, which are very plentiful and cheap in Canada, could be used with economy. With such a treatment, these woods would last at least fifteen years, and if protected from wear would probably last much longer, and would affect a very considerable saving.

Squash Left-overs

To make some delicious griddle cakes have ready a cupful of baked or boiled squash put through a sieve; then add a cupful of scalding milk, a tablespoonful of butter and a saltspoonful of salt. When the mixture is cool, stir in a well beaten egg and a cupful of flour sifted with three level teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Fry as one would ordinary pancakes.

Another recipe says: Summer squash left over from a former meal makes excellent fritters by adding baking powder according to the quantity of squash and flour to make a stiff batter. Drop into hot drippings or salad oil. No eggs needed.

NO SALT HORSE

It Costs Huge Sum Nowadays to Provision Ocean Liners

In these days, when the high cost of living is so much in the public mind, it is interesting to know what it costs a steamship to provide the necessities of life to the hordes of passengers who cross and recross the Atlantic. The annual statement of the North German Lloyd Company throws some interesting light on the subject.

For one year the company's bill for provisions alone was $4,920,000, while during the same period the coal man was paid $7,376,735 for 1,759,740 tons of coal which were shoveled into the ships' furnaces during the twelvemonth. For these two items alone—provisions and coal—the company paid the enormous sum of $12,296,735.

The itemized provision bill showed that the butcher got $1,685,000 for meats. This does not include fish and game; for the former the company paid an additional $239,660, while the bill for the game amounted to $412,360, a total of $652,020.

Preserves cost $255,760 for the twelve months and fresh vegetables ran into the respectable figure of $128,110, while for "sundries," including bread, flour, spices, fruits and the thousand and one articles that are used in the kitchen, the company paid $1,688,890.

More potatoes were consumed during the year than any other single article, the total amount having been 17,875,872 pounds. Flour ranked next with 6,313,152 pounds, fresh beef third with 5,769,124 pounds, while the bread was fourth with 2,353,082 pounds. The passengers consumed 7,098,560 eggs, 4,371,000 oranges and lemons, 707,635 pounds of onions and 983,802 pounds of salt. They used 465,340 pounds of coffee and 41,729 pounds of tea and 529,619 cans of sterilized milk, to say nothing of 14,918 bottles of fresh cream.

Thought it Was a Wild Cat

A real live porcupine visited the town of Truro, N.S., and promenaded along Victoria Square. He met one of the natives of the town who not being on familiar terms with the porcupine species mistook the animal for a wild cat and when the "fretful" Porcy began to cause his bristles to stand up, took it as a challenge to battle and began to rain stones on his antagonist with the result that he knocked it out for a time and during that time slipped a cord about its hind leg and waited developments. When the porcupine revived its captor led it out onto the square and proudly exhibited it declaring that he had captured a wild cat.

Care of Books

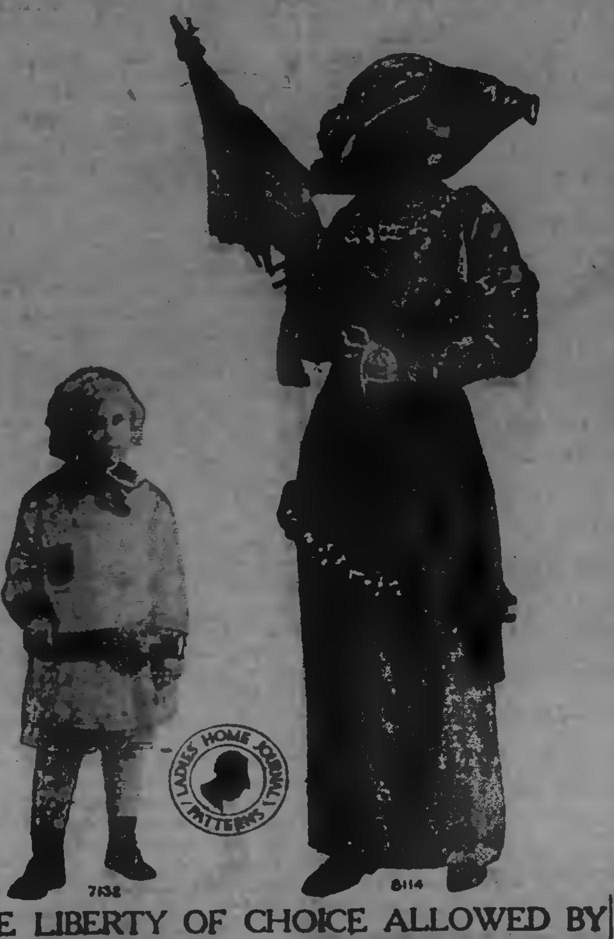
Queen Mary Fond of Orchids

Queen Mary is passionately fond of flowers, and likes a bunch of Parma violets fastened to her furs. For evening wear she is generally partial to orchids or lilies of the valley. For the exotic and rather conspicuous blooms she has not very great liking with the exception possibly of mal maisons.



WIDE LIBERTY OF CHOICE ALLOWED BY THE PRESENT MODES BOTH IN FABRIC AND DESIGN

The present fad for using two or more materials or colors in the same frock makes it possible for any woman to wear the new colors; if the most popular shade is trying a bodice of chiffon may be added that will effectively offset the unbecoming color and render the frock even more modish than it would be if the material of the skirt were continued up to the throat.

Number 8114 shows such an arrangement and the result is very pleasing. The foundation skirt is of charmeuse in one of the new reds; the over-bodice and tunic is of figured chiffon, effectively relieved with black velvet sash and buttons. A soft cream colored net is used for the undersleeves.

Charmeuse ranges in price from $1.50 up and chiffon averages about the same.

This costume in size 36 may be made from 4½ yards of 36 inch material. Number 7132 is a Russian blouse suit for a small boy. As illustrated it is fashioned of white serge with collar, cuffs, stitched belt and pocket of blue. For a child of four this pattern requires 2¾ yards of 36 inch material. A good quality of serge may be purchased from 75 cents a yard and up.

Number 8114—sizes 34 to 42.
Number 7132—sizes 2, 4 and 6.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

SMOKERS IN FACTORIES

Their Carelessness Causes Many Needless Fires

It is an open question whether the careless fool or the deliberate criminal does more damage by fire. Advantage seems to lie with the fool, because he is everywhere gladly bringing down destruction, while the fire bug must go about his deadly work stealthily, at weird hours and in awkward places.

Chief among the fools who carelessly cause fires is the smoker. His blazing match is cast down still alight. His cigarette end falls into piles of paper or shavings. The burning ashes of his trusty pipe descend gently into oil vats and barrels of gunpowder. If the fool destroyed only himself, the world could bear his actions philosophically, but he usually escapes while better men perish.

In England great wealth was accumulated by a man who was shrewd enough to locate small tobacco stores opposite factory entrances, but his fortune represented the loss of many fortunes by his brother manufacturers.

Smoking should be absolutely prohibited in or about every Canadian factory, and employes breaking this rule should be dismissed. If the rule became national, manufacturers could inform each other of these dismissals and could refuse employment to persistent offenders. If it were enforced there would be fewer fires, better work would be done, and the smoker would enjoy his weed more keenly in the evening, after a day's self-denial.—Industrial Canada.

Washing and Dusters

Washing and dusters can be avoided by using old newspaper for cleaning. They are excellent for window polishers, first rate for scouring tinware with, and are as good as a brush for polishing a stove. A good pad of newspaper should be kept at hand for wiping up grease or water spilt on the gas or coal cooking stove.

Ironing Linen

Linen or corded material garments should be ironed over an ordinary ironing board, taking care to iron lengthwise or directly crosswise. Ironing even a little on the bias will put them out of shape.

A simple dessert is plain boiled rice served with sugar generously mixed with ground cinnamon.

Hatpin Danger

The Cardiff City Council passed a by-law ordering that all hatpins worn in public must have the points protected by suitable guards. A councillor produced a hatpin 11 inches long, and said ladies did not like walking down Duke street, on a Saturday morning, as it was positively dangerous.

A SOLDIER'S MEMORIES

Veteran of Two Big Campaigns Has Interesting Stories

In a small cottage at Atherley, Ontario, there lives a veteran of the British army named Neill, who fought in the Crimean war and the Indian mutiny. He is always ready to recount his adventures. He is slightly deaf, a defect which he dates from the battle of Balaklava, when he lay under the heavy guns and witnessed the charge of the Light Brigade.

Neill was invalided home, he has now a silver plate in his skull as a result of a wound, and was stationed at Windsor. He tells an interesting story of the late Queen Victoria. While he was on sentry duty one morning the queen came out to walk down to the river. Neill presented arms, but the next sentry, a new recruit, made no move.

"Good morning, soldier," said the queen.

"Good morning, miss," replied the sentry. "I hope you are very well."

He afterwards confessed that he mistook her for one of the maids. The mistake, however, turned out to his advantage, for the queen asked him his history, and, on hearing that he was supporting an old mother in Ireland, who rented a small cottage, she bought the farm and presented it to the old woman.

On another occasion, Neill relates that the Prince Consort asked him for his rifle to show to the Emperor Napoleon III., who was driving with him. Neill, being on sentry duty, of course refused, and heard Queen Victoria, who was also in the carriage, reprove the Prince for doing what might get the soldier into trouble.

When the mutiny broke out Neill was sent to India and entered Delhi by the Cashmere gate on the day it was stormed. The first street, he says, was lined with cases of brandy, left by the mutineers to attract the soldiers. The sergeants, however, kept the soldiers from the spirits until the city was taken by telling them that the brandy was poisoned.

THE SHIP'S DENTIST

Modern Ocean Liners Provide Against Toothache

Modern liners have every kind of luxury, and a ship's dentist is the most modern innovation. Unlike other innovations, it did not originate in the brains of the steamship managers, but was due to a Parisian dentist. Having occasion to go on a sea voyage for his health, he was struck with the need of a dentist on board ship, and on his return he promptly engaged a suite of rooms in one of the French transatlantic vessels. He received many clients, and since that date several steamship companies have carried a ship's dentist, who can extract the aching teeth of the passengers.

CRETONNE EFFECTS OBTAINED

An Ingenious Woman Covered Her Boxes With Wall Paper

One woman says that many times with longing eyes she had looked upon the dainty, French-appearing flowered and striped cretonne and chintz-covered boxes in the stores ranging from large hat boxes down to small boxes for jewels and trinkets, but they were beyond her slim purse, so she did the next best thing—imitated them closely in paper. At a wall paper store she purchased a roll of paper with a cream-colored background decorated with satin stripes and tiny pink roses tied with blue bowknots (which was a good imitation of cretonne at a distance). With this she covered several ordinary hat boxes—square and round shapes. For decorations she cut out from the pretty covers of old magazines some daintily colored colonial heads with their white wings and pasted one in the middle of each side and in the centre of the lid. For her shirtwaist box she purchased a hinged wooden cracker box and papered this with a wall paper that had trees and foliage like a forest scene—a good imitation of genuine tapestry.

Ideal Apple Sauce

With a sharp knife, silver preferred, cut the apples into quarters, pare, core and drop at once into a pan of cold water to prevent discoloration. When all are done skim out of the water and put into a large bottomed granite or agate kettle, so that they will not be crowded. Add boiling water—just enough to show—cover closely to keep in the steam, and cook quickly on the top of the stove, shaking often to prevent sticking. As soon as they are tender—and it will take but a few moments—mash with a silver fork, sprinkle with sugar to taste, cover again and cook until the sugar is dissolved. Turn into a glass dish and serve hot or cold.

Why They Are Cold

Do you know why a dog's nose and a woman's elbow are always cold? Because, according to an old country superstition when Noah went into the Ark he found that he had forgotten his tools, and had to use first a dog's nose, and then his wife's elbow, to stop a leak.

World's Deepest Colliery

The deepest colliery in the world is at Lambert, in Belgium—2,600 feet deep.

Substitute For Pillows

As a substitute for pillows to prop a sick person in bed there has been invented a broad band of canvas to be hooked to a footboard and across which can be fastened a table for a tray or book rest.

Based on a population of 9,500,000 one out of every eight persons in New York is employed in a factory and one male in every six is a factory worker.

A campaign in favor of a minimum wage of $5.24 a week for male shop assistants is being organised in the north of England.

Disappearing Forests

Of the dense tropical forests of mahogany, cedar and other valuable hardwoods that once covered the islands of the Carribean, there are left among the Northern islands, only Dominica in the Leewards and St. Lucia in the Windwards that have any portions of these forests still standing. In Barbados, Antigua, Montserrat, St. Vincent and Grenada, the forests have disappeared. Trinidad, Jamaica and British Guiana, however, have escaped denudation, on account of the difficulty of reaching the interior since no rail nor waterways exist by which the lumber could be got out. In these colonies although the coast line has been cleared and lumbering operations pushed for a few miles into the back country, a large area of timberland still remains in each colony from which is annually drawn a considerable "cut."

In Workhouse Over Sixty Years

Ann Caterer who died in the Henley Workhouse at the age of ninety-two, was first admitted to the workhouse in 1851, and since 1857, when her daughter was born, both were continuously chargeable, at a cost to the ratepayers of $5,200.

Goldsmith's Letter

An autograph letter of Oliver Goldsmith written to the producer, Coleman, in reference to his play, "The Good-Natured Man," was, by the kindness of Lord Blythe, added to the library of Trinity College, Dublin.

Killed at Siege of Limerick

Grim relics of the siege of Limerick in 1691 were unearthed by workmen during excavations, a number of skeletons being found. A bullet hole was observed in one skull, and on examination a bullet was found embedded in the bone.

Our Point of View

Some married men know so well what Home Rule is that they are taking no interest in what is going on at Ulster.

* * *

A fashion magazine says: "Freakish styles are passing." That's true. You can stand on George street for five minutes and see hundreds of them pass.

* * *

The Ontario License Law has closed several hundred bars in Ontario, and to-day the largest organization in this province is the Sons of Burning Thirst.

The fashion editor of the Globe says that we are threatened with a return of the hoop skirt our grandmothers used to wear, and if they come it will be necessary to increase the size the of the street cars.

A news item says the Society of St. Gall has made Admiral Peary a member. We are glad to hear it, but how the society happened to overlook old Doc Cook puzzles us. If any man in America is qualified for membership, he is.

The news has reached this country that Hon. Ted Roosevelt came out of the Brazilian jungle so afflicted with boils that he cannot stand. It seems that there is no end to that man's ambition. Here we find him trying to beat Job's record.

* * *

For more than a week we have heard that our old friend Vic Huerta is "on his last legs," but it seems they are still able to carry him to the refrigerator where he keeps the decanter. As a matter of fact, Vic has proved himself to be the champion totterer of the Western World.

United States Immigration

In the London Times a few days ago Sir John Willison laments what he terms the Americanization of Canada, and urges the British Imperialists to wake up and put forth special efforts to prevent the steady drift of the Canadian mind away from the practices and traditions of the Old Land. He insists that these United States immigrants can have no natural lotyalty to the British Empire, and this is undoubtedly true; but surely this will apply to all non-British immigrants, and also in a sense to our French-Canadian fellow citizens. And yet we venture to say that there is no statesman in Canada who would care to close the doors upon such immigration. It may be that Canada is profoundly affected by United States influences; it could not well be otherwise. It stands to reason that when two nations speaking a common language have a common border line thousands of miles in length one nation will affect the other; and the nation of 100,000,000 will naturally affect the neighbor which has but 8,000,000. But the rush of United States farmers in the Canadian West is rather, we think, to be welcomed than deplored. Last year—Mar. 31st, 1913, to Mar. 31st, 1914—we received 115,000 immigrants from our great southern neighbor, and these were amongst our most desirable immigrants. During March 1914, 5,873 United States farmers came into Canada, bringing with them nearly $3,000,000 in cash and effects: and we cannot conceive any Canadian Government being undesirous of admitting such settlers. If we could secure a much larger immigration of British farmers they would be heartily welcome but the difficulty is that the British immigration has all too large a population of unskilled laborers and all too small a proportion of farmers. No doubt there are many British farmers who would form a very valuable and welcome addition to our population, but they do not seem to respond to the lure of cheap lands as readily as do our United States neighbors.

Cure Children's Colds By External Treatment

Mothers Will Find Nothing So Speedily and Reliable as Old-Time "Nerviline."

It's really a shame to upset a young child's stomach by internal dosing, when external treatment will so promptly break up a cold.

When your boy comes in after play with his feet soaking wet, his throat hoarse and sore, his little chest tight and congested, just apply Nerviline. Give him a vigorous rubbing over his throat, and put lots of Nerviline on his chest and rub it right in. To make Nerviline penetrate more quickly cover his chest and throat with a hot flannel bandage. This treatment WON'T fail. Your boy will be feeling better in a half an hour and you will have the satisfaction of knowing you have warded off perhaps a cold, or grippe, or illness that might have laid him up.

Nerviline is mighty good for preventing colds and for breaking up a bad one, too. For general family use it cures all sorts of external aches and pains—you simply can't beat it. Try it for earache, toothache, neuralgia, sciatica, lame back, rheumatism, or lumbago. Wherever there is congestion, inflammation or pain in the joints or muscles, Nerviline will cure mighty quick. Famous Musician and Composer

Mme. Chaminade, whose name was added to the French Legion of Honor, was the first woman so honored because of her success as a musician and composer. She came to America in 1908, making a concert tour of the Eastern States, and at that time she had already been honored by Turkey and England, Queen Victoria having given her the insignia of the jubilee herself.

KELLY-SPRINGFIELD TIRES

PRICE!

I know no joy or pleasure,
My life is full of pain,
No sooner do I pump my tires
Than flat they go again.
My fabric's cracked to pieces,
The tread is worn to naught,
I haven't gone a hundred miles,
With these punk tires I've bought.
A glib young man approached me
And talked to me of price.
The money which he said I'd save,
Has gone like last year's ice.
If cheapness was their virtue,
Then prate it not to me,
I'll pay the price for KELLY'S
And from trouble I'll be free.

WHAT IS PROGRESS

Every Scientific Invention Has its Human Side

Now and then some prophet looking only at the mechanical side of progress cries out that there is no real benefit int it. But the mechanical cannot be separated from the human side.

Compare the case of the immigrant of to-day with that of his predecessor of fifty or a hundred years ago. In the former the parting with friends in the old country was like death. The Atlantic voyage was a tremendous undertaking. It was followed by a long and toilsome land journey. Few of the exiles could expect to become wealthy enough to return to their native land. Communication by letter was slow. The telegraph and the cable when first introduced were expensive luxuries. To-day the immigrant crosses the Atlantic in less than a week and is whisked off to his destination by fast train in a few days more. He has speedy communication by mail with his friends at home. He can cable if necessary at a moderate expense. He sends money orders home. He receives parcels of plum-pudding at Christmas. A visit to the old land is regarded as no great undertaking.

So every scientific invention has its human side. It lessens farm labor and increases the supply of food. It makes the work of the housewife easier. It makes the house warmer. It enormously increases the output of clothing and other necessaries. If you think these things have no human side, try wearing shabby clothes. Talk to some householder who finds it hard to pay house rent and pay the butcher and buy new shoes to take the place of those that the kids wear out as fast.

IDENTIFYING CROOKS

An Improvement Upon the Fairly Safe Finger-print System

The finger-print system is generally regarded as the last word in scientific detection of crime, but a newer method is being experimented with.

The great objection to the finger-print system is that, though it is quite trustworthy as far as it goes, being based on the fact that no two people in the world have the same pattern on the skin of their finger-tips, it is easily rendered useless by wearing gloves or by having the finger-tips deliberately defaced. Every crack burglar knows this nowadays.

But the newer system will baffle even the wariest of burglars. The idea is to photograph the back of the hand of every convicted criminal. The network of tiny veins on the back of a man's hand is as much peculiar to himself as the pattern on his finger-tips. The chances are billions to one against two men's hands showing the same arrangements of veins. The photograph is taken after the hand has been allowed to dangle down for a minute or two, so that thee rush of blood may make the network of veins stand out prominently.

The advantage over the finger-print system is that no one can attempt to alter the arrangement of the veins without running great danger of bleeding to death.

Wolves Near St. John

Wolves were seen near St. John, N. B., recently for the first time since the days of the early settlers in the district. John Johnston, of Gilbert's Lane, was enjoying an early morning stroll in Rockwood Park, about a mile back from the nearest settled section, when he saw four large black wolves and a cub. Two of the animals followed him for a short distance. They did not show any intention of attacking him, but he did not wait to make any closer investigation of their intentions.

While wolves are known to exist in the densely wooded regions in the north of the province, it is many years since any have been reported in the south.

CANADIAN NATIONAL THEATRE

English Actor Regards It as Imperial Need

In an address on "The Empire and Drama" which Mr. Martin Harvey delivered at the Empire Club, Toronto, the English actor spoke of the awakening of interest in dramatic art in Canada and the need of a National Theatre. The country had no call to worry about its material affairs, but there were other things that went to make up a nation besides material things, and art in all forms was a spiritualizing and humanizing power. The theatre was a force in forming the character of the nation, and therefore an effort should be made to have the theatre foster imperial ideals.

The speaker went on to say, that Canada was beginning to feel its "life in every limb," and the time had come for the young country to express itself in art. Some forms of art were already alive, but as yet the voice of a national drama had not been heard. The Dominion, with its picturesque history and unusual racial characteristics, possessed inspiring themes for the Canadian playwright.

Thus the foundation of a chain of National Theatres would do more to tighten the bonds of Empire than all the utilitarian and political schemes put together. It meant a common meeting ground for the British people in an atmosphere of art and culture. "And remember," said Mr. Harvey, "the great States of the world have covered themselves with more glory by their encouragement of the arts than by anything else."

Canada's Oil Production

That the petroleum industry in Canada is decreasing yearly is shown by a report made to the Government by John McLeish, B.A. The output is almost entirely from the Ontario oil fields, although New Brunswick contributes a considerable amount, and it might be noted that in the latter province the yearly flow is on the increase.

What To Do For Sore Throat

SOME GOOD ADVICE BY A SPECIALIST.

As there seems to be a regular epidemic of Sore Throats this winter, the following valuable recipe will be welcomed by many. A sore throat is a dangerous complaint to trifle with, as the bronchial tubes lead directly to the lungs and the disease often travels along these tubes into the lungs and there sets up an inflammation that invariably results in a serious lung trouble.

At the first sign of soreness in the throat or around the tonsils you should secure from your chemist 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength) and take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of moist sugar. Stirr until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will give instant relief and will usually cure the worst throat within 48 hours. The healing and soothing qualities of this formula are unequalled, and every person suffering with a bad throat should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.

Important—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want Double Strength: your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c. to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, P.Q., who make a specialty of it.

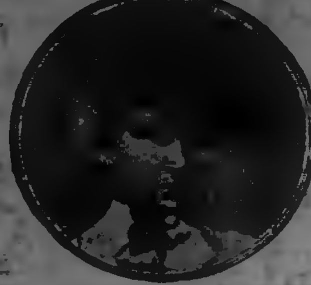
When "Baby" First Tries To Guard Little Mother

By WINIFRED BLACK

(Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.



Winifred Black

THE little mother sat in the doorway with her baby in her arms. Such a little bit of a frail, delicate mother, and such a big, bouncing, rosy, kicking, gurgling baby.

The sun shone and the purple plumes of the wistaria swung in the soft air like tassels from some filmy curtain, and up on the hill above the quiet street a bird was singing—somewhere—as gaily as if the whole world was at the springtime and somebody must sing about it.

"Glub," said the baby—and she kicked lustily; "glob glub," and she laughed and put up her chubby hands and pulled her mother's soft hair, but the little mother did not smile. Her gentle face was very sad and her soft eyes were full of anxiety.

She wasn't looking at the baby at all—she was looking at a grubby little boy who stood close beside her, panting as if he had been running.

Around the corner came running two little boys grubbier than the first one. They were singing something, something with a croon to it in a sort of savage minor key, over and over they sang it with harsh voices that had something cruel in them. Hark, there were words to the song:

"Georgie is a ba-by—Georgie is a ba-by!" chanted the two grubby boys.

His Mother's Protector.

And Georgie held up his head and would not cry.

What was she to do; sit by and see her darling—the idol of her heart set upon and beaten by two miserable little Tormenters?

"Oh," breathed the little mother, and her eyes flashed fire. "You're babies yourselves—two of you after one poor little boy—you let my Georgie alone or I'll catch you both and give you a good whipping. I don't care who you are."

Georgie's face grew white with anger. "Mamma," he said—"Mamma, you stop. I'm not a baby. I'm not a baby." And the grubby little boy picked up a good heavy stone and ran down the street as fast as he could go toward the two grubby little boys.

And the two grubby little boys turned and fled—and one of them dropped his writing pad and one dropped his pencil, but neither of them even looked around.

When Georgie came back he walked straight up to his mother and put his arm around her neck and kissed her, right before the whole street full, and said, "Don't you be scared, Mamma, they shan't hurt you a bit." And he wasn't angry any longer.

Gone—little mother—he's gone—out of your life, forever, your baby boy. You can't comfort him any more; you can't protect him, you can't help him—for every single thing you do for that boy of yours from this day on—so long as you let him know that you do it—will weaken him and make him that much more unfit to fight his own battles in his own war of life.

No matter how hurt he is, no matter in what danger he walks, no matter how close behind him stalk fearful dangers, you can't do a thing.

A Real Little Man.

If you do you give him over into the hands of his enemies—as no treacherous foe in the world could ever do. "Georgie is a ba-by—Georgie is a ba-by," that's what they'll sing about your boy if you let anyone see that you are trying to help him.

Stand inside the window next time, little mother, and clinch your little helpless hand till the nails bite into the flesh, but do not so much as open the window, no matter what betides.

One, two, a half a dozen—all after your boy to do him mischief—and you would give the heart out of your breast to be able to save him one angry bruise, one pang of humiliated defeat. It is his fight; you must not interfere.

"Georgie is a ba-by—Georgie is a ba-by." I listen every day at the hour for the closing of the first grade. Some day I shall hear Georgie chanting, and it will be he who is saying that somebody else is a baby, for so comes justice and knocks at the door of every human life, and somewhere in some curtained room some woman will stand and clench her hand to keep from running out and giving Georgie the spanking he so richly deserves.

Good luck to you, Georgie—brave battles, and not too few of them, and don't forget the little mother and how you promised her on the day you found yourself that you would not let anyone hurt her or make her afraid.

For she tried to help you, Georgie. She did, indeed; oh, she did indeed, and you were man enough not to let her do it.

And she was very proud of you because you had no need of her.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

YOUR father died and many of his old friends and yours sent beautiful flowers to the funeral, and were very kind to you all through your trouble, and now you want to know what to do about it?

Why my dear little girl, what should you do? What do you feel like doing?

Don't you want to write a letter to the man who sent such lovely lilies for your father's grave? Well, then, in the name of common sense, why don't you write it?

Say what is in your heart, and say it in plain English.

Just a sweet, simple, grateful, little note written right straight from your sweet, grateful heart, that's all.

Don't worry about what to call your father's old friend, or how to begin your letter or how to end it.

Think of your dear father and how he loved his old friend; remember some pleasant thing you heard him say about that friend, and tell it in the letter.

There's nothing stiff and formal about such a note, or at least there should not be.

Do what your heart tells you to do in a case like this and you can't go wrong.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care this office.

MAKE CAPITAL OF YOUR FAULTS

Ruth Chatterton, of the Klaw and Erlanger Forces.

Stage Favorite Gives Her "Success" Rules

"CAPITALIZE your faults and apply the accrued result to win success."

That is the cryptic advice pretty Ruth Chatterton gave recently when she was invited to speak before a girls' club on the easiest way to get a start up the ladder of fame.

"Don't get that word 'capitalize' confused with 'cultivate,'" she continued, "for it doesn't mean at all the same thing. Indeed, you will find when you begin your work of capitalization your faults will begin to lessen. In fact, you will feel like fault spendthrifts.

"It may seem funny for me to urge you not to go bankrupt in the fault line, but I can assure you, with knowledge of what I say, that the person absolutely without faults must be a very stupid individual. I never knew but one, and had he possessed even one little bit of a genuine fault it would have made him more human. As it was, he was a sort of uninteresting machine without complexity of mechanism to make him worth while.

"When you begin to turn your faults into working capital you will constantly find new material to work with. So as one resource is exhausted you will find some perfectly fresh fault to take its place.

"Take, for example, the fault of selfishness. You may turn that about so that it will become the most valuable of assets. If you are selfish with your friends and companions you will probably be very extravagant with yourself, because the result of being selfish with others is a natural accumulation of self-indulgence.

"Begin by reversing your conduct and be more generous with others and selfish with yourself. Why, you will be perfectly astounded to see how quickly you will begin to clip coupons of friendship and love and happiness.

"Then take the fault of talking all the time about yourself. That is such a tiresome fault that before we realize it we have to keep alert to find any one who will listen to us. Stop for awhile until you can collect some new facts about yourself which will compel attention, and in the mean time talk about things—let personalities have a rest. You know the old line from 'Alice in Wonderland'—'The world is so full of a number of things.' Hunt up some of them and talk about them. And in the mean time you will become so interesting and so charming and will have so much admiration you will not have the slightest excuse to tell people what a wonderful being you are. They will be telling you.

"The fault of laziness—well that is about the worst fault of all. But it is not incurable. An excellent way to treat it is to find some one who is just so busy that she never has a moment to rest or do any of the things she likes to do, and take some of her burdens on your own lazy shoulders. Gradually you will see how happy you are and she is, and how happy others dependent upon her and you are, and there is that old fault of laziness paying the biggest per cent. of any fault.

"And you can go right on through the list and find any number of interesting faults to work with. All the time you are gaining in wisdom and beauty of character and popularity and laying a firm foundation for your future. For, without seeming to sound 'preachy,' I want to tell you, girls, and ask you to tell other girls, that the wrong way to succeed is to coddle yourselves and feel sorry that you have no chance in life. And the right way to succeed is to be honest with one's self. Then you can't help being honest with others."

NATURE the Best Guide to BEAUTY

By Lucrezia Bori

Famous Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York.

Special arrangements have been made with Senorita Lucrezia Bori, the famous prima donna soprano, who has created a wonderful impression in Europe and New York on account of her remarkable beauty and artistic attainment, to write for this paper a series of articles on beauty. There is probably no authority her equal in giving the newest and most approved methods of attaining and preserving "the divine right of women."

LUCREZIA BORI

AFTER studying the beauty methods of several countries, France, Spain, England, America, both North and South, I have come to the conclusion that there is a growing tendency to the natural treatment on the part of beauty culturists.

I find the best of them using more hygiene and less lotions.

They are working from the inside out rather than entirely on the surface. They are seeking the reason why instead of being content to cover faults with no interest in their cause.

They are learning not to try to make beauty by dabbing a lot of unguents on the face and dipping the skin with scented waters and making hypnotic words and phrases do the rest.

When they find the face blotched and yellow and the skin looking as if it were an inheritance from some long buried mummy, and the eyes dull like a fish's, and the hair rough and mangy and split and dry, and the hands red, they don't shake their heads or roll their eyes in horror and despair, and say: "My dear, DEAR lady! You are indeed a very, very sad sight! You have come to us just in time. Perhaps we can save you. It will take all the time you can spare, and all the money you can get, and all the creams and liquids we can invent, and great patience, and a good deal of suffering—we may have to take off this old, worn-out skin and plump out your withered cheeks with sub-cutaneous injections of various pastes and putties before we can make you presentable. And then it will take constant attention, so long as your money holds out, to keep you a fit object for human eyes."

No, they do not say that. Instead, they look you over, and say:

"Mmh, mmh, let us see. Your system is all at sixes and sevens. You have been neglecting all the rules of physical common sense. You are worn by excesses in work and worry and foolish living and lack of sleep.

"Your nerves are frazzled by late hours. You are starving for lack of fresh air. You are suffocated with the close air of steam-heated rooms. Your blood is impoverished. Your liver is fractious. The only wonder is that you don't look a whole lot worse than you do after such a plan of life, and before we try to make your surface beautiful we will put your physical being into shape.

"Then, if you follow the plan of right living, there will be a steady and sure improvement in your looks, and perhaps we can give you some little treatments which will hurry the process along. But there isn't the least bit of good in whitewashing the outside of your body and leaving your machinery in bad order."

And that is the beginning of honesty in beauty culture. Take the most beautiful and perfect plant and give it no sunlight and no water and no air and no care and blow hot blasts on it and let dust and dirt settle on its leaves, and how long think you, dear ladies, that plant will be perfect and beautiful?

Not at all long, I assure you. It will droop and die with great sadness. There is a double lesson in that poor plant. Sadness makes our beauty curl up and die. There is the glorified expression that comes with suffering, but it is not the beauty that comes from joy. No, no! And it is not worth cultivating unless one has so great a sorrow come upon her that there is no escape.

I told you soap and water make my complexion what many call beautiful.

That is true. I, myself, use no make-up except when I sing. But then only the least bit—that I must, for it makes my skin dry.

I would not say all women may have beautiful skins by the use of soap and water alone. There are as many skins as there are personalities. Some are dry and need oils. Others are oily and need astringents. Each skin must receive its own treatment. All must be treated with kindness. They are delicate.

And for all there is the fundamental need for cleanliness.

Very, very hot water and plenty of soap go on my face and [illegible] pores and take out all the dirt and dust. Soft water, purest of soap. Then hot water, hot as I can stand it, until the soap is washed away. Then cold water, cold as will run from the faucet. Lots of it, splashed on and dashed over the face and the throat and the shoulders and arms. And all over the face and throat a bit of ice wrapped in sterilized gauze.

Why? It calls the blood to the surface and makes the cheeks glow; it closes the pores and tightens the muscles. It keeps the firmness of youth. Then, lastly, a dash, a dust cloud of powder. A touch of carmine on the lips. So, it is done. Then back of the ears, on the lobes of the ears just a drop of perfume, the same scent that is in the soap and the powder.

Clean and dainty and fresh—isn't that the beauty trinity for all women to attain?

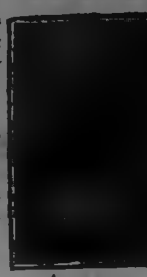
Lucrezia Bori

Secrets of Health and Happiness

How Bewailing Your Ills Postpones Your Recovery

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).



DR. HIRSHBERG

AS you pour the full tide of your eloquence out upon an attentive world you speak either stabbing words and vocal poniards, you soothe and apply balmy phrases or you utter airy nothings in speech broken-light upon the depth of the unspoken.

It is not always out of the abundance of the heart that the mouth speaks. Often speech comes from a paucity of thoughts, even though language is said to be used both to conceal and to express thoughts. The tongue may tell the sickness in the heart, or else conceal it. There is no novelty in the fact that words express thoughts, but it is a new discovery of the experimental laboratory to learn that speech and verbal intercourse act upon and influence thought.

This has, true enough, always been maintained by religion and philosophy, but science, ever the laggard, has just succeeded in satisfying its conservative scepticism with abundant proof to this effect.

That is to say, then, if you speak unpleasant things; if you use blasphemous or obscene phrases; if you discuss your ills, weaknesses, failures and ailments aloud, lo! you will soon think them true.

Since actions follow thoughts you will thus carry out the very mistakes, seem to have the actual maladies, and do the very deeds you spoke about.

Braver for Bragging.

Even the Baron Munchausen is braver and more healthful for his braggadocio. Far better is it to flourish trumpets and exult than to appear by word of mouth unhappy, miserable, laden down with dire distempers and full of melancholy narratives and plaints.

Beware, if there is room for warning, what you mention and to whom. If your thoughts would keep from ill, five things observe with care; to whom you speak, of whom you speak, and how, when and where.

The windy satisfaction of the tongue has its virtues only resident in pleasant, upbuilding, architectonic, gestating sentences.

If your speech is flooded with lamentations, whimperings, squad upon squad of sobs and lachrymations; if your language is eternally full of weepings and gnashing of teeth; if you apparel your phrases mostly in weeds and willows, sackcloth and ashes, dumps and dirges, jeremiads and threnodies, though your thoughts may at first be otherwise they will soon partake of your wry words. Whence, taking one thing with another, you must mend your speech a little, lest it mar your thoughts and thence your fortunes. Make your discourse such as will enchant the ear. Make the verbal shapes of such fine gesture and such sound expression as will make for healthful, happy and heartening thoughts.

Shun Oily Words.

Avoid the glib and oily art to speak and purpose not. Eschew the azure tongue, which exorcises proficient mental equipment. Shun the foul words which in the telling wound your own personality, and in their very expression make for brain disaster.

Answers to Health Questions

L. K., Taunton, Mass.—I am a young man of 19, and every time I wash and comb my hair many of them fall out. What will remedy this?

Try this: Resorcin, one dram; salicylic acid and glycerine one dram; castor oil, three ounces. Massage in well three times a week.

"Doctoring" Pets at Home

By May Eldridge

IN the case of a pet falling victim to a serious accident or malady it is always advisable, of course, to call in the services of a "vet," but there are certain simple treatments which any one can carry out in the event of a pet suffering from a minor ailment.

Often enough dogs and cats appear to be out of form, their coats are ruffled and their noses are hot and dry. This state of affairs can generally be set right by a dose of castor oil, but, like human beings, animals very much disapprove of taking medicine.

On the whole, the best way to give the dog his dose is in the form of capsules, which are easily taken. In a quiet way open his mouth and then slip one or two capsules in, at once closing the jaws gently but firmly. If the mouth is kept closed the dog will, sooner or later, swallow the capsules.

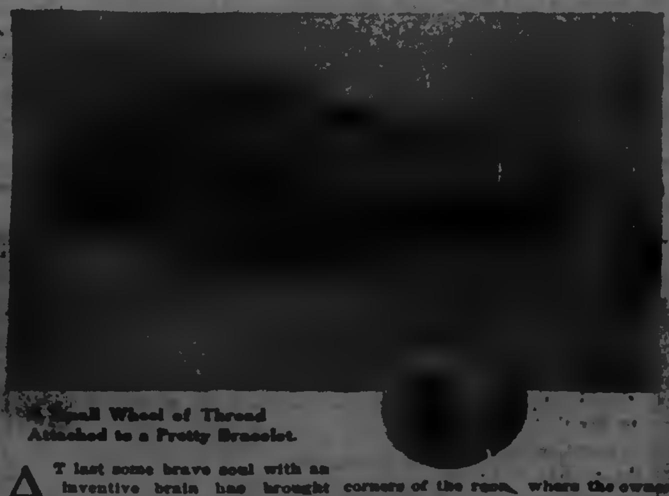
Other medicines which may not be very strong tasting may be mixed up with some favorite food. An excellent way of giving powders to a dog is to mix the medicine with a lump of butter and make the whole thing into a ball. Very few dogs will refuse this. Liquid medicines which are not very nasty may be dropped into milk.

One should always bear a few points in mind when giving medicine to animals. Keep the bottles, etc., well out of sight until the last moment. Have everything ready, so that when the time comes there may be no delay in administering the dose. Behave in an ordinary manner to the creature, calling it by some pet name. Finally, never use force of any sort, save as a last resort.

Temporary surgical aid is often necessary when animals break a bone. Thus, where a dog breaks or sprains his leg, even the roughest kind of splint may save further damage. The leg, of course, is laid on the strip of wood, and, by the use of a long bandage, is held in position until it can be properly set. This will often prevent a dog from having a crooked leg for the rest of his life.

Crochet Bangle Latest Novelty

By Jeannette Young Norton



A Small Wheel of Thread Attached to a Pretty Bracelet.

AT last some brave soul with an inventive brain has brought the "crochet bangle" to the rescue of the devotees of the art; which art, by the way, is coming into fashion again.

Attached to the bangle is a chain loop from which depends a spring grapple. This catches into the hole of the silk or cotton spool, thus allowing it plenty of play as the silk is [illegible] from it by the worker.

It also keeps the [illegible] in sight, instead of rolling to the far corners of the room, where the owner spends much valuable time on her knees rescuing it from its intricate passage around table and chair legs.

The bangle should prove a boon to knitters as well, for with the recent return of the needle arts and crafts we shall see a number of the young women of the summer hotel piazza squad thus busily engaged in the same fashion—not because they love it, [illegible] will be the thing to do.

How People Feel
When They Have
Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulvaney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ½ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulvaney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4830, or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

Waistcoats for Women

A remarkable women's fashion reported from Paris consists in wearing waistcoats of the regulation men's style and size. Some experts predict that a man's heavy gold watch chain will follow suit, to give a finish to the garment.

STAGE JEWELRY

Not Expensive Although It Makes a Regal Showing

While it is quite true that many actresses wear real jewels when upon the stage, much of the glittering stuff which looks so imposing across the footlights is a sham. Royal crowns may be purchased anywhere from $7.50 to $15.00. For the latter amount something very gorgeous indeed can be obtained—all encrusted with precious stones.

Queens' tiaras come cheaper, and for $3.50 one can get a very decent sample. The gems are of colored glass —emeralds, rubies, topazes, sapphires, etc.—except the diamonds which are of plain cut-glass. They cost about 75c a dozen for the cheapest, though the finest ones, such as are appropriate for a monarch, come as high as $1.00 each. What makes them so expensive is not the glass, but the settings, which are made by skilled jewellers.

However, many gems are sold loose for attaching to robes and other garments worn on the stage. They are also set in girdles, bracelets, necklaces, daggers, and swords. A magnificent dagger encrusted with diamonds and rubies as big as pigeons' eggs costs only $12.50. If it were real diamonds instead of imitation it would be worth at least $200,000. Diamond bracelets of the most superb description fetch only $5.00 a pair, while a diamond necklace is worth one-third more. Knightly and other orders are quoted at from $15.00 to $18.00, some of them being very elaborate.

Protecting Immigrant Girls

A determined effort to stamp out the traffic in immigrant girls, and their exploitation by employment bureaus, is to be made by the Montreal Presbytery. A strong committee of the Presbytery was formed to investigate the entire question, to seek means of protecting the girls, and of correcting the abuses of which they are the victims.

What a Name!

Probably the most interesting string of Christian names given to any child in the United Kingdom is borne by a girl in South Wales. By way of showing their admiration of the Budget, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Prime Minister, this girl's parents named her Budgetta Georgina Asquitha.

Big Family of Pensioners

Seven members of one family living in the Ness district of the Island of Lewis (Outer Hebrides) go weekly to the local post office to draw old-age pensions. This remarkable group consists of three brothers and four sisters, all, of course, over seventy years old, the family of John Gunn-Lionel.

Mud-Turtle no Roamer

A mud-turtle was discovered on a farm at Governeur, N. Y., not long ago and carved on its shell was the name of George Kelley. Investigation proved the carving to have been done 54 years previously. The turtle had wandered about 4 miles from its original habitation.

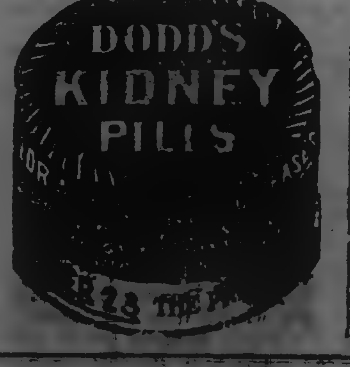
Breadmaking Degenerating?

In these days of bakeries on every corner in town, and traveling bread wagons through the country, the fine art of breadmaking is degenerating. It is too much trouble to mix and knead and bake the beautiful brown loaves, the spick buns, the tempting rolls. Rather, we resort to the chaffy loaf from the baker, or the rolls that are not as good as the homemade bread, no matter how good they seem to-day. The best bakers' bread is far inferior to the homemade product, and I rejoice that breadmaking, as well as stocking-darning, is being taught in more Public schools each year.

The bread-mixer makes the process so easy and simple that almost anyone can succeed in the first attempt. —Farm and Fireside.

New Tax For German Householders

An enormous amount of dissatisfaction has arisen among householders in Germany with regard to the new tax of 50 shillings per annum on every servant kept. For the payment of this sum the State undertakes to relieve the householder of all responsibility when servants become ill.



BUTTERMILK FOUNTAIN

Equipped With Agitator for Use When Desirable

A buttermilk fountain that resembles the type of fountains used with bottled spring water has been designed by a Canadian dairyman. The ice chamber is almost exactly the same, having a receptacle in the centre into which the buttermilk flows, when a jar is placed over it, and a space surrounding for ice. The spigot, however, is unusually large, so the flow of the liquid will not be impeded, and so that it may be easily cleaned. The jar containing the buttermilk is of a special type, with an agitating device running through it and operated by a handle at the top. By revolving this agitator a few times, or moving it up and down, the buttermilk will be sufficiently stirred. This same apparatus may also be used for sweet milk or cream, where agitation is desirable.

MARVELOUS BALSAMIC ESSENCES CURE CATARRH
NO DRUGS TO TAKE--A DIRECT BREATHING CURE

STATISTICS PROVE NINETY-SEVEN PER CENT OF CANADA'S POPULATION IS INFESTED WITH THE GERMS OF CATARRH

This disease is most dangerous owing to its tendency to extend to the Bronchial tubes and lungs, where it causes consumption. Unfortunately the people had bad faith in sprays, ointments and snuffs, which can't possibly cure, and in consequence catarrhal disease has become a national curse. Science is advancing every day, and fortunately a remedy has been discovered that not only cures but prevents Catarrh. This new treatment "Catarrhozone" has sufficient power to kill the germs of Bronchitis, Catarrh and Asthma. It contains pure pine essences and healing balsams that go to the remotest part of the nose, throat and lungs, carrying health-giving medication to every spot that is tainted or weak. You don't take Catarrhozone like cough mixture—you inhale its healing vapor at the mouth and it spreads all througg the breathing organs, soothing and curing wherever Catarrh exists. This is nature's way of supplying the richest balsams, the purest antiseptic known to science.

A sneezing cold is cured in ten minutes. A harsh cough is eased in an hour, the most offensive catarrh is thoroughly drawn from the system.

For Asthma and Bronchial irritation nothing can equal Catarrhozone—Every physician and druggist says so, and we advise our readers to tr this treatment if suffering with a winter ill. The complete outfit costs $1.00, medium size 50c, at all dealers.

Fishing Good at Buckhorn

Lunge and bass are reported as more plentiful at Buckhorn dam than they ever were before. Mine host Tom will thus reap a rich and well deserved harvest from American visitors, Owing to the continued high level of the water the spawn of these game fish has been preserved and will in the natural course of events produce greater and better number of fish.

When the Shoe Pinches.

Sir Robertson complained about the detestable habit of open windows, by which he asserts that he catches cold. It's a safe bet that any Magistrate would exonerate Sir Nicholl for closing his window when he hears Peterborough's citizens kicking about that 26 mill taxation!

Our Royal Visitors.

Mayor Buller has received word that the Royal Party which will honour Peterborough on June 1 will arrive by the C. P. R. and depart by the G. T.R. It is expected that George St. will be in good condition for that date, but the route to the G.T.R. will be along Hunter street and down Aylmer as Charlotte street will hardly be finished by that time.

Mr. James Stewart Heard From.

The Times was yesterday in receipt of a letter from one of our best known local citizens, Mr. James Stewart, who is now in "The Land of the Heather," at present visiting in "Glasgie." Mr. Stewart, at the time of writing, was about to set off on a visit to the "Hielands." We are pleased to note that Mr. Stewart is enjoying good health.

Peterborough Horse Wins.

On Monday Mr. Frank Montgomery's game little mare "Ora Medium" did herself, her owner, Mr. Alf. Switzer, her trainer, and Mr. Storey, the driver credit. This swift little beast at the Colborne races won the half mile heats in the 2.50 class and also the free for all. In the latter she lost the first heat, but then captured three heats running. This mare was up against big competition at that German Veteran in Band.

As the 57th Regiment band was leading the parade on Monday, a Times reporter happened to notice on the breast of a cornet player, an unfamiliar medal suspended from an orange colored ribbon. He also happened at the time to be in conversation with Mr. P. H. F. Spies, of 132 Park street. Mr. Spies knew the bandsman personally. The latter served years ago in the same army corps with Mr. Spies in Bavaria. The bandsman is named Kneiper and he wears Emperor William the First's medal as well as a long service German army medal.

Writ Against Jimmy Bell.

A writ has been issued by Messrs. Hall and Hall, for John J. McBain plaintiff, against James R. Bell, defendant. Plaintiff claims $500 for the obstruction and interference by the defendant with the right of way appurtenant to that part of Lot 5 South of Hunter street and West of George street, in the City of Peterborough, owned by the plaintiff, together with the said right of way as described in a conveyance to the plaintiff dated 19th October, 1903, and registered in the Registry Office for the County of Peterborough.

Generous Men Here.

The funeral of the late S. T. Batty was held yesterday to Little Lake cemetery, Rev. Canon Davidson officiating! The deceased was clerk for the Bell Telephone Co. construction gang under Mr. N. McBrine. It will be remembered that in our issue of Monday we told how Mr. Batty was accidentally fatally injured by falling over a railing above the Grand Hotel stairway by losing his balance whilst engaged in conversation with a young lady. Mr. McBrine took the matter of the deceased's funeral in hand. The telephone construction gang all "chipped in" and paid for a good funeral for Mr. Batty. The proprietor of the Grand and his staff also contributed materially.

THE READING HABIT

Sooner or later we all of us need some kind of consolation and diversion; for the world is not invented to suit any one man's fancy, and the continuous clash of wills is bound to bring about a certain amount of sorrow to everyone. Of all consolations, the cheapest, the easiest, the most effective, is a passion for the printed page. To be able to step out of our immediate environment at will, to roam the centuries, to scour the earth, to beckon the spheres, to have all the best minds ready to serve our need—this is the gift for the reader.

Reading, like everything else, is a matter of habit. The little child, as a rule, finds it painful and certainly less alluring than action. But habit perfects one in this matter, and the life with books may become as vital, as real, as consoling as a life with society. Moreover, as soon as one has learned to love them, books never fail us; they are always accessible, always willing to yield up their secrets, always sympathetic.

In life one cannot always cultivate the associations we would like. The people you want to know may live at the other ends of the earth, or their moods may be variable, or their interests other than yours; but in a world of books we can literally choose just what we want for our own immediate consolation.

On the whole, there is nothing in the world, perhaps, so repays a person as acquiring the habit of reading.—"Harper's Weekly."

ORDER MADE FOR HINDU DEPORTATION

Physical Test Shows Would-be Immigrants Are Not Fit

Ottawa, May 7.—The Hindu question was up in the House again this morning, when Hon. Frank Oliver asked for further information as to the disposition of these Hindus.

Premier Borden in the absence of Hon. Dr. Roche, replied that he understood some twenty had been allowed to land owing to the fact that they were returning to Canada after an absence, a number had been ordered deported as they did not come up to the physical tests. As to the remainder the law would be enforced.

Mr. Oliver said he presumed that there would be an appeal to the courts. Would the Government permit such an appeal?

The Premier retorted that the Government did not have control of the courts of the land.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier asked if there was an appeal by way of habeas corpus would the Government resist.

The Premier replied that the Government would undoubtedly be represented. If they considered it was a case where habeas corpus should not be involved they would resist.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Mrs. Murty.

The late Mrs. Murty, aged 87 years died on Tuesday at the family residence, 380 Brock street. Four sons and one daughter all at home survive. The funeral will be held this afternoon at nine o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral and cemetery.

Miss Plunkett

Miss Ellen Plunkett, aged 59 years passed away on Tuesday at Nicholls Hospital. Deceased was born in Ireland, but had lived the greater portion of her life in Keene. The funeral will take place this afternoon from the residence of her aunt, Mr. Plunkett, Keene, to Fife's cemetery.

Mrs. John Sawers.

After a long illness in Nicholls Hospital, Mary Jane Sawers passed away yesterday at the residence of her brother, Mr. Frank Sanderson, Reid street. The deceased was the widow of the late John Sawers who was a prominent resident of Smith township. She was widely known and highly respected. She leaves to mourn her demise a sister Mrs. Jos. Michael, of Lakefield; James, of McKee of Smith, and five brothers, Davidson, Sask.; Frank, of Peterborough, Edward of Smith and Wm. of Asphodel.

Funeral arrangements later.

To Regain a Healthy, Girlish Complexion

If you would have a clear, fresh, girlish complexion, one ounce of ordinary mercolized wax will aid you in this direction more than shelves full of cosmetics. It produces a natural beauty. This wax procurable at any drug store, completely absorbs a bad complexion, revealing the healthy young skin underneath. Its work is done so gradually, day by day, that no inconvenience is caused. The wax is applied at night, like cold cream, and removed in the morning with soap and water.

Another valuable rejuvenating treatment this for wrinkles—is to bathe your face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel. This has a remarkable action in smoothing out the lines and "firming up" the loose tissue.

THE NEW TRENT CANAL

The T.V.C. between the Bay of Quinte and Peterborough (to the locks) will be open this autumn for traffic. The locks of this stretch are 175 feet by 45 feet, with 8 feet 4 inches draught on the sill. This makes a really big barge canal, the equal of any canal in the world. From Lake Simcoe to Georgian Bay is of the same capacity. From Peterborough to Lake Simcoe (the middle link), the locks are smaller and the draught only 6 feet 2 inches. To make this middle link equal to the remainder will cost $1,500,000, and will be undertaken without delay. While the canal will be open from end to end by the spring of 1915 at any rate, the new Trent will not be ready for four years, but this will not postpone the opening of the canal. The new Trent will be worth having. It will put the Trent district on the great highway of commerce. The future is bright for this section of Canada.

TRADES UNIONISTS MAY YET PREVENT ULSTER'S COERCION

Laborites Show Growing Disaffection and May Break From Coalition

Stavely, Derbyshire, England, May 27.—Whether a general election comes soon or late the fate of the Government is likely to be affected by the coalition split in the Northeast Derbyshire bye-election, to which I have drawn attention in another letter. The refusal of the Labor party leaders in this constituency to continue their former practice of uniting with the Liberals on a joint candidate may well be regarded as very significant.

The labor men threaten to precipitate three-cornered contests in several neighboring Midland constituencies, and there is a possibility that the cleavage may become so wide spread as to smash the Asquith Government irretrievably.

Radical Members Fearful.

Already the split has implanted such fear in the hearts of Liberal members of Parliament that so far only one of them has dared to appear in the Northeast Derbyshire contest. The anxiety of one and all of these Radical members is that in the pending general election the Labor party may make reprisals against them and even nominate third candidates in their own home constituencies. Thus Mr. Houfton, the local Government candidate, is left to fight his present battle almost alone or with the assistance of local talent.

Would it be going too far to suggest that the Labor people are not over-anxious about the adoption of the Home Rule Bill? Do they grow weary of Nationalist domination at Westminster? Are they beginning to be influenced by the eloquent and pathetic appeals of Trades Union delegates sent over by their fellow-toilers and co-religionists in Northern Ireland?

SUFFRAGETTE MADE SENSATION AT DERBY

She Shot at a Police Officer and Burned His Trousers

Epsom, May 27. Ada Rice, supposed to be a militant suffragette, was arrested on Epsom Downs today after she had discharged a pistol loaded with blank cartridges at a policeman.

The powder burned through the officer's trousers and blistered one of his legs.

TWO HORSES KILLED

Two Farmers on the Warsaw Road Lose Valuable Horses.

Word was received last night by The Times that Mr. William Leahy and Mr. McAhon, both of whom live on the Warsaw road, each lost a valuable horse by lightning yesterday, the storm being particularly severe in that locality.

One year ago, Mr. McAhon had his barn burned during an electric storm. It is said that lightning does not always strike in the same place twice, but this case has evidently proved an exception

PRIVATE WIRELESS MAY CAUSE TROUBLE

Ottawa, May 27.—With no less than five hundred private wireless equipments in Montreal, two hundred more in Toronto and hundreds of others scattered throughout the towns and cities and villages of Eastern Canada, the Radiotelegraphy branch of the Naval Department is facing what may prove a serious difficulty in the carrying on of its work when the storms of next autumn commence to sweep the coasts and lakes. Were these merely receiving equipments there would be no touble, but many of them are transmitting as well, and already in Montreal and Toronto there has been trouble caused by the private instruments breaking into wave lengths of the Government stations.

Senator McHugh and Horses

Yesterday Senator McHugh of Lindsay, was a guest, at the Snowdon House, en route to Ottawa. In conversation with a Times scrib) he Senator recalled a horse deal he made at Bobcaygeon some thirty years ago. It seems that a gentleman living in Bobcaygeon used to rely greatly on the Senator's judgment in buying horses. Mr. McHugh was out at the Bobcaygeon man's farm one day. In a paddock were a number of mares with recently born colts. The Senator sized up a colt and asked: "How much do you want for that colt"? The owner replied: "You can have any colt in the paddock but that one for $50, but I want $100 for the colt you pick." The money was paid over. After the deal was made the Bobcaygeon man asked: "Why did you pick that colt? Don't you think you paid too much for it?" A year later the colt won a gold medal at Toronto brought $700 from a man living in Iowa.

MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT ARE ENTERING UPON CAMPAIGN

Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, Will Address Several Conventions in the Western Section of Ontario During the Next Few Days

Toronto, May 27.—Political conventions are a rather general topic in many parts of the Province. In Toronto there is much more activity than usual amongst the Ward Associations and in the rural constituencies all kinds of enthusiasm prevails in both the Conservative and Liberal camps, while in some sections the temperance forces are exhibiting much energy, proposing to put candidates in the field with no other party but "progibition." Regardless of the fact that an official announcement from the Ontario Cabinet in Council is lacking there is a feeling in the air that an election is not very far in the future and the politicians are going ahead with preparations.

Getting Into Campaign.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary leaves this evening to get into the excitement and he will be busy for the next few days at conventions. To-morrow he will address the Centre Huron Conservatives at Seaforth. On Friday he will go to Watford, where the East Lambton Conservatives convene. Then he will proceed to Petrolea, where the West Lambton Conservatives meet to choose a candidate on Saturday, and on Monday the Minister will proceed to Kingsville to attend the South Essex Conservative convention.

Other Ministers Going.

Hon. I. B. Lucas, Provincial Treasurer, will address the East Durham Conservatives at Millbrook, where it is generally conceded that Hon. Dr. Preston will get the nomination by acclamation.

Hon. Mr. Hearst is going to Orillia where the East Simcoe Conservatives will doubtless again pin their faith in Mr. A. C. Hartt, the sitting member.

CLAIMS OF HINDUS PRESSED BY THEIR LEADER AT OTTAWA

Ottawa, May 27!—The seriousness of the Hindu problem and earnestness of the Hindus in their endeavors to force Canada to recognize their rights to enter the Dominion without hindrance as British subjects, has been emphasized by the arrival in Ottawa of Dr. Sundar Singh, one of the leaders of the Hindu colony at the coast, and editor of the Hindu paper published at Vancouver. Dr. Singh interviewed a number of the members of the Government to-day and urged upon them the claims of the Hindus and the reasons why his four hundred fellow-countrymen, now quarantined on the steamer Komogata Maru, should be admitted to Canada.

Dr. Singh asked also that a Royal Commission be appointed to inquire into the whole question and place the rights of the Hindus on a different basis. It is very possible that later this may be done by the Government, as it is merely cognizant that the present laws are unsatisfactory, and that a permanent solution of this question must be found. The situation is complicated by the art that only permanent solution the British Columbia members will be satisfied with is total exclusion.

As the matter stands now the shipload of Hindus are being excluded on two grounds. The first is under the Order-in-Council passed on April 1, excluding for six months all artisans and laborers from entering British Columbia ports. In the nature of thing? this order cannot be made permanent. The second is the regulation that Orientals must come by direct passage from their native land. That this can be easily evaded is certain. It is believed that between now and next session the Government will endeavor to work out a permanent solution either by Royal Commission or through departmental inquiry.

REV. DR. SCADDING DEAD.

Portland, Ore., May 27.—Right Rev. Charles Scadding, Episcopal Bishop of Oregon, died here early today of pleural pneumonia.

PETES FELL DOWN IN LAST OF SERIES WITH ERIE--3-1

Erie took the last game from the Petes yesterday of the series. And it was some game, the boys taking another holiday. Although a high wind was blowing and the grounds after the rain were in bad shape, the boys did not play up to the mark. Base-running was not on the programme and a good many chances were lost by the slowness of the joggers. Schettler pitched a good game for the Petes, as did also Brown of the visitors, but the boys on both teams were not in the best of form. Erie was there with the willow and tapped out 13 hits to Petes 6. The score at the end of the ninth stood 3—1 in favor of Erie.

Kelly catching for the Petes, put up a brilliant game and was fighting all the time.

The team journeys to London to-day and it is hoped that they will get down to business.

OFFICIAL AUDITOR

Some Curious Rulings of an Important John Bull Authority

The Local Government Board employs a small army of auditors, whose duty it is to check the accounts of local authorities, such as Boards of Guardians, Town Councils, District Councils, and the like. An auditor has power to disallow any items which he considers unjustifiable expenditure. This means that the individuals who authorised it have personally to "stand the racket." On one occasion a curious surcharge was made in the course of the audit of the accounts of the Southampton Poor Law Authorities. It was for the cost of hymn books supplied for the use of the workhouse inmates, at the price of four shillings and sixpence per copy. The books were Moody and Sankey's "Sacred Songs and Solos," which, it was gravely stated, had been purchased, "with music complete," so that the paupers should be "in tune with the choir." In the circumstances, it was scarcely surprising that the guardians had to face the music of the surcharge. A purchase made for the recreation of the nurses led to a curious surcharge on a West of England union. Amongst the accounts was one for a croquet set, which the auditor did not consider justifiable expenditure. As might be supposed, the guardians did not agree with him in this; but, rather than have any trouble, they raised the amount of the account amongst themselves.

CAPABLE QUEENS

Royal Ladies Who Could Earn Their Livings

Queen Elisabeth of Belgium, for instance, possesses a doctor's diploma of the University of Leipsig. Besides she is an excellent musician and plays piano and violin with great skill. Failing to obtain jobs in these lines she would make a good taxi-cab driver.

Queen Mary of England paints, sings, and is clever with her needle. Queen Victoria Augusta of Germany is a specialist with the camera and produces a special kind of art photo. Queen Wilhelmina of Holland paints miniatures and porcelain, while Queen Maud of Norway is a distinguished playwright, using the pseudonym of Graham Irving. She is also a competent bookbinder, dressmaker, and painter.

"Carmen Sylva" (Queen Elizabeth of Roumania) is a world-famous poetess and novelist. Helena, Queen of Italy, has jokingly remarked that, in case of need, she could easily earn $400 a week in the music halls of London or New York as an expert swimmer and riflewoman. What is less known, she is a devoted archaeologist.

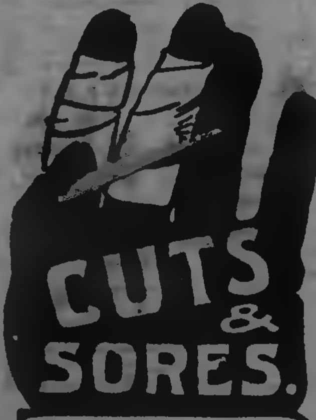
Moscow's Silent Club

It seems that there is in real life a club similar to one imagined by Sir Conan Doyle in his Sherlock Holmes' stories. The Moscow Prefecture confirmed the statutes of a club in that city, the chief feature of which is the absolute silence imposed on its members within the club precincts. Any infraction of this cardinal rule involves a monetary penalty. The club is well appointed and luxuriously equipped. It is furnished with billiards, chess, cards, and other games. Gesture is the only medium of intercourse among its members. The same rigid regulation obtains at the club buffet and in the dining-room, as well as in the library and general rooms. Orders are conveyed to the silent waiters by means of tablets they carry.

Glycerine For the Lips

While glycerine is extremely bad for the complexion it is quite the best, most inexpensive, and harmless form of lip salve, and without giving the artificial appearance to the lips which an ordinary salve does, keeps them soft and prevents cracking.

Women who habitually wear a veil should never omit to smear a very little glycerine over the lips before going out, as the wearing of a veil often causes the lips to become rough and chapped, especially in windy weather.



Apply Zam-Buk to all wounds and sores and you will be surprised how quickly it stops the smarting and brings ease. It covers the wound with a layer of protective balm, kills all poison germs already in the wound, and prevents others entering. Its rich healing herbal essences then build up from the bottom, fresh tissue; and in a wonderfully short time the wound is healed!

Zam-Buk's popularity is based on merit. Imitations never work cures. Be sure and get the real thing. "Zam-Buk" is printed on every packet of the genuine. Refuse all others. 50c all druggists and stores or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

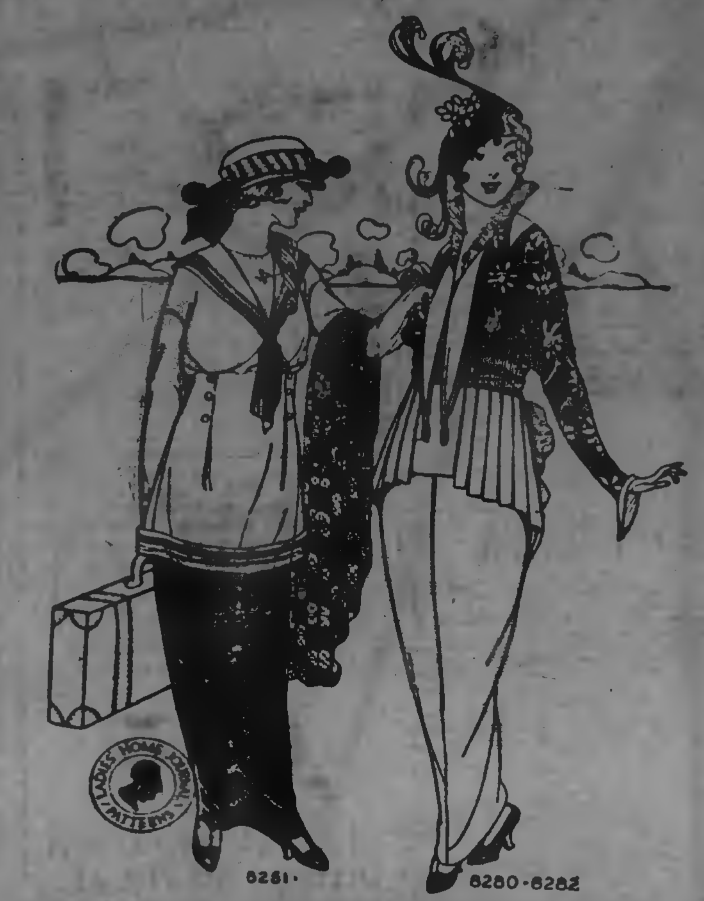
MUNICIPAL FORMS ALWAYS IN STOCK



THE CUFF ON THE TUNIC A NOVEL FEATURE OF THIS SAILOR DRESS.

A sailor suit is almost indispensable in the young girl's wardrobe; it is so comfortable and well suited to school wear. Blue serge is the usual material, although there is no reason why another color should not be used or another material. For summer, white serge or flannel is appropriate, of course, the collar, cuffs and tunic being outlined with a colored mohair braid.

For a girl of 16, this dress requires 5¾ yards of 42 inch material.

The new figured voiles and crepes are being much used for blouse purposes, not in white alone, but in soft tints of yellow, pink, green or blue. There is usually a touch of black or other sharply contrasting dark color, to give character; for instance a pale yellow blouse has a tiny collar of black net or a pendant of jet.

In No. 8280-8282 the bodice is fashioned of yellow crepe and on each end of the tie is a tassel of black silk. The skirt is a two-piece model of tete de negre duvetyn, with the upper part laid in soft pleats to give a tunic effect.

ICELANDERS ADAPTABLE

Professor Thinks They Discovered America

"Icelanders and their contributions to History" was the theme chosen by Professor A. Holmes, Ph.D., M.D., of Queen's University before the Ottawa Teachers' Association in the Toronto Normal school hall. "The Commonwealth of Iceland was created owing to the irresponsibility of a woman," quoted Mr. Holmes. "'Only will I say yea to being his sole and lawful wife,' said a maiden exceeding fair to Harold Hairfair, 'when he brings to subjection all Norway as freely as does King Eric rule the Swede realm.'"

After a brief historical sketch of the history of Iceland, and upon observations made during the course of a tour of the country last summer, Professor Holmes asserted that there was no doubt in his mind that the Icelanders were the first to discover America. "Their newspapers," continued the speaker, "excel in terseness, capacity of action and passion, and powers of description."

"It is no wonder that the modern Icelander should so excel in matters of learning after so many centuries of educated ancestors."

NO MORE DREADNOUGHTS

Small Heavily Armed Ships Much Better

The navies of the world have built 101 battleships of the dreadnought type since the British navy launched the original dreadnought. The passing of the century mark came with the launching of the British battle-cruiser Tiger, and with that the decision of the British naval authorities to build no more warships of just that type. It has been reported that the smaller vessel more heavily armed will be the fashion during the next season of British naval designing. The building of 101 dreadnoughts in eight years means that an average of more than one of these mammoth ships a month has been launched.

England has 11,500 ships engaged in foreign trade, Germany over 2,000, Japan nearly 1,000 while the United States has only nine ships so engaged.

In Paris there is a corps of professional dinner-tasters, whose duty it is to test and pass judgment upon all food prepared for banquets and similar occasions of State.

Never feed chicks, turkeys, ducks or geese any more than they will eat up promptly at each feeding time.

A Gifted Authoress

Miss Leona Dalrymple, on returning from an afternoon walk, found the head of a publishing company, well known in Canada and the United States awaiting her arrival with a $10,000 check and the information that she had won it with her story "Diane of the Green Van," which she had submitted in a story-writing contest conducted by his firm.

Miss Dalrymple has been writing ever since she was a little girl. She is musical as well as literary, but her father says that he is just as proud of the fact that his daughter is a good cook as that she won $10,000 in a contest in which nearly 1,000 manuscripts were submitted.

DANISH EEL FARM

Breeding Eels For Market Proves Very Profitable

There has been established on the coast of Denmark an eel farm, which is proving a profitable undertaking.

Within an embankment there are 900 acres of water, most of it about two feet deep. The surface of the water is a few feet above the level of the fiord, which lies on the other side of the embankment, and which has practically no tidal changes. The water of the lake is fresh, and the fiord water is fairly salt.

When the eel-fry put in an appearance in the fiord, at the end of their long journey from the breeding grounds in the Atlantic ocean, the owner lowers a rough crate heaped full of water weeds across the front of the sluicegate. He then raises the gate so that a stream of fresh water flows through the crate and down a sloping channel to the fiord. The elvers, in search of fresh water, make their way up stream into the crate, and remain entangled among the weeds, which every now and then are lifted, spread out, and shaken over a piece of very fine-meshed net.

Mr. Nielsen collects the elvers in this way, instead of letting them have a free run to the lake, in order that he may know exactly how many he puts in every year.

Looked Poor, Was Rich

A miserably-clad woman was found by the police lying in the street in a Paris slum the other day. She was taken to the Charité Hospital, where $2,250 in notes and gold was found sewn inside her ragged skirt. The woman, Natalie Pollet, sixty-eight years old, went out charing, and her neighbors believed her to be so poor that they had been in the habit of giving her presents of food and clothing.

MECHANICAL MIDGETS

Beautiful and Costly Wonders Made by Clever Artisans

A tiny gold watch such as is worn on a woman's bracelet is a marvel of minute workmanship. Of the screws used it takes nearly 130,000 of a certain kind to weigh a pound. Under a microscope they appear in their true character—perfectly-finished bolts. The pivot of the balance-wheel is only one two-hundredth part of an inch. Each jewel-hole into which a pivot fits is about one five-thousandth of an inch larger than the pivot, to permit sufficient play.

The finest screw for a small-sized watch has a thread of 260 to the inch, and weighs one one-hundred-and-thirty-thousandth of a pound. Jewel slabs of sapphire, ruby, or garnet are first sawed into slabs one-fiftieth of an inch thick, and are shellbacked to plates so that they may be surfaced. Then the individual jewels are sawed or broken off, drilled through the centre, and a depression made in the convex side for an oil-cup. A pallet jewel weighs one one-hundred-and-fifty-thousandth of a pound, a roller jewel a little more than one two-hundred-and-fifty-six-thousandth. The largest round hairspring stud is four-hundredthe of an inch in diameter, and about nine-hundredths of an inch in length.

Watchmaker's Marvels

A marvel of minuteness and completeness is an engine made by an American clockmaker. It weighs about fifteen grains, and can be entirely covered by an ordinary thimble. The stroke of the piston is a little over one-twelfth of an inch, and its diameter less than one-ninth of an inch. The engine is built of 140 distinct pieces, fastened together by fifty-two screws, and three drops of water fill the boiler and set the engine in motion. It would require about 12,000 such engines to do the work of one horse!

Another marvel of ingenuity in the same line was produced by a watchmaker. This little engine is of the upright pattern, and is made of silver and gold. It rests on a 25-cent gold piece, and can be worked either by steam or compressed air. The cylinder is a little less than one-sixteenth of an inch in diameter, with a little less than three-thirty-seconds of an inch stroke. The balance-wheel is one-third of an inch in diameter, and can make something like 1,000 revolutions a minute.

An Exquisite Boat

An English jeweller made a tiny boat out of a single pearl. It was suggested to him by the original shape of the gem, and he most ingeniously carried out his design. He made the sails of beaten gold and studded with tiny brilliants, whilst the binnacle was a lovely, though minute, ruby. An emerald served as the rudder, and the tiny craft stood on a slab of ivory almost microscopic in size. The weight of the boat, tackle and dock was under half an ounce, but the price was infinitely heavier.

The Italians are adepts at minute work, for there are artists in Florence who will take particles of glass and stone no larger than a mustard seed and piece them together on the head of a shirt stud with such nice adjustment of delicate shades of color that minute flowers and insects are represented in perfect detail, with all the truthfulness of nature. An Italian lady, too, painted a landscape in which appear a windmill, millers, a cart and horse, and passengers, with such diminutive neatness that half a grain of corn can cover the whole composition.

SEEDS ARE USED TO WEIGH DIAMONDS

Few People know That the Original Carat Grew on a Stately Tree

What is a carat?

Everybody, at some time or another, has boasted that the ring he or she wears is 22 carats' fine. Or that the diamond in the ring weighs a carat and a half and is an especially fine, large, valuable stone. But what is a carat? And why was such a term selected instead of ounce or gram or or grain?

It's a very curious thing that not one person in a thousand probably ten thousand—knows what a carat is. And there is probably not one person in a hundred thousand who knows that the use of the term is different in its relation to gold from its use in relation to precious stones, although in both instances the weight is referred to. The facts are these:

The original carat is the seed of an Abyssinian coral flower, or coral tree. The name was also applied by the Arabians to any pod or husk and particularly to the fruit of the locust tree. It probably was introduced into Abyssinia by the Arabs. In those days there was no system of weights or measures—or at least there was none among the nomadic Arabs and the Abyssinians. Gold was traded by its weight, and, as the seeds of the Abyssinian coral tree were uniformly the same size and weight, it gradually became the custom to weigh gold with these seeds, and gold, therefore, was said to weigh so many carats—or, in other words, so many seeds.

In modern times, with our well arranged system of weights and measures, the carat seems to have become, not a distinct term of weight when applied to gold, but a term of purity. Gold is weighed now by the troy pound or ounce. It would seem to be much easier to state that an ounce of gold is 98 per cent. pure or 75 per cent. pure. But the jewelers and assayers think differently. They divide gold into 24 parts, instead of 100 parts as they would do if they figured by percentage, and each of these parts is called a carat. Thus you might get a gold bracelet or necklace that weighed three or four ounces and yet would only be 14 carats' fine. That would mean that your bracelet or necklace was fourteen-twenty-fourths pure gold and ten-twenty-fourths alloy. The ordinary wedding ring is 22 carats' fine. It is very seldom that anything is made 24 carats' fine pure gold. The metal is too soft.

With diamonds and other precious stones the carat is a term of weight—the weight of the old seeds. One carat weighs three and one-sixth troy grains in this country. But, strangely enough, it is different in other countries. For instance, in London it is 250.4 milligrams; in Paris, 205.7 milligrams; in Berlin, 205.44 milligrams; in Amsterdam, 205.75 milligrams. This system of having a different weight for the carat in different countries has caused the jewelers to start a movement for the standardization of the carat all over the world at 200 milligrams or about 3 grains in the system of weights and measures.

GUARDING THE FORESTS

Dominion Government Tells Campers How to Build Fires

The regulations relating to the preservation of Dominion forest reserves are very stringent but probably necessary to prevent a big annual fire loss. In regard to the lighting of fires, it is provided that every person who makes or starts a fire in the open air for cooking or camping purposes shall: (a) Select a bare rock whereon to kindle such a fire wherever possible and if there be no bare rock in the neighborhood, then a site on which there is the smallest quantity of vegetable matter, dead trees, branches, brushwood, dry leaves or resinous trees. (b) Clear the place in which he is about to light the fire by removing all vegetable matter, etc., from the soil within a radius of ten feet from the fire. (c) Exercise and observe every possible precaution to prevent such fire from spreading, and carefully extinguish the same before quitting the place. Severe penalties are provided for neglect of proper observation of these regulations.

Pencils Use Much Lumber

Lead pencil manufacture in the United States is consuming 72,000,000 feet of lumber annually, of which about one-half is estimated to be wasted in sharpening or throwing away short ends.

PERILOUS WISDOM

It is an interesting fact that the ancients knew the secret of malleable crystal. In the time of Tiberius an artisan invented a malleable glass, and the shop in which he worked was wrecked for fear that his discovery would bring about a reduction in the price of bronze, gold and silverware.

Pliny refers to this legend and years after another author relates the same story with variations. According to him, the artisan, who was also an architect, restored from partial ruin one of the handsomest of Roman porches, and Tiberius, having a notorious jealousy of any man who surpassed himself even in matters entirely outside of his province, took a violent dislike to one who, he said was trying to undermine the well-established order of things. Tiberius pointed out that, if the ancient porch had not been restored, hundreds of workmen might have been given labor in the construction of a new one. The man was, accordingly banished. Naturally, the architect reasoned that if he could convince the head of the state of the good that might result from the numerous ideas he had evolved, the emperor would modify his opinion and even assist him in the maturing of certain of his plans. So he went back to Rome and obtained an interview with Tiberius.

The emperor is described as listening patiently to what he had to say and finally demanding proof. For answer he flung to the floor a crystal goblet, which dented, and bent it back into shape with his own hands. He was thereupon condemned to death.

Still another version is that Tiberius in a rage at the imprudence of one who claimed to do what Cæsar could not, smashed the crystal and sat spellbound when the artisan took a hammer and twisting it as if it were copper, made a vase of it. The emperor then calmly asked him what else he could do in the way of wonders, and being told that this was all, bad the man executed.

NEW PLAY APPARATUS

Wheeled Platform Propelled by Pushing One Foot

After watching small boys coasting about on home-made vehicles propelled by one foot, a man with youngsters of his own designed a more elaborate affair on the same principle. A low platform is mounted on four wheels, the two axles of the device being connected by a strong steel band, on which the footboard rests. The construction is such that by tilting the footboard to right or left of the wheels will turn in the same direction but the boy will not upset. The long handle is adjustable to any height and is used more for support than for guidance. To operate the vehicle a boy stands with one foot on the platform and with the other foot pushes it ahead until sufficient momentum is attained to carry it on. He then gets aboard with both feet and guides it by throwing the weight of his body on one side or the other.

A CLEVER ANIMAL IS THE BEAVER

Country Once Swarmed With Millions of These Busy and Intelligent Little Workers

The beaver is the smartest of all wild animals. He has a mental process which corresponds to the reasoning power in man. Also he is a genuine historical celebrity. No other animal has cut such a figure in the development of the North American continent.

Before the white man came beavers were distributed over North America perhaps more widely than any other animal. The beaver population was probably densest to the south-west of Hudson Bay and about the headwaters of the Missouri and Columbia Rivers. Along the thousands of smaller streams throughout North America there was colony after colony, dam after dam, in close succession, sometimes as many as 300 beaver ponds to the mile.

The beaver population at the beginning of the seventeenth century must have been upward of 100,000,000 distributed over an area of approximately 6,000,000 square miles.

The majority of dams are made of slender green poles, which are placed lengthwise with the flow for the bottom, and set braced with the end upstream a foot or so higher than the downstream end. With these there are occasionally used small limby trees. The large end of the tree is placed upstream and the small bush end downstream.

If in a current these sometimes are weighted down with mud and stone. Short, stout sticks and long, slender poles are deftly mingled in the dam as it rises.

Beaver houses that are built in a pond usually stand in three or four feet of water. The foundation is laid on the bottom of the pond, of the size intended for the house, and built up a solid mass to a few inches above water level. This island-like foundation is covered with a dome-shaped house, the central portion of the foundation forming the floor of the low-vaulted room which is enclosed by the thick house walls. In building the house the beaver provides a temporary support for the combined roof and walls by piling in the centre of the floor a two-foot mound of mud. Over this is placed a somewhat flattened tepee or cone-shaped frame of sticks and small poles. These stand on the

NEW PAPER MATERIAL

Elephant Grass May Prove a Substitute For Wood Pulp

Almost every month of every year brings a report of the discovery in some distant part of the world of a new paper making material, which is expected to take the place of wood pulp. One of these discoveries was made in Uganda, Africa, and the Imperial Institute of London described in a report on the subject a series of experiments made with this new material, which is known as elephant grass. The marshlands of tropical Africa are thickly covered with this grass, which grows to a height of from six to ten feet and has proved a source of trouble and expense to agriculturists, as it grows rapidly after the shoots above ground have been burned or cut down. A sample of dried mature elephant grass was sent recently from Uganda to the Imperial Institute with the object of ascertaining its suitability for the manufacture of paper. The consignment, which weighed 177 pounds after being air dried, yielded a pulp of good color, composed of ultimate fibre rather longer than those of esparto grass and about the same length as those of bamboo pulp. It furnished a fairly good paper, which the British experts expect to be able to improve so as to make this material a suitable and profitable substitute for wood pulp.

Cross a Real Mystery

Leach Cross is one of the mysteries of the ring, says Jim Corbett. There is no denying he can fight when he cares to. Nearly all his battles have been over the ten-round course right in New York. At times his showing has been of a high order, and at others he has looked like a preliminary scrapper. Cross likes to meet the rushing, slam-bang fellows. He has a wallop, second to none, and knows how to use it on the fellows who tear in. Long experience has taught him that. But every time that Leach has boxed a clever man, his showing has been very ordinary, and that is the reason why he so frequently enters the ring at a good price in the betting.

Pantalets and Close Bodices Newest Whims

By Madge Marvel

AS the tunics expand in flare there is a tendency to fit the bodice close to the lines of the figure. I have seen several of the latest models with tunics that were pleated full and bodices devoid of gathers. They put a test on the wearer's figure. When one has been allowing the recent blousiness to cover whatever shortcomings of form one might have it is somewhat of a shock to find all fulness fast disappearing.

I have noticed several pantalet skirts worn on the street. They created almost a sensation. One—should one say pair?—one costume on this order had the pantalets of black satin. The tunic, which flared with astonishing fulness quite six inches above, was of black and white checked suiting. A black satin waistcoat with yellow buttons and very smart little pockets showed underneath the Eton coat of the check, and a starched linen collar, cut somewhat on the order of the choker collars the old-time country squire wore, finished the neck.

Girdles Are Lowered.

The hat was a cocher's hat of black varnished straw with two curling quills. If the wearer had been less youthful, less resplendently fresh-faced and less slender and graceful, one might tremble at the effect of the garb.

Another hint of future changes came to me in two imported frocks with narrow girdles, which were lowered the minutest fraction of an inch in front. In these days of style madness one has to take account of so many seemingly unimportant details. On them may hinge the big transformation. We have had fitted basques. Some of the blouses have been made to wear over the skirt. Now with the suspicion of a dip in the front of the newest girdle, isn't it logical to expect a semi-return to the long waist with the pointed front?

It is the time when the little flimsy summer frocks are beginning to usurp the place of all more substantial attire. I cannot remember a season when so much style and charm has been combined in these gowns. The materials and colorings are alluring and the draperies and ruffles and pleatings and puffings all make it possible to look both smart and picturesque at a minimum cost.

I was shown the sweetest little mulle frock at the modiste's, which any clever woman could duplicate in the house with the aid of a seamstress.

It was developed in that new shade known as watermelon pink. The skirt was plain with a shaped flounce applied at the knees in apron effect.

Frocks of Dimity.

It was edged in narrow satin ribbon and put on with a cord of the same. The bodice had kimono sleeves with deep white organdie cuffs, a surplice waistcoat or vestee of the same and a flaring collar to match. There was a girdle of black satin with a watermelon pink stripe, tied at one side with one of the bows pointing upward on the bodice and two loops extending almost to the ruffle. At each side of the bodice, where it joined the vestee, there were groups of pink crystal buttons rimmed in black.

Another frock in this same establishment was of dimity, little pink and purple posies on a cream ground. It was charmingly summery, the skirt trimmed with three ruffles of the material, the topmost one having a gathered heading and being placed midway between the hips and the knees. The last was midway between the knees and the hem.

The bodice was a simple kimono blouse and about the neck was fichu ruffle of white batiste. There was a girdle of soft satin in the shade of purple that matched the flowers. One will be quite safe in a style way if she combines figured crepe and plain white crepe. I have seen some lovely garments of this kind. One had the skirt of white and the tunic and Eton blouse of white embroidered in rose.

EXPLORATION :: :: :: By Michelson

EXPLORERS can never be sure as to what they will find. It is a gamble. If you are exploring in a canoe, and are feeling VERY lazy and comfortable, you may take a notion to shove the nose of the craft into a leafy nook, guard your bow with a paddle driven into the soft bed of the stream or lakelet, and drowse—and dream.

If you have been trout fishing and are changing your luck you may just HAPPEN to find a stranded craft. If you go softly enough, so that rustling leaves hide the sound of your approach, you may get very close without detection. But the GAME is to stumble upon the scene and "Beg your pardon!"

After that—oh, well! finish the story for yourself.

A lecture ought to be something which all can understand, about something which interests everybody. A lecture doesn't begin to be old until it has passed its 100th delivery, and some, I think, have doubled, if not quadrupled that number. These old lectures are a man's best, commonly; they improve by age, also. One learns to make the most of their strong points, and to carry off their weak ones, to take out the really good things which don't tell on an audience, and put in the cheaper things that do. All this degrades him, of course, but it improves the lecture for general delivery. A thoroughly popular lecture ought to have something in it which 500 people cannot all take in a flash, just as it is uttered.—O. W. Holmes.

Useful Hints for the Housewife

By Ann Marie Lloyd

If the edges of a saucepan are well buttered, the contents will not boil over.

When putting a stopper into a bottle always give it a half-turn round after it is in. This will prevent it from sticking.

It is a good plan to pepper a carpet thickly just where any heavy piece of furniture has to rest on it, as this helps to keep moths, etc., away.

The creaking of a door may be instantly stopped by rubbing the hinge with a piece of soap. It does not spoil the looks of the paint as if oil were used.

Directly tea is spilt on a tablecloth cover the stain with common salt. Leave it for a while, and when the cloth is washed all stains will have disappeared.

The reason that some marmalade will not jell is probably because it has not been boiled enough. Marmalade needs a great deal more boiling than jam. It requires from two and a half to three hours.

To keep a coffee-pot sweet put a tablespoonful of baking soda into it. Fill it two-thirds full of water and let it boil for an hour. Then rinse very thoroughly. If this is done about once a week the pot will always smell fresh and clean.

If a small piece of camphor is placed in a bowl or glass of water it will be found to float on the surface and when lighted will prove a good night-light, especially as camphor is a good disinfectant, and its smell not at all disagreeable.

To exterminate ants from the cupboard, wash the shelves, then dip a small paint brush in a little pure carbolic acid and smear along the edges of the shelves and bottom of the door. This will not leave an unpleasant odor and will drive the ants out.

To avoid danger in canned fruits after opening the tin, pour all the liquid into a saucepan and add a tablespoonful of castor sugar. Bring to the boil; then put in the fruit, and let it get cold in the syrup. It is then ready for use. By this process the danger of any tin flavor, etc., is destroyed, and it does not spoil the taste of the fruit.

To polish a black marble clock rub over with olive oil and finish with a clean chamois leather.

Varnished paper on walls should be cleaned with a flannel dipped in weak tea and polished with a dry cloth.

A simple, effective glue that is harmless, colorless and odorless can be made by adding ordinary tapioca to water and boiling.

When baking small cakes or buns, flour the tins instead of greasing them. The cakes will not stick to the tins, and will bake quite as well.

When plates and dishes have to be warmed in the oven, if a newspaper is placed underneath, it will break the heat and prevent the plates from cracking.

When making a fruit pie do not put the sugar on the top under the crust but mix it with the fruit below, otherwise it makes the crust heavy and is more liable to boil out.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

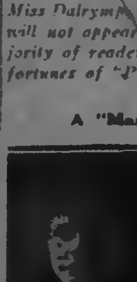
By Leona Dalrymple

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

No. [illegible]

A "Married" Speech.



LEONA DALRYMPLE

"YOU were very cranky last night," Mary said at breakfast.

I propped my newspaper against the sugar bowl and inquired why.

"Why?" said Mary, wide-eyed. "Dear me, didn't you go straight up into the air when I asked you why you were late?"

"It wasn't because you asked me," I said, "it was the way you asked me."

"What do you mean?"

"Well," I explained, "when I came in you looked at the clock and asked me in a married tone——"

"Peter! You do say the queerest things. What is a married tone?"

"A married tone," said I promptly, "is the kind you invariably adopt when I'm late. It sags in the centre and trails off into a conversational moan. After that you follow it up with a silence that fairly palpitates with reproach, and then we fight."

"Peter! I do wish you wouldn't be coarse. We never fight."

"Disagree, then. More coffee, if you please."

"Last night, Peter, after the dead voice, I—I lost my temper and that made you even madder than—than the married tone."

"No," I said, "it didn't. You said mother was selfish, and that did make me cross, for she isn't. As for the flash of temper, it's a good deal more human than the tone we've been speaking about."

"You mean you'd rather have me flash out that way? Why, Peter, I always try to control my temper and—and that's why sometimes I don't say anything at all."

"Well," I exclaimed, "I'd rather a hundred times have you flash out at me than to condemn me to a state of ostracism in which I wonder what in thunder is the matter with you. I can't and won't punch a time card, Mary. I don't ask you to account for every minute of delay and you shouldn't ask me. But when you have got anything on your mind, for heaven's sake, out with it and we'll have it over with in no time. When you retire into a shell of reproachful reserve, I'm in bad all evening and it makes me most unhappy."

"Last night," said Mary, "after you—you went up into the air, things did seem to come around all right, didn't they?"

"Of course," I agreed. "Now pass the rolls and read your paper, for I'm in a hurry."

Which was a married speech and I know it but the best of us make them.

What I said, however, to Mary I maintain is truth. It's much better not to bottle a married grievance up in your heart and grow quiet and brood. If you flash up in a wholesome way and air your grievance, the air is likely to clear as it does after a thunder shower. But if, when you're asked what the trouble is, you answer, with a deep, trouble-laden sigh, "Oh, nothing!" then you may be pretty sure there's an evening of unrest ahead of you. Every time you're asked what the trouble is, you feel morally obliged to stand by your guns and insist that there's nothing the matter. If you're not asked again, you sulk and see in that a new cause for grievance.

I'm going to make a quarrel resolution with Mary. When there's anything wrong, I'm going to suggest that we quarrel earnestly and exhaustively for ten minutes, then we'll shake hands and start life over again with all the resentment out of our systems.

Moreover, marriage is teaching me a lot. Hereafter I'm going to have the courage of my convictions. I'm going to state exactly what my opinions are and not keep them housed up merely out of a sense of mistaken chivalry. And I grant Mary a similar privilege. I'll respect her convictions if she'll respect mine. That's fair enough.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie:

I have been reading your advice to young girls and I think it very good. I would like to write you about something that has troubled me for some time.

I am a girl of 20 years old, and have to work as a stenographer. I am away from home. I used to go with a young man who is about three years my senior. We were engaged, but it was broken. He is very hard to get along with, and is always finding fault with everything I do or say. When we are with any one he always pouts and hasn't anything to say. This makes it very unpleasant for me, and I get very angry, but it doesn't do any good to talk to him.

One night we had a little disagreement and he broke the engagement without giving any reason, and I never asked him for one. About two months ago he called me up and wanted to go with me again. We have been together several times since, and he isn't like he used to be, only when we are in a crowd. If I want to do anything I have to beg him to do it, and if he wants me to go with him any place he gets very angry if I do not want to go.

What is the matter with him, and why does he act this way? I care just as much for him as I ever did, but I know if he acts that way after were are married I would not be happy and neither would he. But he still says he cares as much for me as he did when he broke our engagement.

BETH SMITH.

HONEST and true, girls, what do you really think about that letter and the sweet girl who wrote it? How in the world can she care anything for a queer creature like that?

There's nothing mysterious about him to my mind. He's just what my brother would call a grouch, that's all. He doesn't like the world or the people in it; he hates himself, and I guess he ought to; and so he takes it out on the girl he pretends to love. What that young man needs is a good sound thrashing, and I wish that "Beth Smith" had a good big brother to give it to him. He's stubborn and conceited and self-important and bossy and fault-finding and disagreeable, and how on earth he can expect any girl with a grain of sense to look at him I can't see. I'll warrant he's the son of a widow, and the only son at that, and he nags mother around and bosses sister at home, and they let him do it—and that's what's the matter with him.

Let him go on "caring for you," Beth Smith, as much as he likes; you get to caring for somebody else just as soon as you conveniently can. What he says isn't of the least importance; it is what he does that tells the truth about him, and a mighty disagreeable truth it seems to be.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care this office.

The Other Reason.

"You say you think he would make a good aeronaut. Is that because you think he is fly?"

"No, because he is usually up in the air."

No Cause for Hope.

"Remember," said the sympathizing friend, "that there are as good fish in the sea as were ever caught."

"There are better than I ever caught," answered the disconsolate one, "but I have no more bait."

Unintentional.

"Is he a liberal-minded man?"

"Well, he often gives himself away."

Done Easily.

Mertie—How did he propose to you?

Marie—Oh, casually.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

What Causes "Neuralgia;" Why Treatment Varies

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

MIGHTIER far than strength of nerve or sinew, says the poet, is love. Comes along now the savants of the laboratory to say that love is a flimsy, unstable, impenetrable thing, and nerves are strong enough to move mountains.

Be this as it may, they cannot bar love from the vigorous body or brace up the health without strong nerves.

When the pitchforks of the malignantly gleeful devils of "neuralgia" assail your fifth nerve, neither music nor the murmur of bees will lull you to sleep. Even grottoes shaded with green trees and hills covered with sheep offer no blandishments to the sufferer with "neuralgia."

Neuralgia is so dubbed from the Greek root neuron, a nerve, and algos, a pain. Even in pre-Aristotelian and Babylonian times, just as today, this cognomen was a veritable Joseph's coat to cover ignorance.

If there is any precise meaning at all to neuralgia, like that loose and much juggled absurdity, "rheumatism," it can be translated into pain.

A synonym, then, for neuralgia and for rheumatism is pain. Yet no sane person would presume to consider "pain" a definite malady.

Causes Are Many.

Notwithstanding this plainly apparent fact, ninety odd individuals in every hundred you meet are well content to say neuralgia, just as they are captivated and gladdened in the cockles of their distressed hearts at the meaningless name "rheumatism."

Various indeed are the sources and causes of so-called neuralgia. It is within the memory of young medical students, as well as old medical stagers, to have observed alleged "neuralgias" suddenly and unhappily materialise into, among other things:

1. Typhoid fever.
2. Nasal infections.
3. Mumps.
4. Tumors.
5. Tonsilitis.
6. Cancers.
7. Meningitis.
8. "Colds."
9. Alimentary disorders.
10. Mere constipation.
11. Tipsyness.
12. Overeating.

If you exclude the actual infections and inflammations of the white tissue cords called nerves—which is not improperly called neuritis—the variegated twinges, miseries, aches, pains and soreness called "neuralgia" may be the upshot of pressure upon the nerve or irritation from anemia, poisoning, strain, loss of sleep, gout, kidney distempers.

Even a broken bone, a mass of scar tissue, a swollen gland, a muscle spasm, a growth or the dislocation of a joint produce the torments known only too lightly as "neuralgia."

Treatments Differ.

Fatigue, excessive emotional outbursts, coffee, soups, beer and liquors generally, skin eruptions, tobacco, lead poisoning, illuminating gas poisoning, also those conditions of the human economy called "anaphylaxis," or "idiosyncrasies," all create tissue crises with pain.

These are termed gayly and smugly by writers "neuralgia."

Plainly it would be less than the better part of wisdom to treat an alleged "neuralgia" of the calf of the leg with the same potion or pill that is expected to alleviate the pangs of a "neuralgia" of the jaw. Yet remedies of the household are given indiscriminately to "cure" a neuralgic pain, be it in the face, in the foot or in the foramen ovale of the brain.

Evidently the dopes which thus dampen off the aches really relieve the twinges at the cost of correct diagnosis. Once a drug eliminates the signs which pave the way for a proper understanding of the underlying condition, no true light will be available.

Answers to Health Questions

Mrs. A. H.—Have a carbolic acid burn on my lip.

If this is a scar a skin graft can be transplanted to it and thus rid you of the blemish. If not, grease paints, such as actors use, or even harmless water colors, will not be improper or harmful.

* * *

M. C.—Unless I wear flannel underwear at night my upper limbs feel like ice. What is the cause?

The cause is the erroneous habit of coddling and pampering the skin with thick materials. Once begin, this must always be continued. You must stop it this summer and never again do so unless your health and organs are not sound.

* * *

C. D.—How can I gain weight and feel better. If I go to bed early I cannot sleep; digestion very poor.

Drink sour milks. Take charcoal and oxide of magnesia whenever you are anxious or feel bad.

Change your occupation, and work outside on a farm or in sunlight for two years. Play golf, swim, row, dance and eat a mixed diet. Chew all meats 50 chews before you swallow. Chew everything in proportion.

The Love-Life of the Birds

GENERALLY speaking, the social life of birds is of the happiest description. It often happens, as one famous naturalist has put it, that while some young human couple is pouring out their hearts to each other beneath the leaves of an apple tree, some feathered Romeo is making ardent love to his coy, coquettish Juliet in the branches above.

A clever student of bird life maintains that birds have a distinct social life of their own, which is full of interest to the careful observer. The most important feature of their life is that bird marriages are permanent, implying constancy in their affections, of which proof may be found everywhere.

Grief at the death of their mates is nearly always shown by birds, and some species mourn for what might seem an incredible length of time. They frequently return to the old haunts, flying about and calling as if they hoped to be able to find the lost one again. Another instance of the affection between them is the attention almost invariably shown by the male to the female while the latter is hatching the young brood. He brings her food, sings to her, and often shares the task of sitting on the eggs, thereby giving her an opportunity for rest.

Three Minute Journeys

Where the Queen of Sheba Once Ruled

By TEMPLE MANNING

THERE have been printed numerous stories recently about the death of King Menelik of Abyssinia. A new king is now supposed to be on the throne.

According to my knowledge, there should be plenty of news coming out of the almost inaccessible land of the Queen of Sheba. For Abyssinia may be torn by tribal wars; the kingdom may be utterly disrupted. It was the iron hand of Menelik alone that preserved peace. He alone brought his country to the attention of the world by reason of the many modern customs and inventions he imported from Europe.

The different tribes are in many respects children. They seem to be at play most of the time—at least in their everyday life and when in attendance at some royal festival. The man walks about with a gun in his hand and gets in anybody's way he can while doing so; the woman does all the work, gets into everybody's road while doing it, and has a few hours' conversation every time she achieves a collision. What time remains to waste is employed in drinking tadj. An hour or two of this pleasing occupation necessitates two or three hours repose in the nearest ditch.

The Abyssinian will not tell the truth if a lie will do. He is treacherous by instinct, vindictive, and with no apparent moral sense.

A friend of mine had two bottle washers, George and Jidwin. The latter was discovered stealing whiskey. Into one bottle was put some tartar emetic, and that night Jidwin suffered for his thefts.

The next evening George rushed into my friend's tent just as Jidwin was serving coffee. "Don't drink," he cried. "Make Jidwin drink it." The servants agreed that this was just, and the coffee was poured down the bottle washer's throat. The man was dead in five minutes.

The ardors of the journey and its manifold dangers turn the traveller from this spot in the old world. The way will be practically impossible now that King Menelik is no more.

How People Feel
When They Have
Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ½ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4830, or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

Steel Wheels for Motor Trucks

One of the most interesting developments in the steel casting business has been the increase in the use of steel wheels for motor trucks. Automobile engineers have turned their attention to steel because the high quality of wood required for truck wheels is being rapidly exhausted. Also, wood wheels cause a good deal of trouble by variation of size, and cannot be used successfully in very dry climates.

While the cast-steel wheel overcomes all of the above objections, it has the disadvantage of excessive weight, the development of cracks, and it is not resilient as wood.

ICELESS REFRIGERATOR

Keeps the Contents at a Desirable Temperature by Use of Water

The iceless refrigerator is not intended to put the ice man out of business, but is meant for service in localities not traversed by that august individual. This cooler consists of a stout wire mesh covered with an absorbent cotton cloth. The base and top are of metal, with provision made for accommodating a quantity of water. After this has been poured into the interior of the cooler it is conveyed to the cloth by means of several wicks, so that the cloth is always moist as long as there is water in the tank. The evaporation of this water on the exposed surface of the cloth causes the temperature to lower, so that the interior is maintained at a temperature of about 59 degrees, which is sufficient for a great many purposes.

REFRIGERATOR WITHOUT ICE.

VALUABLE FISHERIES

Many Fish Found in British Columbia Waters

The fisheries of British Columbia are the most valuable in the Dominion. Of the $35,000,000 worth of fish produced from all the Provinces in Canada in one year, this one contributed fish to the value of $14,000,000. Salmon, halibut and herring are the three chief varieties of fish which inhabit the waters of British Columbia.

The Fraser River, especially that section of it flowing through the lower mainland, contributes most liberally to the fisheries of the Province. The salmon pack in all parts of British Columbia in a year amounted to 996,576 cases, of which the lower mainland district, including the Province's largest canneries at New Westminster, contributed 178,921 cases, or almost twenty per cent. of the entire pack.

The fishing business on "the coast" is only in its infancy. The rivers of the northern part of the interior are practically unknown, so far as their fertility is concerned, and the fishermen on the coast are only beginning to realise the immense wealth which lurks in the numerous bays and inlets of the Pacific coast.

THE OWL TO FLOURISH

Bounty on Big Horned Species Removed in West

No more bounties will be paid by the British Columbia Government for the destruction of the big horned owl. This owl is supposed to be very destructive of game birds, and this may have been the case in the past, but the rabbits have now come back and the big horned owl finds himself once more in a land of plenty. As he is said to even prefer rabbit to grouse, there is no longer any particular object in having him destroyed.

The bounty, which was two dollars per owl, proved unexpectedly expensive, $18,000 being paid out in a few months. Some enterprising hunters are said to have made as much as a hundred and fifty or two hundred dollars a month from this source. Moreover, the government is convinced that a certain amount of fraud was practiced and that the harmless little horned owl has frequently been made to do duty for his big horned cousin at two dollars per head.

WHAT COAL CAN DO

Does anyone realize the power of coal as a worker? A man was set to work a pump as hard as he could all day, and at the end of ten hours it was found that he had done just as much work as a little less than 3 ounces of coal could do.

Taking all the energy put forth by a hard-working man during one whole year, the same amount of force would be furnished by 36 pounds of good coal —or, say, 40 pounds of average coal.

Of course, even in the best engines, the greater part of the working energy of coal is wasted. But even if only one-tenth is turned to account, 150 pounds of coal is equal to a man working for 300 days of the year.

A horse can do as much work as ten men, but 1½ pounds of coal has as much working force as a horse expends in one day. So that a ton of coal, if we could use all its force, would do as much work as six horses working for a whole year!

Pinhole Photography

For pinhole photography, any rectangular box that is absolutely light-tight will answer. In one end insert a very thin plate of metal, in which a minute hole has been made with the point of a needle, and at the other end place the sensitive plate. If you possess an ordinary camera you may remove the lens and replace it with the pinhole. A prolonged exposure is required, about twenty or thirty times the ordinary one for any given subject. No focussing is required, as the image is always fairly sharp, no matter what distance the plate is from the hole. The larger the plate the wider he angle, and the greater the distance between pinhole and plate the larger the image. Pleasingly soft effects of landscape subjects in particular may be obtained by means of the pinhole

Local Contractors Get Contract

The Toronto Globe announces that Mr. Richard Sheehy of Peterborough has secured the contract of a new Catholic Church, to be erected at the corner of Grace Street and Mansfield Avenue. It will be one of the finest churches in Toronto and will cost approximately $125,000. Mr. Sheehy has already begun the preliminary construction work.

Local Man in Narrow Escape.

Port Hope Guide: Morris McIntee, of Peterborougg, an employee of the Seymour Power Co., had a narrow escape from serious injury this morning. McIntee was working at the wires on Pine street when he removed the wrong plug. Both hands were severely burned and he was fortunate in being able to release his hands before seriously injured

To Beautify the City.

Owing possibly to the effects of a holiday, a well known local gentleman yesterday evening, was somewhat "Lit up." On Hunter Street he button-holed a Times scribe and quoth thusly: "Say Mr. Reporter, I was at that dinner of the local Beautification Society. Those people are right. There are too many trees in certain places in this town. Shay! look at those three trees across there! That centre one ought to be cut down."

She Feared a Shock.

Yesterday afternoon a lady of somewhat generous build was crossing over the newly laid street car tracks at the corner of George and Charlotte streets. Seeing the cable attached to the ties, she hesitated. A street car conductor was standing nearby. To him she said, "Mister! if I put a foot on them wires will I get a shock?" The conductor replied "No, Madam, unless at the same time your other foot touched the trolley wire!" She passed safely.

An Old Time Medal.

Mr. Arthur Stormie Taylor has returned to the city from Humboldt, Sask., where he has been for the past seven months. Mr. Taylor has joined the Maple Leaf band as base. Mr. Taylor came to this country 11 years ago with the Irish Guards band, in which he was euphorium player. This man served twenty-two years in the Imperial Service and has three medals i.e., two South African and a long service medal. There are seven bars on his "King's" medal! Mr. Taylor is now out of employment.

Water Commissioners Supreme.

The proposed reorganization of the engineering departments of the city was turned down by the Water Commissioners. Mayor Buller, and Aldermen Duncan, Anderson and Johnston waited on the commissioners for their final action. Mayor Buller submitted figures whereby the saving would be nearly three thousand dollars each year. However the Commissioners smiled down the representatives of the people. Mayor Buller said, "We are not going to run this place on village basis any more."

Followed the Wrong Tip.

A gentleman was yesterday asked by the Times: "Did you make any money at the Woodbine races"? The citizen replied: "No, I haven't bet a cent on the ponies for five years. You see, the day before the races in Toronto I found a new hat in the garden. Then my wife was given a new hat by her aunt. Next, my pup dog tore up my newly found hat. In the second race was a horse called "Cocked Hat." I thought my experiences with hats was a hunch. I bet $50 on "Cocked Hat." This horse led at the three quarter stretch but was won by a horse called "Sombrero" I never had any luck at betting."

Sunny Jim Wilson's Mule Stolen

Now gentle reader this story is not trifling persiflage or a joke. It is only too true! Sunny Jim Wilson's mule, (and who does not know it?), whilst out at pasture at the expense of its owner has been stolen. The miscreant has not yet been located. It is, however, suspected that a scout from the metropolitan opera House, New York, has annexed and smuggled away that mule for its voice. International complications may follow should such a sweet singer of Canada be feloniously abducted. Still, the plans are working in two local theories. One is that the mule bit into a can of dynamite mistaking it for canned corn and thus departed. The other is that this warbler simply walked out between two pickets on the fence. Its owner is offering $158,-000.10 for return of the mule in suitable condition.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Jean Baptiste Tapp.

Quebec Man Who Suffered from Kidney Disease for Years Is Again a Robust, Healthy Man.

L'Anse-a-Valleau, Gaspe Co., Que. May 26 (Special).—"I am happy to tell you Dodd's Kidney Pills made me well." So says Jean Baptiste Tapp, a well known and highly respected resident of this place. And so thankful is Mr. Tapp for the benefits he has received from Dodd's Kidney Pills that he wants the whole world to know it. He wants others who suffer as he did to know the cure.

"For many years I suffered from kidney disease," Mr. Tapp says "It started from a cold, and gradually grew worse. My skin had a harsh dry feeling, my appetite was fitful and I perspired freely with the slightest exertion. I had flashes of light before my eyes and I was always tired and nervous.

"Finally rheumatism was added to my troubles while attacks of sciatica and neuralgia followed. The doctor who attended me and the medicines I tried failed to help me till I decided to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. I took four boxes in all and to-day I am a robust man in excellent health."

All Mr. Tapp's troubles came from sick kidneys. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills cured them.

Best Liniment of All Destroys Every Pain But Never Burns

"How thankful we are to get hold of such a wonderful household remedy as Nerviline," writes Mrs. E. P. Lamontagne from her home near Wetaskawin, Alberta. "In this far-away section, far away from a doctor or druggist, every family needs a good supply of liniment. Nerviline is the best of all. It destroys every pain, but never burns. We use Nerviline in a score of ways. If it's rheumatism, aching back, pain in the side, sciatica or stiff neck, you can laugh at them if you have lots of Nerviline handy. For earache, toothache or cramps I don't think anything could act more quickly. For a general all-round pain remedy I can think of nothing more valuable and speedy to cure than Nerviline."

The above letter is convincing—it tells how reliable and trusty this old-time remedy is. Nerviline for forty years has been a household word in Canada. Scarcely a home in Canada you can find without Nerviline. Every community has its living examples of the wonderful curative properties of Nerviline which will cure pains and aches anywhere in the joints or muscles! It's penetrating, soothing, to use. Get the large 50c., family size warming and safe for young and old bottle; it's the most economical. Small trial size 25c. at any dealers anywhere.

A POSSIBLE CANDIDATE

The Times has been informed that a "dark horse" may appear in the political field as Liberal candidate for the Ontario Legislature, in the person of Mr. J. J. Hartley. Mr. Hartley is regarded as a fairly strong man by many Liberals. His effort to gain the Mayor's chair last January, and the substantial vote which he polled in the three-cornered fight, shows him to be popular with a large portion of the city electorate.

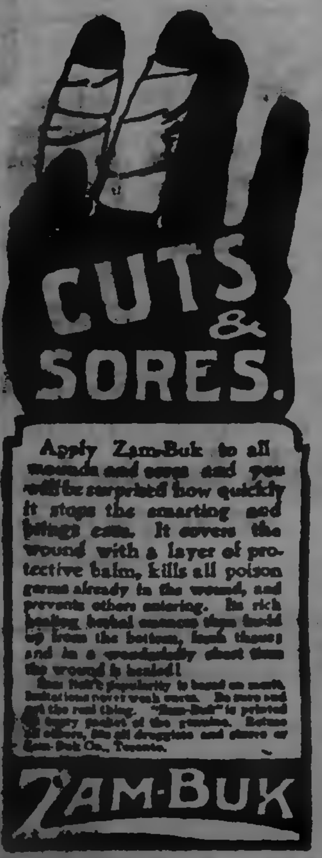
Moscow's Silent Club

It seems that there is in real life a club similar to one imagined by Sir Conan Doyle in his Sherlock Holmes' stories. The Moscow Prefecture confirmed the statutes of a club in that city, the chief feature of which is the absolute silence imposed on its members within the club precincts. Any infraction of this cardinal rule involves a monetary penalty. The club is well appointed and luxuriously equipped. It is furnished with billiards, chess, cards, and other games. Gesture is the only medium of intercourse among its members. The same rigid regulation obtains at the club buffet and in the dining-room, as well as in the library and general rooms. Orders are conveyed to the silent waiters by means of tablets they carry.

Glycerine For the Lips

While glycerine is extremely bad for the complexion it is quite the best, most inexpensive, and harmless form of lip salve, and without giving the artificial appearance to the lips which an ordinary salve does, keeps them soft and prevents cracking.

Women who habitually wear a veil should never omit to smear a very little glycerine over the lips before going out, as the wearing of a veil often causes the lips to become rough and chapped, especially in windy weather.



CUTS & SORES.

Apply Zam-Buk to all wounds and sores and you will be surprised how quickly it stops the smarting and brings ease. It covers the wound with a layer of protective balm, kills all poison germs already in the wound, and prevents others entering. Its rich healing herbal essences then build up from the bottom, fresh tissues and in a wonderfully short time the wound is healed!

Zam-Buk's popularity is based on merit. Imitations never reach ours. Be sure and get the real thing. "Zam-Buk" is printed on every packet of the genuine. Refuse all others. 50c all druggists and stores or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

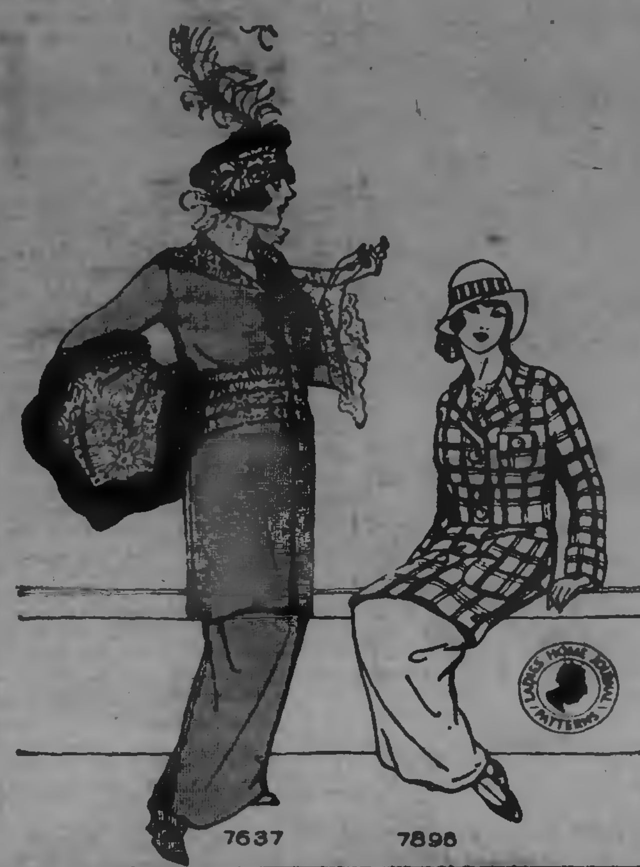
MUNICIPAL FORMS ALWAYS IN STOCK



THE SPORTS COAT OF PLAID IS PRACTICAL AND BECOMING

The easy lines of the fashionable, uncorseted figure lend a greater charm to the graceful Russian blouse, with its long tunic and wide sash or girdle. Velour fabrics, duvetyn or peau de peche in soft shades of blue, brown or green are perhaps the most favored for suits of this description.

The costume shown in 7637 is developed in green duvetyn with girdle and collar of a daintily colored, Oriental satin. This is a suit that is dressy enough to meet the demands of almost any day-time affair.

To make this suit (7637) in size 36 it requires 5½ yards of 42 inch material.

A few short seasons ago the garment called sports coats was unknown. It is now almost a necessity in the wardrobe.

It matters not how much too large these coats are, the looser the better. They are belted in with a not over wide belt or one that comes down over the hips, as earlier in the season, but with a smart girdle that lends chic and is not clumsy. Plaids and the brighter shades of the soft, wooly fabrics are popular. The huge pockets are an attractive feature of many of these coats.

This design may be made in size 16 with 3 yards of 42 inch material.

PREYS ON MOSQUITOES

Queer Insect From China May Exterminate the Pests

Scientists are preparing to spread broadcast the results of investigations and [illegible] made in breeding the Praying mantis to get rid of mosquitoes. [illegible] big bug comes originally from China and occasionally made trips to more enlightened countries [illegible] to Chinese plants. It was found that he and his family are decidedly fond of mosquitoes and are specially built for catching and eating them.

The mantis is a member of the grasshopper family and grows to a length of from 2 to 3 inches. The forelegs are well adapted for holding the captured mosquito, as they are provided with sawlike teeth.

The insect gets its name from the fact that its forelegs are folded under in an attitude of prayer.

BULLETS THAT DRUG

A Soldier Hit by One Goes Painlessly to Sleep

A new kind of bullet, known as the "narcotic bullet," is now being experimented with. A minute particle of morphia is used, and the drug is carried in tiny wells in the steel jacket of the regulation army bullet. The inventor claims that it in no way interferes with the effectiveness of the missile. The slight indentation in the steel jacket causes no splintering when it comes in contact with the bone, and no deleterious effects will follow the unique administration of the drug.
